BROKERS CONVICTED OF $4,000,000 STOCK FRAUD

W. S. Silkworth, Ex-Head of Consolidated Stock Exchange, and Operators Convicted by U. S. Jury.

FIRM BUCKETED PATRONS' ORDERS

Federal Prosecutor Calls Three Jurors After Reports of Alleged Tampering Via the Telephone Are Received.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—William Silkworth, former president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, was convicted tonight in the United States District Court of the charge of using the mails to defraud.

Convicted with Silkworth are Maxine J. Nicholas and Earl Truesdell, partners with De Witt C. Raynor in the defunct brokerage firm of Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdell; Curtis Gilbough, floor broker on the Consolidated Exchange for the firm and a former member of the Ways and Means Committee of the Exchange; Edward A. McQuade and Francis X. Quillan, members of the former curb brokerage firm of McQuade Bros. & Quillan.

The jury was out nine hours.

C. Peter Owens, who was office manager for Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdell, was acquitted.

Clemency Urged for Three.

The jury recommended clemency for Nicholas, Truesdell and Gilbough.

At the request of Peter J. McCoy, assistant United States Attorney, who conducted the prosecution, Judge Augustus N. Hand, who presided at the trial, set Wednesday for sentence and motions.

Before the jury was dismissed, McCoy requested Judge Hand to instruct three jurors to call on him Monday. McCoy did not divulge the reason for this unusual request. But earlier in the day, it was reported, that three jurors had been called on the telephone at their homes.

Trial of the defendants was continued until Wednesday.

Silkworth and the co-defendants each was indicted on 15 counts, and each count carries from one year to five years in prison and a fine of $2000. However, sentence on more than one count in a case where the counts parallel is said to be without precedent.

Nicholas Expelled From Exchange.

Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdell, one of the largest firms in the membership of the Consolidated Exchange, failed for approximately $4,000,000, Feb. 29, 1922, when creditors petitioned it into voluntary bankruptcy. The previous day Nicholas had been expelled from membership in the Consolidated Exchange.

A series of referee's hearings began immediately developed that the firm had been bucketing virtually 100 per cent of its customers' orders, operating through at least half a dozen minor brokerage houses. Witnesses testified the greater part of the bucketing was done through the firm of McQuade Brothers & Quillan.

During the referee's hearings a nation-wide search was begun for Raynor, senior member of the firm, from whom several persons had received letters, in which he assumed responsibility for the failure. He was not found, however, before the case had been turned over to District Attorney Hayward on evidence that extensive use had been made of the mails in schemes to defraud investors.

Assured Firm Was Solvent.

Silkworth's alleged connection with the others involved also was developed at the referee's hearings, when witnesses testified that the Consolidated Exchange had sent out letters to prospective customers of the Raynor firm, assuring them that the house was not only solvent but thoroughly trustworthy.

Indictments Voted Against 9.

On Feb. 28, 1922, the Federal grand jury returned indictments against a half dozen of the defendants, but these were disposed

PRIZE FOR TWO-SOLUTION CROSS-WORD PUZZLE IS OFFERED AT PRINCETON

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29. THE cross-word puzzle wave has swept across faculty and students of Princeton University to the department of philosophy, where Prof. Warner Fite has offered a prize to the student who can devise a puzzle capable of two separate solutions. Such a problem, Prof. Fite asserts, would have a great psychological value.

Prof. Robert K. Root of the English department recently announced his willingness to adopt the puzzles as part of the term work in some of his courses, provided someone could be found to construct puzzles sufficiently difficult for the test at the end of the term.

President Silent Throughout Great Army-Navy Game

Entirely Reserved and Uncommunicative as Teams Battle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Whatever President Coolidge thought of the army's 12 to 0 victory over the Navy in Baltimore today he kept locked up in his own mind, and his conduct during the gridiron strife permitted none about him to judge his opinion of football. He went through the four quarters without a word.

It was generally accepted among his friends that he took to baseball better, for he could not suppress the evidences of pleasure during the exciting moments of the world's series. But he reverted to form at the Baltimore stadium while the two service teams battled back and forth and was entirely reserved and uncommunicative.

The President, with Mrs. Coolidge and a number of guests, made the trip to Baltimore and return by automobile, leaving at 11 o'clock this morning and arriving back at the White House at 6:15 this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and their friends had lunch at the stadium and walked onto the field five minutes before the game started.

President and Mrs. Coolidge sat with the Navy rooters through the first half. They were met by Admiral Henry D. Wilson, superintendent of the naval academy, and escorted to their box, while Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns of Boston occupied seats with the West Point cheerers. During the intermission President and Mrs. Coolidge walked across the field, accompanied half way by Secretary Wilbur, Admiral Edward W. Eberle, chief of naval operations, and Admiral Wilson.

Midfield they were met by Secretary Weeks, Major-General John L. Hines, Chief of Staff, and Major-General Fred W. Slayden, superintendent of the military academy, who escorted them to their box with the Army. Mr. and Mrs. Stearns moved across and sat in the seats President and Mrs. Coolidge had occupied with the Navy.

CALLES BECOMES HEAD OF MEXICAN REPUBLIC TODAY

Succeeds President Obregon at Ceremony at Noon in National Stadium, Marking Epoch in Country.

PLEDGED TO AID WORKING CLASSES

New Executive Approves Agrarian Policy of His Predecessor and Welcomes Foreign Capital.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—Peaceful transmission of the presidency by Gen. Alvaro Obregon to Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles at noon tomorrow, in the National Stadium, will mark an epoch, unique in many respects, in the hectic history of Mexico.

Not only will Obregon have completed his term of four years, a feat equaled by only five of his nearly 40 predecessors in the last 100 years, but he will have enabled his successor peacefully to grasp the reins of government. That has been accomplished only once before in Mexican history.

It was on Oct. 10, 1824, that the first President of the United States of Mexico, Gen. Guadalupe Victoria, was inaugurated and held office four years. But his successor, Gen. Manuel Gomez Pedrasa, was forced to resign before he even was inaugurated. From that time until Benito Juarez, conqueror of Emperor Maximilian, died in 1872, the story of the Mexican presidency is spangled as thickly with the names of Generals who became chief executive for a time as it is with coups d'etat.

Obregon Only Precedent.

After Juarez, Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada served out his term, but was overthrown when he tried for re-election. Then Gen. Porfirio Diaz appeared. He, with Gen. Manuel Gonzales, set Obregon's only precedent. Diaz abandoned the national palace for Gonzales and the latter, in 1885, returned the favor.

There is a strange similarity between the first Diaz administration and that of Obregon. Both reached the presidency by the battlefield route after the country had been rent by internal strife. Diaz, by seating Gonzales, virtually remained in power, because Gonzales was only a figurehead. But Obregon leaves Calles, a man who by no stretch of the imagination can be compared to Diaz' puppet. Mexico is wondering if history will repeat itself. After a four-year vacation, Diaz virtually reigned from 1885 to 1911.

Aside from its historical significance, Obregon's administration has been fraught with events of far-reaching importance to the nation. Elected after a revolutionary movement, in which he was the guiding spirit, had resulted in the overthrow and assassination of President Venustiano Carranza, Obregon followed Adolfo de la Huerta, who had been selected by Congress as ad interim President. With Obregon and Calles, de la Huerta had formed the "Sonora Triumvirate," and it was generally expected that Calles would succeed Obregon. De la Huerta failed to change that program, if ever such an agreement had existed, by his unsuccessful revolution of Dec. 6, 1923.

Virtually Pacified Country.

During the last four years Obregon has displayed great energy in solving military and international problems. Personally leading the Federal armies, he crushed the De la Huerta revolt in a four-months' campaign and since has virtually pacified the country. Not only has he reorganized and re-equipped the army, but he has made progress in disarming the undisciplined agrarian and labor regiments he called to his aid during the revolt, in addition to reducing the regular army from approximately 80,000 to 55,000 officers and men.

His record in handling international questions has been marked by force and decision. Diplomatic relations have been resumed with the United States and Soviet Russia, but suspended with Venezuela and Great Britain. The break with England caused even less of a sensation in Mexico than did the expulsion of Monsignor Ernesto Filippi, papal nuncio, for alleged participation in illegal open-air religious ceremonies.

Under Obregon's leadership,

42 PATIENTS ARE REMOVED SAFELY IN HOSPITAL FIRE

Blaze Confined to One Ward on Fifth Floor of Alexian Brothers Institution.

ATTRIBUTED TO DROPPED MATCH

Insane and Nervous Disease Patients in Section Where Flames Originated Shortly After Midnight.

Fire was discovered at 12:05 a. m. today (Sunday) in a fifth-floor ward of Alexian Brothers' Hospital, 3933 South Broadway, the ward being occupied by 42 men, insane and suffering from nervous disorders.

All the patients were removed to another ward, without casualties. Shortly before 1 o'clock, the fire was believed to be under control.

There are about 200 patients in the entire hospital. The disturbance caused by the fire was confined to the one ward, which is at the south end of the building.

An attendant discovered the fire, which is believed to have been started through the careless use of matches by some patient. There is a strict rule against smoking or the use of matches, but there are occasional evasions.

All the 42 men in the ward were able to walk, and while some showed considerable alarm, no panic attended the removal of the patients.

The fire spread to the roof of the building and was fought by firemen standing on other parts of the roof and on ladders. Two alarms were given.

The hospital, which was founded more than 50 years ago, is devoted to the care of men, and the care of insane, nervous and alcoholic patients has been a specialty.

The complaint was filed after Mrs. A. Morthy, also of Sargent, made a deposition that she and Brunner had taken an automobile trip this fall, visiting several Colorado points.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—William Cooper Hobbs, one of the "big three' conspirators in the Indian potentate blackmail case, was sent to prison without bail today on the charge of "having received a check for £150,000 (approximately $750,000) which had been stolen abroad." He was arrested last night at Gravesend as he was boarding a channel boat for Holland.

"I'm not guilty of these charges," Hobbs said indignantly as he was being booked.

The warrant on which he was arrested is directed also against "another person" who, according to reports, is Capt. Arthur Reads, aide de camp to the Indian Prince whose identity was shielded during the recent trial under the name "Mr. A."

Issuance of the warrant, it is explained was "for that they, on Dec. 27, 1919, did, without lawful excuse, knowing the same (the check for 150,000 pounds) to have been stolen and obtained in such circumstances that if it had been committed in the United Kingdom, the person committing it would have been guilty of felony or misdemeanor, receive and have in their possession a banker's check and order for the payment of 150,000 pounds, the same having been stolen or obtained in France."

Still Shielding Rajah.

There is much mystery as to the next stage in the proceedings. It is still desired to shield the Indian Rajah, so none of the six in the case will be charged with blackmail. The authorities believe Hobbs can be prosecuted without bringing in the identity of the Rajah or the question of blackmail, and Robinson is expected to testify against Hobbs.

Capt. Reads, recently reported in Mexico, is now believed to have returned to Europe. Whether extra-

CITY CLUB PLANS FLASKLESS PARTY NEW YEAR'S EVE

Dinner Dance on Strict Prohibition Lines to Be Held by the Organization.

A flaskless New Year's eve party is planned by the City Club. A dinner dance on strict prohibition lines is to be held and liquor will not be allowed in the dining room.

SIGNED RECEIPT AND RELEASE ON MARCH 22, 1923

Copies of Acknowledgment, Signed by Young Woman, Who Seeks to Break Will Made Public.

MADE BEFORE HER NEW YORK ATTORNEY

Documents in Hands of Marion C. Early to Be Used in Suit Attacking Washington U. Bequest.

Rosalind Kendall Wainwright, now suing to break the will of Ellis Wainwright and claiming his entire estate of $800,000 or more, as his legally adopted daughter, accepted $75,000 from Wainwright March 22, 1923, and signed a release of all claims against his estate.

Copies of the young woman's receipt for the $75,000, and of duplicate forms of the release, one signed "Rosalind Kendall" and the other signed "Rosalind Kendall Wainwright, were made public last night by Marion C. Early, attorney for the executors named in Wainwright's will.

As has been told, the adoption of Miss Kendall by Wainwright took place in New York in October, 1922, six months after he had made his will, in which Washington University is named as the chief beneficiary. On March 1, 1923, Wainwright made a codicil to his will, stating that he did not wish her, by reason of the adoption or for any other reason, to share in his estate.

Text of Receipt and Release.

Three weeks after making the codicil, Attorney Early said, the young woman, in the presence of her New York attorney, Louis H. Strauss, signed this receipt:

Received from Ellis Wainwright the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars ($75,000) in full of all claims against the said Ellis Wainwright.

Dated March 22, 1923.

ROSALIND KENDALL WAINWRIGHT.

The release, executed on the same date and witnessed before a notary public by the young woman's lawyer, is as follows:

To all to whom these presents shall come or may concern. Greeting: Know ye, that I, Rosalind Kendall, for and in consideration of the sum of $1 and other good and valuable considerations, lawful money of the United States of America, to me in hand paid by Ellis Wainwright, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have remised, released, and forever discharged, and by these presents do for myself, my heirs, executors and administrators, remise, release and forever discharge the said Ellis Wainwright, his heirs, executors and administrators, of and from all, and all manner of action or actions, cause and causes of action, suit, debts, dues, sums of money, accounts, reckoning, bonds, bills, specialties, covenants, contracts, controversies, agreements, promises, variances, trespasses, damages, judgments, extents, executions, claims and demands whatsoever, in law or in equity, which against Ellis Wainwright I ever had, now have or which my heirs, executors, or administrators, hereafter can, shall or may have for, upon or by reason of any matter, cause or thing whatsoever from the beginning of the world to the day and date of these presents.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the 22d day of March in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three. (Signed)

SUDAN QUIET AGAIN AFTER MUTINEERS SURRENDER

Rebellion of Native Battalions at Khartum Was More Serious Than First Reported.

MANY CASUALTIES IN BOMBARDMENT

Students' Agitation Gives Concern but New Egyptian Premier Is Trying to Quell Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Additional news of the Khartum mutiny from official reports shows that it was much more serious than at first appeared and entailed numerous casualties in the confused fighting which followed Acting Sirdar Huddleston's courageous, but ineffectual, facing of the armed mutineers and his attempt to reason with them before giving the order to overpower them.

There are still no precise details of the motives for the mutiny, but there appears to have been no repetition or extension of it. According to the latest advices, both Egypt and the Sudan remain tranquil. The students' agitation, however, is still threatening, and all efforts by the authorities to pacify them are fruitless.

Have No Ammunition.

Official quarters profess no anxiety that anything serious may arise in the Sudan, despite the comparative smallness of the British garrison, because the Sudanese troops are allowed only small supplies of ammunition and could not carry out a serious revolt unless they obtained supplies surreptitiously.

As far as Khartum itself is concerned, any uprising would be easily suppressed because the layout of the streets—very wide, straight avenues—lends itself to effective military fire.

Ziwar Pasha and his government appear to be doing their utmost to circumscribe the trouble and aid the British authorities in effecting a peaceable settlement and, with this intention, Ziwar has even risked trouble with the Egyptian Parliament over the question of parliamentary immunity in the case of those Deputies arrested on suspicion.

It is becoming evident that, when the British Parliament assembles, the opposition parties, while lending general support to the Government policy of maintaining British rights as against the aspirations of the Egyptian nationalists, will urge the Government to seek a mandate for British administration of the Sudan from the League of Nations and submit to the same authority the question of appointing a mixed commission to regulate the supply of Nile water to Egypt.

SHELL FIRE ENDS SUDANESE REVOLT; 60 CASUALTIES

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 29.—The surviving mutineers at Khartum have given in to the British, it was officially announced here this afternoon.

The mutiny among the troops was confined to two platoons of the Eleventh Sudanese and the mutineers who survived surrendered after a bombardment of the compound of the Egyptian army hospital. Two British officers were

The students' committee yesterday published a manifesto declaring its opposition to the present Egyptian Government and calling the attention of all classes of the people to a rumor that efforts are being made to form a new party "which will recognize the acts of the aggressors."

The students urge that the entire nation pursue a policy of non-co-operation. They themselves have decided to remain on strike.

It is reported that airplane reconnaissances have been made over the towns of Minieh, on the Nile, 150 miles southwest of Cairo, and Beni Suef, an important port on the Nile 62 miles southwest of Cairo. At both places the police are protecting the banks of European establishments.

The official announcement today stated that the situation at Khartum was well in hand.

The mutineers at Khartum, it is stated, sustained about 60 casualties.

The mutiny started on the evening of Nov. 27, when two platoons of the Eleventh Battalion became insubordinate and started to march on Gordon College, in the center of the town. The mutineers had several rounds of ammunition. Each had commandeered two machine guns.

The mutinous troops were met in the streets in front of the British army hospital by two platoons of British troops. An officer of the latter force attempted unsuccessfully to persuade the rebels to obey orders.

A black officer, speaking for the mutineers, threatened to use their guns unless they were allowed to march on.

Adjutant-General Huddleston, the acting Sirdar, eventually came up and addressed the rebels in the face of their guns, commanding them to obey his orders.

A voice speaking in Arabic answered that the mutineers refused to recognize the Sirdar, and when another refusal to obey commands had been uttered, the Sirdar ordered the British troops to clear the street.

When this was attempted, fighting started, the rebels rushing into the hospital, and heavy firing from both sides went on for a short while. Finally most of the mutineers were forced into various rooms of the hospital, and when their ammunition had given out they were captured.

It is not clearly explained how the casualties on either side actually occurred.

Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, the Secretary of State for War, is keeping in close contact with the Foreign Office. It is understood this is with reference to the recent events in the Sudan and the position of affairs in Egypt.

British Won't Brook Interference, Says Cabinet Member.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Neville Chamberlain, Health Minister and brother of the British Foreign Secretary, in a speech today uttered what some interpret as a threat of war against any foreign Power that objects to British actions in Egypt.

Chamberlain's words are significant, for under a Tory, as well as a Liberal, tradition—now reverted to after it had been ignored by the Labor ministry—any public utterance by a Cabinet Minister is understood as an official expression of the whole Cabinet.

Speaking at the Empire-Unionist Carnival in Birmingham, the Health Minister said:

"Any suggestion that what has happened in Egypt is merely a veiled attempt to destroy the independence which we gave Egypt some time ago is founded either on misunderstanding or deliberate misrepresentation.

"Nothing is more likely to lead this country into friction and war with other powers than to allow them to think we do not mean what we say—that it is not aggression. We are not going to allow tolerance or leniency on our part to be misrepresented as weakness.

"We are not going to allow British officers to be murdered with impunity. We are not going to allow obligations which are due to us to be flouted. That being said, we desire to maintain friendly relations with all the world. It is only by a mixture of firmness and restraint that we can restore confidence and order in all the King's dominions.

Death Ends Career Of Giacomo Puccini, Premier Composer

Author of "Madame Butterfly" and Other Operas Fails to Rally After Operation for Throat Infection.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 29.—Italy's premier operatic composer, Giacomo Puccini, died here today. He came to Brussels a short time ago to undergo radium treatment for a malignant growth in the throat, but his strength gradually gave out and his heart was unable to bear the burdens put upon it by the infection.

While the attending physicians had expressed hope for a full recovery, it was known to them Friday that his recovery was impossible. At the time of his death, his son and his daughter were at the bedside, but his wife had been compelled to remain at Milan, owing to illness.

The last operation on Puccini's throat was carried out Tuesday; it consisted of a three-hour application of radium, and the effects seemed to be beneficial. But the heart, which had not been functioning satisfactorily, became weaker on the following days, and death was due directly to a cardiac attack.

Italian Government to Defray All Funeral Expenses.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 29.—Although the gravity of Puccini's illness was known to all Rome, the news of his death seemed unexpected. There is deep grief throughout Italy, as of the three modern great Italian composers he was the most popular and most prolific.

While Puccini was dying his "Madame Butterfly" was being triumphantly produced at the Costanzi Theater here. His death prevents the completion by him of his latest opera "Turandot."

The Italian Government has decided that the State shall defray the expenses of Puccini's funeral. Premier Mussolini telegraphed the Italian Ambassador at Brussels today imparting this decision and instructing him to represent the Government at the ceremonies.

Signor Hotte, President of the Senate only a week ago notified Puccini the Senate had ratified him for membership in that House. It is remarked as a strange coincidence that the two most prominent figures chosen by Premier Mussolini to become Senators—Puccini and the illustrious omanist, Vilfredo Pareto—both died before taking their seats.

The Epoca in commenting on the death of Puccini says "the pen has fallen from the hand of the great composer, leaving only a few pages of his last opera unfinished. This should be taken up by his brother in art, Toscanini, who has already rendered the same service in concluding Boite's "Nero."

Passing of Composer Meant Great Loss, Serafin Says.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Giacomo Puccini, the Italian composer who died in Brussels today, is mourned by New York's many musicians and music lovers, not a few of who knew him well.

Tullio Serafin, Metropolitan Opera conductor, who is in his first season here, said that Puccini's passing meant a great loss because he was "the composer of the present and because he understood the theater best."

"I knew him for many years," Serafin continued. "I conducted his 'Madame Butterfly' in its second performance and the first performance at the La Scala Opera of his 'Girl of the Golden West.' He was not only a great maestro, but a warm personal friend and a man loved by all who knew him. His passing is not merely a national loss to Italians—it is a universal loss."

Madame Frances Alda, opera

COMPOSER DEAD.

GIACOMO PUCCINI.

star and wife of Giulio Gatti-Casazza general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, also mourned Puccini as a personal friend.

"I think," she said, "he was the greatest of living Italian composers and that he did more for Italian music since the death of Verdi than any other man."

As a tribute to the dead composer the audience at the Metropolitan Opera House tonight stood while the orchestra played Chopin's funeral march. The opera was "La Boheme," one of Puccini's most popular compositions.

Hearing "Aida" Was Turning Point in His Career.

Giacomo Puccini was regarded as the foremost Italian operatic composer of our day, as the successor of Verdi, if there is any. While Mascagni and Leoncavallo each have one successful short opera to their credit, Puccini is represented in the repertory of the modern opera house by four large works: "Manon Lescaut," "La Boheme," "La Tosca" an "Madame Butterfly." Other operas, less triumphant, include "Lea Villi," "Edgar," "La Rondine" and "La Fanciulla del West."

Puccini was born at Lucca, Italy, on June 22, 1858. In his youth he was a disappointment to everyone. He failed in his classes at school. He failed when an uncle tried to make a singer of him. Even "Madame Butterfly" failed at its initial performance.

He had a mother who, believing in him against all evidence, pinched and slaved that he might have musical training. He passed through the hands of several teachers, who could do nothing with him. He got a job as organist, but promptly lost it through his penchant for weaving popular operatic airs into the solemn musical service.

The turning point came when he heard a performance of "Aida," which fired him to become an operatic writer. It was necessary to go to Milan for two years' study, and there was no money. His indomitable mother contrived to obtain an interview with Queen Margherita, who advanced the requisite funds. Arriving at Milan, Puccini ran true to form by failing ignominiously to pass the entrance examination to the conservatory. But he settled down to work, and next year surpassed every applicant. His teacher in composition was the famous Amilcare Ponchielli, composer of "La Gioconda."

Puccini was renowned as a creator of broad-winged and sensuous melody, and for impassioned power or orchestral writing. Many of the airs from "Madame Butterfly," "La Boheme" and "La Tosca" are household possessions among singers.

BRINDELL, NEW YORK'S EX-LABOR BOSS, PAROLED

Release of Former Head of Building Trades Council, Convicted of Extortion, Ordered Dec. 26.

REMOVED FROM SING SING FOR BREACH

Indicted for Perjury While in Prison—Union Switch to Davis Alleged Due to Promise to Grant Pardon.

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Robert P. Brindell, former head of the New York Building Trades Council, has been ordered paroled from Great Meadow prison, where he is serving a sentence for extortion, it was learned at Sing Sing prison today. Brindell's parole becomes effective Dec. 26.

The Parole Board, it was learned, acted in Brindell's case Nov. 19, the day before it authorized the parole of William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, who was convicted of third-degree forgery.

May Be 'Walking Delegate.'

James L. Long, State Superintendent of Prisons and a member of the board, said that no restrictions had been placed upon Brindell to prevent him from again becoming a "walking delegate" of a labor union, the post he was alleged to have used for private profit.

"The job of walking delegate is a legitimate one," Long said. "We did not ask that he agree not to take such a position."

When he is paroled, Brindell will have served three years, eight months and 23 days. He entered Sing Sing April 4, 1921, to begin a sentence of five to ten years imposed by Supreme Court Justice McAvoy, after his conviction on an extortion charge.

In Solitary Confinement.

Brindell was placed in solitary confinement when Warden Lewis E. Lawes discovered him in conversation with members of his family outside the prison walls May 27, 1923. The next day he was transferred to Clinton prison at Dannemora, N. Y. A keeper who acted as "lookout" for Brindell was dismissed and Brindell was given 30 days at hard labor.

Brindell was indicted June 8, 1923, by the Federal grand jury for perjury alleged to have been committed in Sing Sing June 10, 1921. He was accused of stating in his 1921 income tax return that his income in 1920 was $21,287 and his tax $1358, whereas the reported income was $108,680 and the tax $36,366.

Charged Political Deal.

On Oct. 31, last, Norman Thomas, Socialist nominee for Governor of New York, said he had received a report "to the effect that the action of the Building Trades Council in indorsing John W. Davis and Gov. "Al" Smith was based on a promise of a pardon for Brindell as a Christmas present."

After a few months' internment at Clinton prison, Brindell was transferred to Great Meadow prison at Comstock, N. Y. Since prisoners sent to Clinton for punishment usually remain until their term has been served, the transfer caused considerable comment among prisoners and prison employes.

Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League. It follows:

By SIR ERIC DRUMMOND, Secretary-General of the League of Nations.

(Copyright, 1924.)

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—From the commencement of the League of Nations, but increasingly last year, requests for league intervention and protests against the action of various governments have been received from a great number of organizations, political parties and minority groups. As the league is an offical agency of the governments, based on the theory of complete national sovereignty, it has been found essential to establish certain general rules regarding petitions and protests in order that the league might not be carried outside proper competence.

Among these is the provision that such protests are distributed automatically to the states and members of the league only if they come from some government through regular channels, although certain exceptions, as under minorities and treaties, are possible.

The Egyptian protest was apparently a circular telegram sent by the Egyptian lower house to the other parliaments and to the league, and it did not therefore fall within the limits set.

As, however, the address given was not clear, i. e., the telegram was addressed to the Secretary-General, but began "Mr. President"—the text was forwarded to M. Hymans, president of the council, and letters were sent to other members of the council informing them of the telegram's receipt.

Meanwhile the text has been made available for the press here. Whether the matter comes before the league depends on whether any Government presents it.

Marconi Co. Declares New Method of Picture Transmission Has Been Proved a Success.

HAVE BEEN MAKING TESTS TWO WEEKS

Public Demonstration Today—Likenesses of Kellogg and Young to Be Sent to America.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A public demonstration will be held tomorrow afternoon in the London offices of the Marconi Co., of what is claimed to be the first entirely practical and speedy system of sending pictures across the Atlantic by wireless.

It was announced that this system has been tested thoroughly and successfully nightly for the past fortnight.

During the last two weeks, the Marconi officials declare, they have been nightly sending pictures to America. The new system, they said, had been proved to be superior in practicality and speed.

The greatest disadvantage of the older methods, the officials stated, was their slowness. This is overcome, it is claimed, by the new method, which is called the "radio corporation system," and by which it is said to be possible to send pictures in 15 to 30 minutes, depending upon the type of the pictures.

Tests Made at Night.

The wireless picture tests have been carried on at night because of the pressure of business during the day. It is maintained, however, that the system is equally practical in the daytime.

Thus far the transmission has been solely from England because the apparatus for the receipt of wireless pictures has not yet arrived from America. Officials here desired to postpone the announcement of the new system until they were able to make a joint demonstration of both the sending and receiving of pictures, but officials of the radio corporation stated that they preferred to make public the results of the test now. The sending of pictures tomorrow, it is emphasized, is meant only as a public demonstration and not as a test, since the method has already been proved undoubtedly practical.

Pictures Chosen at Random.

During the recent tests random pictures have been transmitted. These were chosen as best suited for experimental purposes from those belonging to employes of the company. During the public demonstration, tomorrow, however, the photographs which will be sent by wireless across the Atlantic will include those of American Ambassador Kellogg, Owen D. Young, former Agent-General for reparations payments, and other prominent men. Recent news pictures from England and other subjects will also be transmitted to America.

WOMAN RELEASED WHO KILLED PAUL PATTERSON

Father of Youth Failed to Appear at Hearing—Grand Jury to Get Case.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEBANON, Tenn., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Pearl Baskin, slayer of Paul Patterson, Springfield (Mo.) law student at Cumberland University, at her home here Nov. 19, was free today following a preliminary hearing. The charge of murder was dismissed for lack of prosecution.

Roscoe Patterson, former Congressman and father of the youth, failed to answer a wire asking what steps he would take in the prosecution, according to Justice Hogan. Just before leaving for Springfield several days ago, Patterson told police he did not intend to prosecute the woman.

The case will be presented to the grand jury.

Young Patterson was shot by Mrs. Baskin when he attempted to enter her home. The youth was under the influence of liquor, according to witnesses.

Calles Becomes Head of the Mexican Republic Today

Mexico has negotiated revolutionary claims conventions with the United States and France and a similar treaty with Spain is pending approbation in the Senate. Invitations to join the League of Nations and to send delegates to the Fifth Pan-American Congress have been declined, but closer relations with foreign countries have been sought through official support given trade excursions from the United States and Europe. An effort also has been made to solve the perennial controversy with foreign oil interests by means of a conference with representatives of the Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico.

Financial Conditions Improved.

In financial matters, the Lamont-de La Huerta agreement for the resumption of payments on the foreign debt, despite its suspension because of the revolution after running one year, is the outstanding feat of the administration. By presidential decree income and corporations profits taxes have been imposed and progress has been made toward balancing the budget at between 250,000,000 and 300,000,000 pesos. Failure thus far has attended efforts to reorganize the nation's banking system and establish a sole bank of issue for paper currency, but financial conditions have been somewhat improved by the successful operation of the National Monetary Commission.

Payment of Federal employes whose salaries are in arrears and of the Government's floating indebtedness is being sought by the flotation of a 100,000,000-peso loan in the United States, through a Texas commission house. Proceeds of this loan, if it can be sold, also will be used to resume the service on the external debt.

Two outstanding results of Obregon's method of handling domestic problems—a loose rein policy with warring political elements, supplemented by the mailed fist when they have threatened the stability of his administration—are seen, first, in his feat of holding office for four years and then turning the presidency over to his successor, and second, in the rapid growth of the agrarian movement. The latter, because of international complications resulting from the expropriation of foreign-owned properties and to the wrath of wealthy Mexicans who are losing their lands, constitutes one of the most difficult problems Calles will be called upon to face.

Labor Co-operatives Encouraged.

What might be termed toleration of the growth of workmen's syndicates but encouragement of co-operative labor and producers' organizations have characterized the retiring President's internal policy. Much of the success of the Tampico stevedores' co-operative union has been due to Federal support, while the establishment of sisal producers and exporters' co-operative bodies in Yucatan resulted from the Government's initiative.

More than the usual amount of Federal funds for the development of railways and roads also has been made available by the Obregon administration. About 40,000,000 pesos has been spent on road building, a large share in opening up a wagon way through the isolated regions extending from Chilpancingo to Acapulco. The Government also has opened the port of Yavaros, on the eastern Sonora coast, and connected it with the interior by a new railway. Despite the revolution, work was never halted by the Southern Pacific on its west coast line, now nearing completion, which will connect the entire republic, via Mexico City and Guadalajara, with southwestern United States.

Obregon to Private Life.

Upon turning over the responsibilities of his office to Calles, Obregon will, as he often has stated, retire to private life.

"From my estates I shall watch like an alert sentinel, ready at any moment to offer my slight services should any criminal hand imperil the liberties of the Mexican people."

Continuance of Obregon's policies has been pledged by Calles, both in Mexico during his campaign and in Europe and the United States during his recently completed four-months' foreign tour. The incoming executive also has declared frankly that he was elected by the working classes and that his chief endeavor would be to ameliorate their mental, moral and physical condition. His attitude upon the agrargian question is even more advanced than that of his predecessor, for in a campaign speech at Cuautla, Morelos, April 10, 1924, he declared:

"Make it known to Mexican and foreign reactionaries that the revolutionary and agrargian policies of Emiliano Zapata are mine."

It was declared at the time by Calles' political opponents that the agrarian policy of Zapata, who for nearly a decade dominated the rich little State of Morelos, was summarized in the phrase that "the land belongs to him who cultivates it," and that Zapata himself was a "rebel with a confused vision of a primitive and barbarous semicommunism who lived in perpetual warfare and only to destroy."

No Campaign Promises.

According to his own statements, Calles will assume the presidency without having made a single campaign promise to any party or faction. He asserts that during his campaign he publicly refused the support of every organization whose platform did not coincide with the political principles which he had announced he would support when he proclaimed his candidacy.

Foreign investors will be welcomed to Mexico, but incoming foreign capital must be "humanitarian" and "well intentioned." The welcome it will receive, according to an interview Calles is quoted to have given out in Paris, and the protection it will be afforded does not mean that he will call out troops against striking workers.

Upon assuming his post Calles will have no pressing military danger to face, for Obregon disproved the old saying that "the revolution always wins." His financial troubles, however, are likely to prove bothersome. The cost of crushing the De la Huerta revolt has borne heavily upon the national treasury and the burden imposed by the necessity of maintaining an oversized army will be but slightly lightened. To the task of keeping up service on the foreign debt, should interest payments be resumed, will be added that of recompensing foreigners for losses suffered during the revolution, if the various claims conventions already negotiated function according to schedule.

WIFE BADLY BURNED, HUSBAND DROPS DEAD

Heart Disease Kills Former Soldier When His Mate Told of Serious Injury.

Henry Parde, 57 years old, a 30 years an enlisted man in the army, dropped dead at his home, 2714 South Seventh street, about after noon yesterday from shock the announcement that his wife Della, 47, had just been burned.

Parde had recently retired from the army because of his age. He had been wounded in action, had seen action in Cuba, the Philippines and China, but the shock of his wife's statement that she was badly hurt proved too much for him.

He hurried from the American Car and Foundry Co., where he was employed as a machinist, in response to a telephone call and entered his home crying: "Is she badly hurt?" Mrs. Parde called, "Oh, yes, Henry, I'm hurt very bad." He collapsed as he started toward her and was lifted to a bed unconscious.

A physician summoned to Mrs. Parde arrived a few minutes after the husband's collapse, pronounced him dead of heart failure and ordered Mrs. Parde to a hospital, where she was found to be in a critical condition.

She had been preparing a meal in the kitchen when she stepped near an open grate and her dress ignited. Her son, George, 14, smothered the flames with a blanket, then summoned his stepfather. Physicians said last night she was improving and they expect she will recover. She was not informed of her husband's death.

With Mrs. Parde at the time of the accident, besides George Wise, her son by a former marriage, were Parde's two children by a former marriage, Henry, 8, and Doris, 6. He was a member of the Spanish American War Veterans and the organization is arranging his funeral.

"STAR" CASHIER ROBBED OF $6000 IN ELEVATOR

Employe of Newspaper on Way to Ninth Floor of the Building When He Was Held Up.

WAS CARRYING THE MONEY IN SATCHEL

Two Robbers Take Charge of Lift and Escape After Forcing Victim Out at Eighth Floor.

Two payroll robbers, who rode up the elevator to the ninth floor in the Star Building, Twelfth and Olive streets, with that newspaper's cashier and assistant, at 1:10 p. m. yesterday, wrested away, at the point of revolvers, a satchel containing about $6000 cash, after which they manned the elevator, forced out their victims and the operator, descended and escaped with the money.

The robbers, after loitering at the cigar counter in the building lobby, had boarded the elevator with other passengers, including the cashier, Edward V. Bates, and his assistant, Norman Basler. Basler carried the satchel, in which were the pay envelopes prepared for Saturday distribution, as is the weekly custom, among employes in the mechanical department on the ninth floor.

Holdup at Top of Shaft.

When the elevator reached the ninth floor, its terminus, opposite the editorial rooms, the cashier and his assistant prepared to alight to mount the stairs leading to the next and top floor. At this juncture, Cashier Bates noted that there were two other male passengers in the elevator and that one of them had taken hold of the bag, held by Basler.

Bates thought the act a prank of one of the building's tenants, but as he reached for the bag, the other passenger thrust a revolver against his side, and demanded:

"Give me that bag, or I'll blow your inside out."

At this point Bates noted that his assistant was covered by a revolver in the hands of the other robber. The bag was surrendered.

Robber Operates Elevator.

The surprised employes and the elevator operator were backed into a corner by one of the robbers, while the other took hold of the starting lever. Just then, H. A. Dick, financial editor of the paper, approached to board the car and was waved back by the robber with a flourish of his revolver.

One robber then lowered the car to the eighth floor. There, the victims and the operator, a negro girl, were ordered to get out, and the car quickly shot below. The robbers stopped at the second floor, evidently to halt suspicion at the absence of the operator, which might have resulted had they gone to the ground floor. A large open stairway made easy their escape from this point.

Bassler described the robber who got hold of the bag as about 25 years old, five feet, ten inches tall, weighing 150 pounds and wearing a brown overcoat and light fedora hat. The other robber was described as about the same age, of somewhat smaller stature and wearing a dark overcoat.

A second release, Early said, is a duplicate in wording, except that the introductory line and the signature show the young woman's name as "Rosalind Kendall Wainwright."

"The copies of the receipt and release are in St. Louis," Attorney Early said, "and will be shown in court when there is occasion to do so."

Commenting on the allegation made in the young woman's suit to break the will, to the effect that Wainwright was not mentally competent when he made the codicil to his will, Early said:

"It appears that this woman and her lawyer considered Mr. Wainwright competent to make a settlement, three weeks after the date of the codicil. It would seem rather difficult for her to plead, in view of that fact, that he was not competent to dispose of his property at the time when the codicil was made."

Appeal From Probate Order.

Early yesterday filed, in behalf of the executors named in the Wainwright will, a motion for an appeal from the order of Probate Judge Holtcamp, naming Edwin W. Lee as temporary administrator of the estate. Judge Holtcamp is expected to pass on the motion tomorrow, and if the motion is granted, the appeal will be heard in the Circuit Court.

The appointment of Lee was made, and his $1,250,000 bond was

Mrs. Harding's Life, Filled With Drama, Ended With Tragedies Piled Upon Her

Disinherited and Snubbed After Marriage, She Climbed With Her Husband to Pinacle of Power.

By MAYME OBER PEAK.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The death of Florence Kling Harding writes finis to one of the most tragic chapters in recent history. Stricken in the Marion home of her friend and physician, who had passed on but a short time before Mrs. Harding did not use her old-time will power to get well. Unresisting, she ebbed slowly away. Her fighting spirit and inspiration were gone, her job was done.

She lived for Warren Harding. When at the height of his triumph his life suddenly ended like a light blown out in the night, Florence Harding's heart and hands were emptied of all that had filled them. In a few seconds, her work of 40 years was wiped out; the object of her ambitions destroyed by their realization.

Stunned by the shock of her loss, Mrs. Harding kept up a brave front so long as the eyes of the world were upon her. But in the quiet and seclusion of her mourning, with nothing to hope for, plan, or manage—not even a home — the dominant spirit of this proud woman began to break, and her body—weakened by a chronic malady—to droop and fail.

The Teapot Dome investigation and disclosures undoubtedly hastened her end. Those who know her best say she was literally crucified by the political rumors that refused to be buried with the dead and the scandals that soiled the clothes of some of her husband's and her own trusted friends.

Planned to Write Biography.

But she kept silent, refusing to make any public statement, or even to see her old friends—the newspaper reporters.

If Mrs. Harding had lived she intended to write Warren Harding's biography in collaboration with an experienced biographer and was waiting for the return of her strength to do so. For months she was importuned and offered fabulous sums by publishers to write "the true story of Warren Harding as his wife knew him." On her stipulation, however, that every word was to be published as she wrote it the contract was never signed.

It is a pity that the story of the Hardings' joint career could not have been told in intimate detail by the one best able to tell it.

Even in this land of opportunity, the drama of their journey from the printing shop to the White House has a singular appeal. Full of the grit and sand that paves the road to success, the Hardings' life together was an exemplification of the good old American romance of struggle and achievement.

In general their story is well known.

Four years ago Mrs. Harding, in the Wyoming avenue home of Senator Harding, candidate for the presidency, gave to the writer her account of their married partnership that later led to the highest pinnacle of power—chiefly because her father disinherited her and her friends cut her for marrying him!

To be more exact, Amos Kling, wealthy banker of Marion, disinherited his daughter not only for marrying a "futureless upstart" but for marrying again. Not many people knew, until the story came out during the presidential campaign with a view to making political capital, that Mrs. Harding had been married before and divorced.

"There is nothing sensational connected with my first marriage," Mrs. Harding said. "I made a similar mistake to that of many other young girls. At the age of 15 I married a young man, the son of a close neighbor and one of the best families in Marion. He did not, and would not, take care of me. I returned to my home. The courts granted me a divorce and restored to me my maiden name of Kling. Subsequently my first husband died and six years later I was married to Mr. Harding."

Jeanna and George Neely DeWolfe, grandchildren of the late Mrs. Warren G. Harding, who were left the bulk of her estate, estimated to be in excess of $500,000. Marshall E. DeWolfe, their father, was the offspring of Mrs. Harding's girlhood marriage, which ended in a divorce. De Wolfe died a number of years ago in Colorado. The children never visited her in the White House, Mrs. Harding fearing their presence there would recall the old story of her divorce and make it conspicuous in the news. The estate was left in trust for the children until they are 28 years old. The boy and girl are now 12 and 15, respectively.

Son Died in Denver.

The name of Mrs. Harding's first husband was Henry de Wolfe. They had one son, who died in Denver, Colo., while working on a local paper. He married a Marion girl, who bore him two children, and who is now remarried and living in Maron. Mrs. Harding never had her grandchildren at the White House because of the gossip it might have involved in reopening this closed chapter of the past. Both she and Mr. Harding were fond of them and, when Mr. Harding died, he remembered them in his will.

Coming at so tender an age, Mrs. Harding felt that her early unfortunate experience had not the least possible connection with her life as Warren Harding's wife. "One real romance is sufficient in any woman's life," she said.

There was a story current in Washington that shortly before the Chicago Convention in 1920, she veiled herself and visited an uncannily successful fortune-teller, who so strongly prophesied what was to happen that Florence Harding went to the convention assured of her husband's nomination.

In any event, when it actually occurred, she was the least surprised and excited. Some one on the convention platform, who had watched her throughout the ordeal, turned to her as soon as the din had died down and said:

"Mrs. Harding, I want to be the first one to congratulate you. Any woman who can keep her head as you have done at a time like this can be trusted as First Lady of the Land. I'm for you!"

When the presidential nominee finally reached the hotel, he found the future mistress of the White House fast asleep on the couch!

In the campaign, Mrs. Harding made a fine mate. A natural-born politician, a good mixer, a man's woman who had been her father's and her brother's pal and who always was admitted to her husband's inner circle of friends and advisers, with years' experience as official hostess, she was well equipped for the job. She knew how to please and what to do and say and was a vote-getter of no small value.

She extended hospitality by the wholesale. It went, in fact, clean beyond the bounds of their small home and spilled upon the front porch where was inaugurated the famous front porch campaign. Mrs. Harding made a place in history for this modest house—the fruit of many uphill years of labor and sacrifice, whose doors her own family once refused to darken. Thousands of the pennies taken in for the Marion Star went toward the payment of this now historic edifice.

Following the Wilson administration, unusually quiet by reason of the war and Mr. Wilson's subsequent illness, the Hardings came in at a time when social Washington was eager for a White House warming. One of Mrs. Harding's first official acts was to have the big front gates, closed for two years, flung wide, and the state rooms thrown open to the public.

Besides the official receptions and dinners, all the old customs were revived, including the public reception on New Year's day, garden parties, musicales, band concerts on the White House lawn, and Easter egg rollings for the kiddies.

Into it all Mrs. Harding entered with vim. Perhaps no other mistress of the mansion got more fun out of her job or gave more freely of her time and strength. Democratic to the bone, she felt that the White House was the people's house and she did not spare herself in extending the hospitality. She wore herself out and, at the end of a year was flat on her back ill, unto death.

Dr. Sawyer saved her. None of the famous specialists called in understood the patient's condition so well as he, who, for years had ministered to her in similar attacks. It was because of this that the President appointed him White House physician. And there was another reason: When the Hardings married without a sou and Amos Kling removed the welcome mat from his door, the Sawyers opened their home to the impecunious newlyweds and gave them shelter till they acquired a roof of their own. They did not forget old friends in their new glory. There were those in Washington who were prone to poke fun at "Puss-in-Boots," as they called Gen. Sawyer in his uniform. The doctor knew he looked out of place in soldier garb. On the first morning he appeared at the executive offices wearing his uniform, he sent in a note to the President. It read:

"If you laugh at me, you'll be shot at dawn."

Dr. Sawyer was at a Coolidge reception at the White House. He was standing in the East Room near the spot where Warren Harding's body laid in state on return from the fatal Alaskan trip. There was a faraway look in his eyes. Of what was he thinking—of the peace of obscurity in Marion, or the price of power at the capital?

Returned to Marion.

Mrs. Harding returned to the White House after her husband's funeral and packed away the last reminder of their happy reign together. As she took farewell of the historic rooms she had loved to fill with flowers, she lingered for a while in the Blue Room where she and her life-partner had smiled upon the thousands of reception guests, and then passed from the portals of the mansion into the loneliness of a widowed, childless life.

On a special train, Mrs. Harding returned to Marion and took up her abode at White Oaks Farm with the Sawyers. She soon grew restless, however, and within two months was back in Washington, established in a downtown hotel near the scene of her husband's triumph. At the time it was rumored that Mrs. Harding intended to go actively into politics and run for election as delegate from Ohio to the National Convention. This she denied, stating her purpose in returning to Washington was personally to supervise the activities of the Harding Foundation. This organization, of which Senator Frelinghuysen was president, had spacious quarters in a bank building adjoining Mrs. Harding's hotel, which could be reached by a back entrance.

In the hotel Mrs. Harding was rarely seen. Her meals were served in her suite, and she went out little. Sometimes she dined with the News, the Christians, or the Howard Chandler Christys. The latter stayed at the White House while Mr. Christy was painting the President's portrait, and Mrs. Harding was very fond of them. With "Evelyn" McLean, or Mrs. Harry New, she sometimes drove on the Speedway. The only public appearances she ever made were at Mr. Wilson's funeral, which she attended with Postmaster-General New, and the laying of a cornerstone of a school endowed by the Harding Foundation. On this latter occasion she was accompanied by George Christian, Mr. Harding's former secretary.

Pride Bowed to Dust.

After the Teapot Dome investigation the public did not catch even an occasional glimpse of the former First Lady. Only her most intimate friends were received by her. "Harry" Daugherty, as the Hardings called the Attorney-General, continued always a welcome and frequent visitor. When he was invited out of the Cabinet it was a crushing blow to the wife of the man he had helped make President.

The suicide of General Counsel Kremer of the Veterans' Bureau, which occurred in the Hardings' former home on Wyoming avenue in the bathroom where Warren Harding used to sing as he plied the razor strop, is said to have unnerved Mrs. Harding completely. The suicide of "Jess" Smith in the apartment of the Attorney-General came pretty close home again, as Smith, in his happy-go-lucky way was a favorite of the Hardings. Fall's downfall, involving others of her husband's appointees and friends and reflecting on his judgment, George Christian's failure to be confirmed for the Trade Commission because of his having been mixed up in some moving picture deal and, finally, the sudden death of her closest friend, Dr. Sawyer, stripped Mrs. Harding of the last remnants of anything to live for.

Her pride was bowed to the dust; her courage flinched for the first time. It was with a heavy heart that she passed on into the Great Beyond.

Success Turned to Ashes by Death of President and Spirit Was Crushed by Suicides and Disgrace of Friends.

of last May by indictments against the nine men who ultimately were brought to trial—Silkworth, Raynor, Nicholas, Truesdell, Owen, the McQuades, Quillan, their brother-in-law, and Gilbough. Owen was office manager for the Raynor firm, and Gilbough was a floor trader, alleged to have executed bucketing orders for the house as a trader on the Consolidated Exchange floor.

Trial began three weeks ago, after Silkworth had lost a fight for a separate trial. He did win a postponement of the hearing to permit him to go to France as a member of the championship rifle team.

Raynor Government Witness.

At the start of the trial, Raynor, who had given himself into custody at New Orleans Feb. 2, 1924, surprised his eight fellow defendants by pleading guilty. He later became a Government witness, testifying he had shouldered the blame for his firm's actions at the solicitation of his partners, who, he said, had promised to pay his wife $25 weekly if he, Raynor, would flee. It was when he learned that only one payment had been made to his wife that he gave himself up to the authorities, Raynor testified.

Raynor's testimony involved not only his partners and others of the defendants accused of the actual bucketing, but brought Silkworth into the case as the man who, as president of the Consolidated Exchange, had bolstered his tottering firm by sending reassuring letters to prospective clients, Silkworth, testifying in his defense, made categorical denial of the broker's charges.

At the conclusion of the Government's case last Monday, Federal Judge Hand quashed the indictment against John A. McQuade, holding that no evidence had been introduced to show his knowledge of the operations of the alleged bucketing ring.

POLICE ARREST 383 SUSPECTS BEFORE 1 A. M.

Two Holdups Reported in Same Period, in One of Which Man's Throat Is Slashed With Knife.

OFFICERS WORKING IN 10-HOUR SHIFTS

All Prisoners Taken on Streets and in Pool Halls and Drink Places, 107 Being "Police Characters."

The police working in shifts lengthened from eight to ten hours, and with the number of plain-clothes men on night duty increased by 140, last night made 383 arrests on suspicion between 6 p. m. and 1 a. m.

In the same period, two holdups were reported, in one of which a man's throat was slashed with a knife.

The suspects were arrested on the streets and in pool halls and drink places. All were taken to police stations, and were examined to see whether they had previous police records. Of the 383 arrested, 107 were set down as "police characters." One man was found to be carrying a concealed weapon.

To Be Held 20 Hours.

All those arrested were kept at the stations, to be held for the 20-hour period prescribed by law. The largest number, 96, was at Central District station, and at the Laclede and Soulard stations there were 35 each.

James Levins, 24 years old, of 1515 La Salle street, was found in the street at Seventeenth street and Clark avenue at 10 p. m., his neck and face slashed with a knife. He told a policeman that he had been held up by two negroes, who took $30 from him, and cut him when he tried to resist. He was taken to the City Hospital, in a critical condition from loss of blood.

Frank Dempsey of 232 North Newstead avenue was held up at Pendleton avenue and Hodiamont tracks by four men in an automobile, who took $1.50.

The announcement that two hours would be added to the police working period was made yesterday, following more than 20 holdups Friday night and early yesterday.

Two Shifts on Duty Two Hours.

In lengthening the shifts, the men were ordered to come on at the same time as before and to work two hours longer. This will result in three two-hour periods when two shifts will be on duty simultaneously. One of these periods is from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., a time when crime is as likely to be active as in any period of the 24 hours.

In each of the 14 police districts, the captain was on duty personally last night, instead of leaving the district in command of a lieutenant. In each district, also, 10 uniformed men on the night shift were assigned to plain clothes duty.

If these measures do not prove effective in reducing crimes of violence greatly, it is expected that the 12-hour shift, which has the practical effect of increasing the force 50 per cent, as compared with the 8-hour shift, will be introduced.

10-Hour Shift Ordered for East St. Louis Detectives.

East St. Louis detectives will work a 10-hour shift instead of the regular 8-hour shift until the increase in crime usual at this time of the year subsides, Lieut. Leahy, Chief of Detectives in East St. Louis, announced yesterday. Night-riders also will work two additional hours, but no change has been made in the hours of uniformed policemen.

Police characters driven from St. Louis by the clean-up in the larger city will not be permitted to stay in East St. Louis, Leahy added, and all suspicious characters not able to show a visible means of support will be arrested and charged with vagrancy.

Solicitor in Plot to Mulct Rajah Is Under Arrest

dition proceedings against him can be taken or are intended remains doubtful. The Weekly Dispatch will print tomorrow a story to the effect that Reads was in London a month ago.

The Indian potentate trial ended in an unprecedented muddle, owing to the verdict "by the jury, which may result in years of litigation. Lord Justice Darling, in view of the jury's findings, was not able to render a decision, and has adjourned the case for a week, when legal arguments will be heard before him as to what the jury's decisions on the questions of fact submitted may mean. Lord Darling's summing up was unmistakably in favor of the Midland Bank, which is being sued by Charles Robinson for £125,000, paid by the Indian Rajah as hush money. This money William Cooper Hobbs collected after depositing it in Robinson's name.

Findings Upset Judge.

The Judge made no secret of his intention that the jury should find the bookmaker, Robinson, and his wife, Florence "Maudie" Robinson, had been in a conspiracy to mulct the Rajah. Lord Darling told the jury that if such a conspiracy existed, the Robinsons could not recover from the bank any more than he could recover a stolen watch deposited in the bank's vaults. But the jury upset Lord Darling's wishes. For days rumors have been about that certain members of the jury, who have been locked up or forbidden to read papers, have been annoyed with Lord Darling for his attitude toward the jury. From Lord Darling's manner when the verdict was returned, it appeared the result was a shock to him.

Under English law in a case of this kind, the decision is announced by the Judge, who interprets the questions of law involved after the jury has decided on the questions of fact. Lord Halsbury, Robinson's counsel, protested yesterday when Lord Darling announced that the question of negligence on the part of the bank in paying the £125,000 out of the account opened in Robinson's name did not arise and would not be submitted to the jury.

Must Accept Jury's Verdict.

Lord Darling's decision as to whether Robinson does or does not get the cash from the bank, whatever the jury has decided, is final, and is only subject to the right of appeal. But the Judge is supposed to accept the jury's verdict on the questions of fact, and hence he must consider Mr. and Mrs. Robinson innocent of conspiracy.

Whether Robinson recovers from the bank the cash which Hobbs took out and distributed in great part among the "big three" in the conspiracy is thus left in the air. If Lord Darling refuses the award an appeal seems certain.

Mrs. Robinson, interviewed after the trial, said:

"It's the verdict I expected. I knew the jury would exonerate me from any complicity, and I'm glad that the worst of my ordeal is finished."

Her husband declared himself thoroughly delighted with the verdict, saying:

"We are innocent people and the verdict reaffirms the belief in our innocence in the public's mind."

Sir John Simon, in his concluding address to the jury in behalf of the Midland Bank, revealed a mystery that has agitated all London as to the nature of the "instrument" about which secret evidence was given. Sir John said he realized it might be supposed from the veiled language he used that a reputable firm had consented to manufacture an illegal instrument.

This he declared not so. He also wanted to make clear on behalf of Mrs. Robinson that she had not used an instrument intended for some improper use.

The instrument was a safety razor.

Secret Articles in Case.

Another of the articles in question, concerning which secret questions were propounded in writing to the witnesses and given to the jury with apologies to the women jurors, was. Sir John said a "gold memento match box upon which in enamel was a little safety razor and a second gold match box upon which in enamel was a joint of beef."

The courtroom seemed to regard these details as anti-climactic, but it picked up interest again when Sir John said:

"These were details so intimate and so secret that no modest woman would in any circumstances tell any man in the world."

Identity of Victim.

The "Mr. A." victimized by the blackmailers has been understood to be Sir Hari (or Hurri) Singh, son and heir of Sir Pratab Singh, Maharajah of Jammu-Kashmir. Burke's Peerage says he is the nephew of Sir Pratab, but also his heir. The reference in Burke's says:

"Gen. Raja Sir Hari Singh, K. C. I. E., K. C. V. O., Commander of the Kashmir army, born in 1895, son of the late Gen. Raja Sir Amar Singh, K. C. I. E., and nephew and heir of Lieutenant-General H. H. Maharajah Sir Pratab Sing, G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., G. B. E., LL. D., Maharajah of Jammu and Haeml Kashmir

CONTEST AGAINST BAKER DISCUSSED BY DEMOCRATS

Chairman Barbee Arrives in St. Louis for Inquiry, but Says Definite Evidence of Fraud Is Necessary.

UP TO COMMITTEE, DR. NELSON SAYS

Local Leaders Not Inclined to Favor Action Unless Investigation Discloses Irregularities.

Joshua Barbee, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, is in St. Louis investigating election returns, with a view to determining whether Dr. Arthur W. Nelson, defeated Democratic nominee for Governor, shall contest the election of his opponent, Governor-elect Sam A. Baker. The official count gave Baker a majority of 5872.

Democrats are centering their investigations on St. Louis, Jackson County, including Kansas City, and a few other points in the State. St. Louis gave Baker a majority of 42,819.

Barbee said last night that on the basis of his present information, there would be no contest. He declined to say what evidence was in his hands and what manner of investigation he proposed to make here. He said, however, that no contest would be instituted unless strong evidence of fraud was discovered.

No Time Limit on Contest.

Republicans over the state fear that the Democratic committee plans to withhold plans for a contest and then institute it suddenly after the Legislature is organized and Baker is declared elected on the basis of returns read by the Secretary of State. Lawyers in Jefferson City said yesterday that, in their opinion, a contest might be instituted at any time after the Legislature is organized.

If this plan were followed, it apparently would forestall "reprisals by Republicans who, with a majority of six in the House, 78 to 72, might be unseat enough Democrats to destroy the Democratic majority on joint ballot, which is now 85 to 68. The Democrats have a majority of 12 in the Senate, 23 to 11.

Dr. Nelson said last night at his home in Hannibal that he had not definitely concluded that there would be no contest and retained an open mind on the subject.

Decision Up to Committee.

"The details are in Barbee's hands," he said. "I understand that some evidence is in his possession relating to fraud in Kansas City, but it is only a rumor. The party committee must take the initiative and if fraud has been perpetrated the committee must find it."

He said a number of Democrats throughout the State were active in the investigation, but when asked to name them, he said he did not know who they were.

Democrats here are not inclined to favor a contest unless definite evidence of fraud is found. Edward S. Lewis, Democratic member of the Election Board, said that he believed the election was devoid of fraud.

Ponzi's Profit Was Only $45 on $9,000,000 Received in Schemes

REPLY 'COUPON' BAIT CAUGHT THE PUBLIC

Startling Figures on Result of Former Fruit Peddler's High Financing Given by Accountant.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Fifty per cent in 45 days was the profit Charles Ponzi promised investors, who, in the summer of 1920, startled Boston and the Federal authorities by public riots in their eagerness to thrust their money into his "International Reply Coupon" scheme.

About one two-thousandth of 1 per cent, or $45, is the profit Ponzi made on the $9,522,590 they invested with him, according to accountants who have figured their way out from under the mountain of high finance which fell upon them when Ponzi's operations were halted by a warrant of arrest.

Got a "Big Idea."

It was in August, 1919, that Ponzi, an alert little Italian, who had come to America to make money, had peddled fruit, waited on diners in cheap restaurants and clerked, in brokerage offices, got the "Big Idea."

According to the story he has always told, he came of a fairly well-to-do family in Italy, received the equivalent of a college education and studied medicine three years at the University of Rome. His means came to an end and he came to America and did all sorts of work while picking up the language sufficiently to qualify for better positions.

Served Time Previously.

He has admitted that he served 20 months in a Canadian prison in connection with the failure of an Italian bank in which he had been employed, and that after his parole he tried to help five Italian immigrants to enter the United States from Canada, was arrested and served two years at Atlanta.

After his release he became connected with the foreign departments of various merchandising and exporting firms and conceived the idea of a loose-leaf publication dealing with export and import matters. He tried vainly to finance this, but could not get anyone to invest money in it.

A "prospect" wrote him from Spain for information, inclosing an international reply coupon which was intended to pay postage on a return letter. The price of the coupon in Spanish currency was 30 centavos. It bore the statement that it could be redeemed at any postoffice of the Universal Postal Union for a postage stamp of 25 centimes or its equivalent.

At that time 25 centimes were worth about 5 cents. Thirty Spanish centavos were worth about 30 Italian centesimi, which were worth about a cent and a half. Therefore, reasoned Ponzi, he could take an American dollar, buy a draft on Italy for 21 Italian lire at the exchange rate prevailing then, send it to Italy with instructions to buy international reply coupons, of which he would receive 70, at 30 centesimi each, and send these to America, and Ponzi could redeem them here for 5 cents each, or at a profit of $2.50 on his dollar.

Decides to Borrow.

He sent a dollar to Spain, a dollar to Italy and one to France, with these instructions, by way of experiment. The coupons came back, in their various denominations. He lost a little on the Spanish transaction, made a little on the French one and made 250 per cent on the Italian one.

So the "Big Idea" was born. Ponzi had no money with which to go into the business on a large scale, so he decided to borrow money and share the coupon profits with the investors. He offered at first 40 and later 50 per cent, giving his notes for periods sufficient to cover the transactions. At first the investments were few and small, $5, $10 and the like. But when a few investors had got 40 and 50 per cent interest on their small investments they began to bring Ponzi all they had and tell their families and friends of the chance.

As Ponzi himself said, when the bubble had burst, "the public did not wish to be sold something that was a sound but conservative business proposition, like my loose-leaf publication, but it was ready to grab at something that sounded like a gamble."

Investigators declared Ponzi did very little business in international reply coupons. Ponzi insisted they were the source of his income and that he was making tremendous sums. Apparently, he actually was paying the interest on his first notes with the principal brought in by later investors—the old, old game.

Money Poured In.

At any rate, within a short time money was pouring in at a rate which he was literally unable to handle. He could not make out notes fast enough to keep pace with the money brought in, so he hired a big staff of clerks and authorized them to make out notes. He said afterward he did not know how many had been made out, or whether all were issued against actual money received. He also claimed that some of the notes were paid two or three times and some investors were paid $1400 by mistake for $14.

He said he didn't know how many sub-agents he had, but he had "35 or more offices" besides the main one in Boston. Money came in so fast he had to store it in waste-baskets. Vehicular traffic was stopped for two days in School street while investors with bags full of money fought to get into his office. The police had to be called on to keep the crowds in line.

CHARLES PONZI.

Limousine and Jewels.

Ponzi bought a magnificent home and a limousine, installed a staff of servants and bought his wife splendid jewels. He talked of running for the governorship.

Investigations were begun by the Government and alarmed investors started a run. The first notes presented were paid and the reaction brought in more money than ever. It has been said he took in $1,000,000 in the last three hours before his arrest.

The basis of Ponzi's success, of course, was the lure of the mysterious-sounding "international reply coupons." He claimed he had men buying and selling them in every country in Europe, and that he had a "secret" which enabled him to carry on the business in a way that the Governments could not trace. The intricacies of the exchange situation inclined the public to believe anything that was said about it. In addition, there was the public eagerness for profits greater than could be made in safe investments and above all there was Ponzi's personality. Suave, dapper, confident, imperturbable even in the moment of arrest, he had the public bewitched, and almost shook the faith of the investigators in their own findings. Some of the policemen sent to look into the matter stayed to invest their own savings, it was said. Officials hesitated to declare positively that the man had not some "secret" way of manipulating foreign exchange.

Facts Inexorable.

In the end, however, the facts were inexorable. Ponzi was convicted of using the mails to defraud, and sentenced to jail for five years. The Hanover Trust Co. of Boston and several other concerns were closed in the crash. Ponzi declared he was penniless, and though it was suspected that he might have some funds hidden, none could be found. Much had gone in the tremendous expenses of his huge system of offices and his army of employes. His home and his limousine and his wife's jewels were turned into cash and early investors, who had been fortunate enough actually to receive the huge profits promised, were forced to turn them into the general fund for division among the creditors.

With deductions for good behavior, Ponzi's term expired last August and he is now going through the mill of State indictments. One of them, however, ended in a disagreement of the jury recently.

Testifying in the Ponzi trial Nov. 7, Ralph E. Longden, an accountant who audited Ponzi's books, said that Ponzi took in $9,522,890 from investors and paid out cash amounting to $9,127,460.05. Ponzi, acting as his own attorney, questioned Longden at length concerning deposits in various banks, particularly the Hanover Trust Co. Ponzi asked Longden whether or not he had seen two checks made out to the Hanover Trust Co., one for $127,500 and another for $50,000. Longden admitted he had. Ponzi questioned Longden concerning a mysterious exhibit "G" and Longden said that "G" was a tabulation of transactions which appeared to be irregular.

Longden admitted some of Ponzi's notes might have been paid twice, but said there was no evidence to show that any of the notes were paid in excess of their value.

'Progressively Insolvent.'

Asked what business he found Ponzi engaged in, Longden replied that he found Ponzi apparently engaged in the business of issuing promissory notes. Asked what financial condition he would say Ponzi was in then, Longden answered: "He was progressively insolvent."

Longden testified he found no evidence of any business transacted by Ponzi in international reply coupons and that Ponzi never suggested to him that he might have records concerning international reply transactions in inaccessible places. He said he found no record of Ponzi having sold postage stamps in foreign countries.

Longden testified he found Ponzi had purchased five shares of New England Telephone and Telegraph stock which netted him a profit of $45 and that, although he took in more than $9,000,000 from investors, this $45 was the only profit he could show.

PONZI, ARRESTED FOR ILLEGAL ENTRY TO U. S., FACES DEPORTATION

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.

CHARLES PONZI, promoter of the get-rich-quick scheme of four years ago which attracted investments of many millions, was arrested early today by immigration authorities on a warrant charging that he is in this country illegally.

After questioning before Immigration Inspector Ferl F. Weiss, Ponzi was released on bail of $1000.

Deportation proceedings will begin immediately, it was said by Immigration Commissioner John P. Johnson.

Whether deportation will be to Canada or Italy, in the event that the charges against Ponzi are sustained can be decided only by the Secretary of Labor. Ponzi came to this country from Canada, after being convicted of banking irregularities at Montreal, but if Canada objects to having him deported to the Dominion, officials of this country may order him sent to Italy, of which he is still considered a citizen.

The warrant against Ponzi, obtained after several days of investigation into his activities in the past 20 years, charges only that he is in the country in violation of the law, and Commissioner Johnson said that until Ponzi was given a hearing detailed charges could not properly be made public.

OLD GUARD THREAT TO PUT INSURGENTS OUT ISN'T SERIOUS

Symptoms of "Cold Feet" Indicated Among G. O. P. Leaders Regarding La Follette's Followers.

MOVE MAY AFFECT CAMPAIGN IN 1926

Republican Majority in New Senate Only Six, Including Several Considered "Erratic."

By CHARLES MICHELSON, Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Symptoms of cold feet are already apparent among the old guard of the Senate relative to the reading out of the party of La Follette, Brookhart, Ladd and Frazier.

The declaration of the Republican caucus last night was brave and sonorous, but really meant nothing very dreadful, inasmuch as there is no purpose of depriving the insurgents of their present prestige on committees and elsewhere in the session that begins on Monday, and many things may happen in the nine months' vacation until the next regular session to mitigate the wrath of the Republican loyalists.

The decision to invite none of the four to Republican caucuses hereafter is no deprivation, for nobody expected the La Follette quartet to co-operate with the Republicans this time. It may be that last night's gesture was intended only as a possible means of scaring the rebels into good behavior.

It was pointed out today that, while the next Congress can get along without La Follette because of the decisive G. O. P. majority, they are likely to need the four acutely in the Congress to follow which will be elected two years hence.

Lenroot to Run in 1926.

If the La Folletteers take the action seriously, as they are bound to do if the implied threat is carried into effect with the organization of the Sixty-ninth Congress, it may lie with them to decide whether the Republicans are to have a Congressional majority in the last two years of Coolidge's term.

Lenroot comes up for re-election in Wisconsin, with the certainty that Gov. Blaine or some other La Follette man will oppose him in the primaries. With the bitterness that must be engendered by yesterday's action, the probabilities are that if La Follette's candidate is defeated that faction will vote for a Democrat rather than permit the election of a stand-patter. Otherwise the State would pass from La Follette's control, which he will not permit if it lies within his capacity to prevent.

In North Dakota, Ladd, one of those read out of the party, is up for re-election in 1926. It is conceivable that the regulars might beat him in the primaries, although it seems improbable, but suppose they do? How is the Ladd following going to vote as between some conservative and a Democrat with progressive leanings?

History May Repeat.

In Washington last time a Democrat, Dill, was elected Senator with more Independent than Democratic votes. Senator Jones, a Republican, has to run the gauntlet next time and, with no presidential candidate to help out, it is by no means improbable that history will repeat, particularly if the action of yesterday's caucus is carried to its logical conclusion.

All of these things are having their influence on the regulars who moved so boldly last night. Before the coming session these considerations will be emphasized.

Everything points to a big row when it comes to filling the vacancies in the committees. Logically the Republicans must refuse to promote the men they have repudiated, but if the committee on committees tries to do it the fight will be transferred from the Republican caucus to the Senate floor, and Borah, Norris, Howell and other Republicans who opposed the action will be heard from.

Borah already has said he would express his opposition to the principle of breaking the seniority rule to punish men because of their political vagaries. Norris has described the act as a silly piece of vaudeville, and Howell has pointed out that had the rule applied he and many others who went with Roosevelt would come under the ban.

Insurgents to Caucus.

The insurgents have no present intention of making reprisals by holding up the appropriation bills and thus forcing a special session. Senator Frazier said today: "We will continue to do just what we have done in the past—fight in the interest of the people."

Senator Ladd, calling the caucus action a piece of folly, mentioned that the people of his State approved his stand and he felt himself a better Republican than some of those who voted him out of the party.

Senator Brookhart, who arrived tonight, would make no comment. They are all waiting the arrival of La Follette, who is due on Monday, when they will do some caucusing on their own account.

The Democrats will sit on the side lines and watch the fight. They have no combination with the insurgents in mind. Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, in his statement today indicated perfect contentment to let the majority do what it could in the way of legislation. A Democratic program will be submitted as against that of the majority and if the insurgents want to vote for it they are welcome to do so. There will be no repetition of the experiment of last session where a Democrat, Ellison Smith of South Carolina, was elected chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, thereby keeping Senator Cummings out of that post.

Majority Is Slight.

This joining with the insurgent Republicans did not sit well on the South, which has little use for the Western brand of progressivism. Without Democratic aid the insurgents could not hold up the appropriation bills, even if they were minded to do so.

By the time the regular session or a special session of the Sixty-ninth Congress comes around the Republicans will be likely to have modified their fury against the rebels. The Republicans have in the new Senate 54 members; deducting the four who would be banished, this would leave a majority of only two.

It is the general impression that they will throw out Brookhart on the contest, which means one more Democrat. Steck, in the Senate, and altogether the majority is too slim to allow for much jockeying, for with Norris, Couzens and others whose Republican regularity is problematic, to put it mildly, the Administration will be in no position to persist in its scalp hunting, particularly with the next congressional election in mind.

In addition to the three danger points already noted, there are Cummings in Iowa and Norbeck in South Dakota whose elections might be put in jeopardy if the West persists in its progressive trend and makes the contest three-handed in 1926. For that matter, Curtis of Kansas, the new Republican floor leader, might find things a bit difficult in that election if the progressives took it under their heads to rebuke the Eastern Republicans for walking on their friends.

TO SUE SAM LAZARUS FOR DEMOCRATS' BILL

Capitalist Who Supported Coolidge Was on State Committee in 1920 Campaign.

Sam Lazarus, capitalist and railroad promoter, who deserted the Democratic party in the last election to vote for President Coolidge, will be named defendant in a suit to be brought by the Con P. Curran Printing Co. for payment of a $16,091 printing bill contracted by the Democratic State Committee in the 1920 presidential campaign. With accrued interest the account now amounts to $19,361.76.

John S. Leahy, Curran's attorney, said that the estate of Anton C. Stifever, millionaire brewer and with Lazarus a member of the 1920 State Committee from the Tenth District, would also be included in the suit.

Lazarus, upon the filing of the suit, will be placed in the position of being asked to pay the bills of the political party he actively opposed in the last campaign. He is now in New York and although Leahy recently wrote him a letter setting out that the debt was unpaid, he has not been advised of the contemplated court action.

Members of the 1920 committee were recently written to by Leahy but no responses promising payment were received. Joshua Barbee, chairman of the present Democratic State Committee, did not reply to Leahy's letter.

The account has been included in the Democratic State budget in the last two campaigns but the funds raised were never sufficient to cover the cost of the campaign and leave anything in addition for the payment of Curran's debt.

At the time he decided to favor the cause of Coolidge, Lazarus issued a statement saying he did so to prevent "radicals and wild-eyed theorists" from gaining control of the Government.

MAN INJURED WHEN HIT BY SPEEDING AU

Michael Seeker Knocked D as He Waits for Street Car. Motorist Flees.

An automobile, speeding on Broadway last night, knocked down Michael Seeker, 34 years of 2901 Indiana avenue, as he waited for a northbound street car at Neosho street, and then proceeded rapidly on without reducing speed.

Seeker was taken to City Hospital suffering with possible fracture of the skull, lacerations and bruises. Witnesses to the accident described the car as a large, black painted touring car. Seeker was standing in the street at the northeast corner waiting for the street car, then a block away, when he was hit.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 29. Certificate of nomination by Democratic State Convention, Hamilton Holt of Woodstock, the Democratic nominee for United States Senator, to succeed the late Senator Brandegee, has not been filed with the Secretary of State in accordance with the statutes, become known today.

Friday at midnight was the deadline hour for the filing of certificates. So far as the State Secretary's office is concerned officially, the Democrats have not nominated a candidate for United States Senator, and unless some provision is made to meet the situation, Holt's name will not appear on the ballot.

Among Republican leaders there seems to be a disposition to get State officials to waive the requirements of the State law so that Holt's certificate may be filed.

$2000 BANK HOLDUP AT HOUSE SPRINGS

Institution There Robbed for the Second Time Within Three Weeks.

Three armed men in a red Lincoln touring car held up the Bank of House Springs, at House Springs, Mo., shortly before noon yesterday, and escaped with approximately $2000, all the money the institution contained.

All that remained after the holdup was less than a dollar's worth of small change which fell out of a bag as the robbers ran out the door. The men fled in the direction of St. Louis followed by a black touring car which had waited a block from the bank. Both machines bore Illinois licenses.

Cashier Shut in Vault.

H. F. Weber, cashier, was alone in the place when two of the robbers entered and thrust revolvers against his ribs. "Step lively and open the safe," they commanded. Weber obeyed and was then shut inside the vault while the intruders ransacked the place, scooping the institution's last penny into a sack. About $1000 of the loot was silver.

A posse of 40 men, comprising virtually the entire male population of the town, set out in pursuit of the fugitives a few minutes after the holdup and sighted them near Eureka, where the robbers were delayed by a freight train at a railroad crossing. For three miles the chase was close, but at Allenton, east of Eureka, the robbers disappeared.

Later a report from Ballwin, on the Manchester road, stated the two cars had just passed through headed for St. Louis. The Sheriff's office immediately dispatched men to watch all roads entering the city from the south and west.

Second Robbery in Three Weeks.

The robbery was the second suffered by the bank of House Springs within less than three weeks. On the night of Nov. 12 three young men pried off a latch on a window and looted the place of about $1000, while most of the town's 90 residents were at Cedar Hill attending a wedding. The loss in both cases was insured.

House Springs is on the Gravois road in Jefferson County, about 25 miles southwest of St. Louis. An hour after the robbery yesterday the bank offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of each of the three robbers, who were described as young men, well dressed.

THREE MORE BUS LINES TO BE IN SERVICE TODAY

New Routes Are Waterman-Skinker-McCausland, Florissant-North Broadway and South Broadway-Chippewa-Lucas.

Motorbus service will be restored to Waterman avenue, beginning this morning, but the busses will be single-deck ones and pneumatic-tired. A previous attempt to operate on Waterman met with objections of residents who complained passengers on the upper deck took advantage of their position to peep in upstairs windows, and, also, that the solid tires of the busses damaged the street paving.

The three additional routes to be operated by the People's Motorbus Co., beginning this morning, are:

No. 18: The Waterman-Skinker-McCausland route, from Union boulevard and Pershing avenue to Maplewood.

No. 15: The Florissant-North Broadway route, from Eads Bridge to West Walnut Park.

No. 19: The South Broadway route, on Broadway from Chippewa street to Lucas avenue.

The South Broadway line will have double-deck, and the other two routes will have single-deck, pneumatic-tired busses.

More than 70 miles of streets, avenues and boulevards are traversed by the 120 motorbuses of the People's system, with the addition of the three routes. Two garages for the motorbuses are occupied and three others are being built.

The Florissant-North Broadway route will have its downtown terminus at Broadway and Washington avenue. It will traverse North Broadway to Howard street, to Thirteenth street, to Hebert street, to North Florissant avenue, to Carter avenue, to Mary avenue, thence past O'Fallon Park, Bellefontaine and Calvary cemeteries to Union avenue, to Lillian, to Thrush, to Thekla, with the western terminus at Thekla and Partridge avenues.

From Union boulevard and Pershing avenue the Waterman-Skinker-McCausland route will extend to Maplewood, via Waterman avenue, Skinker road, McCausland and Manchester avenues to Roseland place. The service on this route will be extended down Lindell boulevard and Locust street to Twelfth boulevard upon receipt of necessary equipment.

30 WOUNDED VETERANS HELD FOR SELLING 'FORGET-ME-NOTS'

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 29.—Although they carried licenses issued by the County Auditor, city policemen today arrested 30 wounded World War veterans, residents of the National Military Home, for selling "forget-me-nots" on the streets.

City Manager Eichelberger ordered the arrests for violating a city ordinance. He asserted the men did not receive the money resulting from the flower sales last year. The veterans will be arraigned in Municipal Court Monday.

U. R. REORGANIZATION TO PAY OFF JUDGMENTS

Total of $440,000, With Interest, to Be Met, Court Informs Attorney.

Judgments aggregating $440,000 returned against the United Railways Co., prior to the present receivership, which began April 12, 1919, will be paid off in full with interest at 6 per cent, Federal Judge Faris said from the bench yesterday, in denying judgment-holders leave to intervene in the proceedings before the court.

John V. Lee, attorney for holders of judgments aggregating $180,000, had asked leave to intervene and the Court, in denying the application, said: "You are a bit premature. Under the plan of reorganization provision is made for the payment of all such judgments in full, with interest at 6 per cent."

Full Payment of Judgments.

Sam A. Mitchell, attorney for interests in the reorganization plan, in commenting in court upon Lee's application, said that he understood the reorganization plan contemplated settlement of old judgments in the same light as the Court viewed it.

Lee said offers had been made to buy up judgments on the basis of 50 per cent and interest.

It was pointed out that, while unsecured creditors usually participate in payments of a reorganized company on the same basis as stockholders, the present plan contemplates full payment of all outstanding court judgments.

New Common Stock Issue.

The plan provides that holders of the present issue of $16,383,000 preferred stock are given the right to buy one and one-half shares of new common stock at $12.50 per share for each share of preferred now held. Holders of $24,913,000 in present common stock are to be permitted to buy such shares of new common as are not taken by preferred share holders and transit bondholders to whom they will be offered first. The basis of purchase will be one new share of common for each old share, with a payment of $12.50.

FAY'S DEPOSITION IN LIGHT CASE IS MISSING

Document Is Needed by Manufacturing Firm's to Support Charges Against Union Electric.

The deposition of William Fay, former consulting engineer of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., who died last Wednesday, is missing from the files of the Circuit Court. Counsel for five manufacturing firms, suing the Union Electric for $116,268 damages, had relied on him as their principal witness to prove allegations of a conspiracy whereby he is alleged to have paid fees to William Gallaher, former superintendent of the electrical department of the Laclede Gas Light Co., for refusing to accept business for the latter company. The petitioners claim that they were thereby deprived of cheaper rates.

The suits were filed after Fay made a statement about his alleged dealings with the employe of the rival company. His deposition was taken in New York at the instance of the defense and was filed here April 28 last, but it could only be used in his absence for the purpose of impeaching him.

Document Missing.

When the plaintiffs' attorneys, John F. Green and Edward W. Foristel, learned of his death they decided to resort to his testimony already taken and called at the Courthouse yesterday to see if the deposition was still there.

They were unable to find it and no one was able to give information regarding it, although court records show that the document was formally lodged with the clerk. A rule of court requires lawyers to furnish receipts when withdrawing court files but there is no receipt on hand for the Fay deposition.

In the same missing volume were the depositions of Robert Seeley, treasurer of the North American Co., of which the Union Electric is a subsidiary; Charles E. Ruffner, former president of the Union Electric, and James D. Mortimer, former president of the North American. They deny any improper payment of money as alleged by Fay.

Attorneys Have Copy.

Foristel said that unless the original deposition turns up before Dec. 8, the date set for trial of the first of the conspiracy suits, it will be necessary to use a copy, which counsel have in their possession. However, he said, this will entail considerably red tape, which counsel wished to avoid. It will be necessary for someone to go to New York, where the deposition was taken, and get sworn statements of persons who were present when Fay testified. The testimony of the notary public and the shorthand reporter, before whom the deposition was taken, also will have to be presented. The substance of Fay's deposition was printed in the Post-Dispatch last spring. In it he substantiated allegations made in the suit.

TWO NEW "FRATS" FORMED

Bishop Asks 500,000 Fraternity Members to Enroll for Righteousness.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The new national Greek letter fraternities were formed today at the second session of the Inter-Fraternity Convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania. They were named Delta Alpha and Eta Omega Delta. The former has chapters at Ohio Wesleyan, Chicago State and Purdue Universities and the latter has chapters at San Diego, the Colorado School of Mines and Denver.

At today's session exclusiveness in fraternities was condemned. Bishop Robert L. Harris, of Marquette, Mich., speaking on this subject, said the college and especially the fraternity, must enroll its last member in the great struggle between righteousness and unrighteousness. He pointed out that the 300 delegates present represented 500,000 fraternity members in the United States who comprise the choicest manhood of America. Their influence, he said, could construct a new civilization built on a higher ideal of life, more justice, integrity and honor.

ROBBERS HOLD CITIZENS AT BAY, FLEE WITH $4000

Residents Huddled in Group at Altamont, Ill., as Six Men Sack Loot From Bank Safe.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ALTAMONT, Ill., Nov. 29.—Six bank robbers forced an entrance into the Hogan State Bank here, today, wrecked a safe and escaped with about $4000 after binding and gagging a watchman and holding at bay a dozen citizens attracted to the scene by several explosions.

The robbers made their escape in a touring car, parked several blocks away, firing shots at the occupants of two automobiles, who sought ineffectually to pursue them.

The force of the explosions wrecked the fixtures and the front of the bank, after which the robbers re-entered the building and leisurely sacked the money, which was in silver and gold. As the citizens arrived they were huddled in a group and kept covered by the revolvers of several of the robbers.

Apparently, the robbery was carefully planned and the robbers worked with precision. Shortly after midnight, Garfield Elsperwann, night watchman in the business district, had observed two young men who appeared to be shivering in the cold. They asked to be directed to some warm place, and the watchman offered to find them lodging in the city jail. They had proceeded about a block, when the watchman was confronted by four more men with drawn revolvers. The six men then marched him to the jail, bound and gagged him, and left him inside.

Returning to the bank, the robbers forced an entrance and surveyed the interior. Apparently passing up the bank vault, they prepared explosives to wreck a safe in the outer office. At the same time some of their number were engaged in cutting telephone wires in the vicinity, an act which excited the suspicions of a night telephone operator. As she endeavored to call police station, the explosions, which seemed to be two or three in number, were heard.

Thomas E. Hogan, president and principal stockholder of the bank, arrived just after the robbers had fled. He estimated the loss, covered by insurance, at about $5000. The bank has a capital and surplus of $40,000 and deposits of about $300,000. Altamont is 90 miles east of St. Louis.

LIPTON VISITS HIS SKIPPER IN JAIL, SAYS HE'LL RACE

Briton Makes Announcement of Intention to Challenge for Cup.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Sir Thomas Lipton went to the jail farm today and after a chat with Amelius Jarvis Sr., a prisoner there, announced he had found the man to command the Lipton yacht, which in 1926 will challenge America to defend the American cup in another of the classic races off Sandy Hook.

Jarvis is a noted Canadian yacht skipper, and an old crony of Sir Thomas. He is serving six months for conspiracy to defraud the providence in a sale of bonds. For two hours the famous tea merchant and the prisoner enjoyed each other's company. Sir Thomas made positive announcement afterward that he would challenge America's hold on the international trophy in 1926 and that he had Jarvis' promise to serve as skipper of the challenger.

The yachtsman also virtually decided that a craft of the schooner class would be built to oppose the American defender. Sir Thomas said nothing would convince him that his old friend Jarvis was guilty of the offense for which he was serving time.

City's Most Successful Horse Show, Which Drew 45,000 in a Week, Ends

Proceeds Will Show Surplus for First Time in 28 Years — Crowds' Enthusiasm Greater.

With the leap of the last cavalryman through the flaming arch at the Coliseum last night, a week's exhibition, declared by officials of the St. Louis Horse Show Association to have been the most successful in the history of the organization, was brought to a brilliant close. The attendance had been larger and more enthusiastic than ever before, the proceeds greater, the animals finer and the competition keener. It was generally agreed that this year's show formed a happy culmination of 28 years of effort to keep St. Louis on the map for admirers of fine horses and skilled horsemen.

According to official estimates, approximately 45,000 persons visited the Coliseum during the series of seven performances. This meant an average attendance of more than 6000 nightly, considerably more than gathered on a single night for any previous show. On several nights, the figure ran nearer 9000.

Proceeds Show Surplus.

Figures on the proceeds for the week were not available last night, but there was assurance that the $35,000 initial expense of the association had been covered, with enough additional to make certain the holding of a show next year and the year following. In no previous year have the proceeds of the event met expenses, and for the last two years the organization has been threatened with dissolution because of regular deficits incident to an exhibition.

Already more ambitious plans for next year's exhibition are under consideration as a result of the public interest shown this year, but whatever other arrangements may be made, the return of the Black Horse Troop is assured. More than any other one feature of the show, this aggregation of daring riders won popular favor. With a diversified assortment of hair-raising feats, it furnished new thrills nightly.

The closing night's program was devoted principally to local entries, and although the stakes were not large, they brought out many fine show animals.

Bliff, owned by Dr. William C. Gadsby, carried off the trophy in two rings for three-gaited saddle horses, and Hunter's Chief, from the stables of Paul W. Bakewell Jr., was victor in the five-gaited class. Pinto, exhibited by A. N. Engle, won the blue ribbon from four other entries, including Spark Plug, in the saddle pony event.

Dray Horses Exhibited.

No competition during the evening seemed to engage, however, more attention than the ring in which four great dray wagons, each loaded, lumbered around the arena, each drawn by a pair of animals of the heavy harness class. These comprised entries by the American Railway Express Co., Purina Mills and two by the Anheuser-Busch, Inc. The applause was deafening when the express company team won the blue ribbon. Purina Mills got second honors.

The potato race, as usual, provided its share of excitement when the "Reds" took the army officers into camp after the cavalrymen had vanquished the enlisted men from Jefferson Barracks. The final clash was one of the liveliest of the week and more than one head came in for an inadvertent whack when it got in the way of a blow aimed at a potato.

The cavalry troop closed the evening's program and the show with a repetition of its saber charges and drills of Monday night, and the dash through the fire.

HSUAN TUNG FINDS ASYLUM AT JAPANESE LEGATION

Pekin Dispatch Does Not Explain Why China's "Boy Emperor" Seeks Protection.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Nov. 29.—The "Boy Emperor" of China, Hsuan Tung, found asylum today at the Japanese legation, it became known here tonight.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 30.—A dispatch from Pekin to a Japanese news agency says the ex-Emperor is seeking Japanese aid to reach Mukden and then Japan.

The month has been an active one for Hsuan Tung. On Nov. 7 he was forced to leave the Imperial Palace in the forbidden city, home of the Manchu royal line since its downfall in the revolution of 1911. The order to depart came from Feng Yuh-Siang, the "Christian General," then in power in Pekin. Hsuan took up his abode in the home of the former Regent, Prince Chun.

The turning out of the "Boy Emperor" and his family aroused much comment and Tuan Chi-Jui, now acting head of the de facto Government at Pekin, warned Gen. Feng that the treasures of the Imperial Palace must not be disturbed.

Dispatches from Peking have given no hint why Hsuan has seen fit to seek the protection of a foreign flag.

RHINELANDER WROTE HE HOPED "HONEY BUNCH" WOULD WIN

Bride Shows Letter in Support of Belief Her Husband Is a Family Prisoner.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, whose recent marriage to Leonard Kip Rhinelander has been followed by a suit for annulment, brought by Rhinelander, today expressed the opinion that her husband was being kept prisoner by his family.

The young woman, who, Rhinelander charges, concealed from him the fact she is a negro, said that, until the filing of the suit, he had telephoned her regularly at the home of her father in New Rochelle, giving no indication that his feelings toward her had changed. Less than an hour before she was served with notice of the annulment action, according to her attorney, she received a letter from Rhinelander, which read:

"Honey Bunch, Old Scout: I hope you will win this case. Get the best lawyer."

SHORT SESSION OF 68TH CONGRESS OPENS TOMORROW

Appropriation Bills to Be Given Priority; Democrats to Aid G. O. P. in Completing Work.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—When the short and last session of the 68th Congress convenes, on Monday, the Republican leaders will press appropriation bills.

Among the more interesting general bills on the calendars of Congress are: The McFadden Bank Bill, to enable National banks to do branch banking within the cities only in which they are located; the Cramton bill to provide a separate bureau for prohibition enforcement; the Royal C. Johnson bill, which authorizes the President to draft wealth and industry as well as man power in time of war, and to "freeze" all prices for the same period, and the postal employes' bill.

The Democrats will co-operate with the Republicans in putting through the supply bills. The indications are that among the subjects which will receive attention are the transportation act as it relates to the adjustment of labor disputes, rate-making and freight schedules. It is doubtful if any of these will be brought to a conclusion. The bills eliminating the Pullman surcharge, which has already passed the Senate, may be voted on in the House.

Will of Frank J. Kotsrean.

The will of Frank J. Kotsrean, a realty dealer, who died Nov. 24, was filed yesterday. He bequeathed 60 per cent of his estate to his wife, Josephine, and divided the remainder as follows: $1000 to the Presbyterian Orphanage at Farmington, Mo., $500 each to the Bethesda Home, St. Louis Provident Association and the Presbyterian School of the Ozarks at Hollister, Mo., and the residue to his sons—Robert F., Chester W. and William J. Kotsrean. The value of the property was not given.

OKLAHOMA PREACHER GETS 5 YEARS FOR ABDUCTION

Jury Deliberates Only 15 Minutes; Prisoner Admitted He Performed False Wedding Ceremony.

NOWATA, Ok., Nov. 29.—A jury in District Court here today required but 15 minutes to deliberate and return a verdict of guilty against Joseph E. Yeats, formerly minister of Alluwee, Ok., who is charged with the abduction of 15-year-old Georgia Fields, formerly a chorister in Yeats' church. The twelve men, ten farm workers and two oil field employes, fixed his punishment at five years in the State penitentiary.

Yeats, who has displayed little emotion during the five days trial, heard the verdict unflinchingly. Shortly afterward he declared he "would carry on the work of the Lord wherever I happen to be." His attorneys announced they would appeal the case to the State Criminal Court of Appeals. Judge Charles Baskin announced he would pass sentence upon Yeats Dec. 6.

The abduction charge grew out of Yeats' elopement with the girl last September after a marriage ceremony, which he admitted on the stand that he himself performed.

FAHY AND MURRAY GET 25 YEARS FOR RONDOUT ROBBERY

Convicted Plotters of Mail Train Holdup, Sentenced to Aggregate of 177 Years, Move for Appeal.

DEFENSE ATTACKS COURT'S RULINGS

Glasscock and Four Newton Brothers, Who Have Pleaded Guilty, Will Hear Penalties Monday.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Prison sentences aggregating 177 years—the limit of legal punishment—was imposed by Federal Judge Cliffe today on William Fahy, former postoffice inspector, and James Murray, local politician, convicted of plotting the $2,000,000 mail train robbery at Rondout, Ill., June 12, last. The Judge, however, stipulated that the sentences should run concurrently, so that the maximum actual sentence to be served by each is 25 years.

Both men were sentenced to the Atlanta Federal penitentiary for 25 years on each of five counts in the indictment on which they were found guilty, ten years on each of five other counts, and two years on the eleventh count. The counts were varied forms of conspiracy and robbery.

Counsel for the men, who have been convicted of plotting what has been called "the greatest train robbery," with Fahy furnishing information of movements of valuable mail shipments and Murray supplying the information to Brent Glasscock and Willis Newton, leaders of the actual robber band and who with four others pleaded guilty, made immediate moves for an appeal. Glasscock was the principal witness for the Government.

Appeal Hearing on Monday.

Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, will hear an application for a writ of supersedeas on behalf of Murray and Fahy Monday. This will delay departure of the prisoners for the Atlanta prison.

Glasscock and three of the four Newton brothers were the chief witnesses for the Government in the trial of Fahy, Murray and Walter McComb, the latter of whom was acquitted.

Willie Newton, the fourth of the brothers, who actually participated in the robbery, still is in a hospital suffering from a bullet wound. He was shot by Glasscock, according to the defense, in the course of the holdup.

Rulings by Court Attacked.

Attorney George Guenther, of defense counsel, in his motion for a new trial, cited the fact that the defense was not permitted to cross-examine Glasscock on the defense claim that Glasscock shot one of the four Newtons and fired at Herbert Holliday, who also is awaiting sentence with the Newtons and Glasscock. The defense contended, although the court refused to hear evidence on that point, that Glasscock had shot Willie Newton and attempted to shoot Holliday in an effort to decrease the number of persons to share in the loot.

Guenther also discredited the testimony of the three Newtons and Glasscock as having been given in the hope of receiving leniency. Government counsel, in opposing Guenther's motion, announced that no leniency had been promised.

Sentencing of Glasscock and the four Newton brothers was deferred by Judge Cliffe until Monday.

FEWER JOBS OR TAX BOOST STATE BUDGET PROBLEM

Appropriation Requests Now Before Tax Commission Aggregate $20,594,000 and More Coming In.

AVAILABLE FUNDS PUT AT $13,122,000

Legislature Faces Increased Demands From All Departments, With $11,884,148 for Schools Alone.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 29.—The State Tax Commission is whetting the pruning knife preparatory to drafting its budget estimates on operation of the State Government for the biennial period, 1925-26, to be submitted to the Legislature.

It is confronted with the necessity of trimming down department requests for appropriations—already exceeding $20,594,000 and still coming in—to fit the revenue of $13,122,000 that the commission estimates will be available for operation of the State in the next two years.

Department requests for appropriations still to be made probably will exceed $5,000,000, on the basis of appropriations in former years. This will bring the total appropriation requests to more than $25,000,000.

Estimated Revenue $19,416,000.

With their calculations including every possible source of revenue in sight, the State Treasurer and Tax Commission have estimated the revenue for the next two years at $19,416,000. By law one-third of this amount must be transferred to the public schools, leaving $13,122,000 available for all departments. The total anticipated revenue is approximately $2,500,000 less than the revenue that was available during 1922 and 1924.

The budget estimates prepared by the commission will be submitted to the Legislature when it convenes in January, for guidance in making up appropriation bills.

The various State schools made a concerted rush for increased appropriations this year, the eight institutions asking for a total of $11,884,148. Their requests are within $1,297,822 of the total amount that will be available, hence, their requests will come in for drastic reductions.

University Seeks $6,576,882.

The University of Missouri is seeking an appropriation of $6,576,882, according to Roy Monier, chairman of the Tax Commission, as compared with $3,431,543 recommended two years ago. The Northeast Missouri State Teachers' College at Kirksville is asking $1,106,000; the Teachers' College at Springfield, $628,600; Teachers' College, Warrensburg, $728,570; Teachers' College, Cape Girardeau, $620,000; Teachers' College, Maryville, $778,750. The Missouri School of Mines at Rolla is seeking $878,260 and Lincoln University for negroes, at Jefferson City, is requesting $517,180.

Appropriation requests of the State schools largely were increased through applications for new buildings, enlarged faculties, and additional equipment.

In former years department heads have inflated their requests for appropriations in the expectation that they would be reduced, and by asking a large amount they might succeed in getting more money from the Legislature than if they presented estimates based on actual operating needs.

Higher Taxes or Fewer Jobs.

Unless the Legislature can devise some new means of levies on sources not now taxed, the Republican administration probably will have to lay the campaign pledges of reduced taxation on the shelf and increase the present rates. With lessened revenues and increasing demands from all departments, together with appeals for the creation of new State boards and bureaus, the administration either will have to increase the taxes or perform the disagreeable duty of reducing the number of State jobs. The latter method is abhorred by politicians.

Estimates of Revenues.

Estimates by State Treasurer Thompson on revenues for the next two years include the following principal items: Direct tax on property, $4,600,000; income tax, $5,500,000; corporation franchise tax, $2,800,000; inheritance tax, $2,250,000; foreign insurance tax, $2,000,000. The balance is made up from smaller sources of revenue.

Appropriation requests from the eleemosynary institutions, which have not been filed with the commission, will total $2,708,052, Monier said, as compared to approximately $1,471,000 recommended two years ago.

The State Finance Department is asking an appropriation of $597,400, compared to a recommendation of $273,700, two years ago. This includes $295,000 for salaries, $254,000 for traveling expenses of the Finance Commissioner, his deputies and the State Bank Examiners, and $45,000 for printing reports, janitor services and contingent expenses.

Public Service Body's Request.

The State Public Service Commission is seeking $446,200, of which $214,000 is for the regular appropriation and the balance to be made available if earned in fees by the department. The latter item largely is for cost of determining valuations of public utilities seeking rate increases. The cost of the valuations must be borne by the utilities, but the commission cannot expend the money thus received unless covered by an appropriation.

An appropriation of $1,995,588 is sought by the State Highway Commission for administrative costs of the Highway Department. Another appropriation of $55,000,000 is asked for road construction, but this will not come out of general revenues, as the road money will come from the automobile license fees and the gasoline tax. The tax—2 cents a gallon—and a 50 per cent increase in license fees were voted at the last election.

$68,700 for Executive Offices.

Among other large appropriations sought are Permanent Seat of Government, which takes care of the Capitol and grounds, $228,980; legal department, $196,000; State fair, $445,318; State Board of Health, $385,000; food and drug department, $260,212; St. Louis Court of Appeals, $160,988; Kansas City Court of Appeals, $82,000; Springfield Court of Appeals, $85,640; Warehouse Commission, $270,000; Department of Education, $137,100; Missouri Reformatory at Booneville, $387,500; Missouri School for the Blind, St. Louis, $125,000; Missouri School for Deaf, Fulton, $376,000; Board of Charities and Corrections, $275,000; State Treasurer, $120,300 and State Auditor, $147,200.

An appropriation of $68,700 is asked for the Executive Department, including $28,400 for salary of the Governor and office force; $20,000 for the contingent fund for the Governor's office, $20,000 for contingent fund for the executive mansion and $300 for insurance on the mansion.

SECOND MEXICAN ACCUSED OF KILLING OFFICER ARRESTED

Mexico Protested Against Raids by Fairmont City officials in Seeking Slayers.

Leon L. Alvarado, a Mexican known as "Little Lee," was arrested at Fairmont City yesterday on a warrant issued by Judge Wangelin of Belleville charging complicity in the killing of Assistant City Marshal Frank Weber of Fairmont City on Oct. 5. He is held without bail to await a preliminary hearing next Saturday.

Leon Ramirez, alias "Big Lee," was arrested immediately after the killing and is awaiting trial in jail at Belleville. Four other Mexicans arrested were released upon habeas corpus by Judge Crowe last week. Weber was shot at his door by an ambush just after City Marshal Charles Artinger had turned out the Fairmont City lights. He died a few hours later. In the exchange of shots with his assailants "Chico" Vasquez, a Mexican, was killed.

The Mexican Government protested against the raids conducted by Fairmont City officials in seeking the slayers. Secretary of State Hughes, acting upon that protest, warned Gov. Small of [illegible] put an end to the [illegible] were termed "illegal," [illegible] State Department [illegible]

Dish Rattling Causes Domestic Discord

Dr. F. J. Guilbault

A business woman of California has recently filed suit for divorce on the grounds that her husband rattles dishes unnecessarily when washing them. As she is the director of a large business enterprise, she considers it eminently proper that her husband should perform the ordinary domestic tasks about the house, but he is evidently displaying his resentment of this situation by a dish-rattling campaign with the dinner dishes.

A doctor will tell you it is a plain case of "nerves." Nervousness arises from a great number of causes, but, perhaps one of the commonest causes of ordinary "nerves" is chronic eyestrain.

Guilbault's properly prescribed Glasses have relieved thousands of cases of sick and nervous eyestrain headaches, squinting and peering and other annoying symptoms of defective vision.

Twenty-one years' successful practice, constant study and scientific research assure positive satisfaction and complete relief to chronic eyestrain sufferers. One single moderate charge covers testing, lenses, frames and fitting.

BITTER DEBATE AT OPIUM MEETING ON AMERICAN PLAN

Representatives of India Accuse Porter and Bishop Brent of Encroaching on Internal Questions.

"AMERICA WILL NOT RETREAT," IS REPLY

Question of Control Over Raw Opium Production, Urged by Americans, Deferred Until Monday.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

GENEVA, Nov. 29.—Five hours of bitter debate upon the American proposals that the opium conference control production and distribution of raw opium resulted in an adjournment Friday until Monday.

Congressman Porter and Bishop Brent of the American delegation clashed with H. M. Clayton and John Campbell, Indian delegates, who said the Americans had attempted to encroach upon internal questions and that India's honor was involved. Campbell charged the Americans, in seeking to establish the competence of the conference, as it appears in the American program, would impose one nation's interpretation of The Hague opium agreement upon the 42 signatories.

Would Wreck Conference.

He declared the league intentionally left out the question of controlling production, because it would wreck the conference.

"Such a position as the United States endangers the very existence of the league, whose object was to concentrate on agreements and not to magnify differences," said Campbell.

Porter replied that there was nothing sacred about the league's opium agrenda, and said he had perfect confidence in the league's approval of the American principles, which it had advocated repeatedly.

Campbell then charged the Americans had agreed in secret committee to the viewpoint of the Indians which Bishop Brent heatedly denied, saying:

"A question of national and personal honor has been raised on the matter of interpretation. The Americans fail to understand India's position. My word is as good as my bond and so is my country's. Had such an agreement been made in committee I would have refused to sign it and my Government would have repudiated the delegation."

"Timid Voice of Interests."

Bishop Brent, in appealing for honest treatment, said that the American delegation would not listen to the timid voice of the vested interests of bureaucracy.

"The world of thinking humanity will be the jury," Bishop Brent said. "America will not retreat, will not equivocate, and the delegation will be heard."

The delegates cheered the Americans and were silent toward the British. The league officials were plainly worried and accepted China's motion for adjournment.

Porter said afterward that the refusal of the conference to accept the American principles would not cause withdrawal, but that they will still fight for strict curtailment of opium production to one-tenth of the present output.

Rich Display of Orchids Opens at Shaw's Garden

Collection Is Said to Be the Largest Ever on Exhibition in America.

The largest public exhibition of orchids ever held in America opens at Missouri Botanical (Shaw's) Garden today, and will continue throughout the next three months. It is expected that approximately half of the half-million dollar orchid collection at the Garden will be in flower during the show.

Early blooming of the 5000 Tulipan orchids, gathered in the Colombian Republic last year by George H. Pring, Shaw's Garden horticulturist, is responsible for the early opening of the show. The last exhibition opened Jan. 27, last, and continued for but three weeks. Approximately 1000 of the Tulipan plants are now in flower, including two "Albino" plants valued at $1000 each. The presence of the "Albinos" in the collection was not known until the plants began to blossom. The rest of the Tulipans are in bud, and will bloom before the exhibition closes, Pring said.

Tulipans the "Showiest."

The Tulipans are a light mauve with a delicately fringed lip of dark mauve, make the exhibition one of the "showiest" ever held in the world, in the opinion of Kring, an authority on orchids. This is the debut-blooming of the plants here, and marks the culmination of many months of laborious collection and transportation effort by Pring in Colombia, and more than a year's "nursing" of the plants in specially constructed orchid houses at Shaw's Garden.

South American orchids bloom chiefly in December, January and February. Most difficulty is experienced with the plants here in summer because of the heat. The Tulipans in their native environment, the Andes Mountains, are subjected to an approximately even temperature of 65 degrees. It was necessary to "water cool" the plants throughout last summer by means of sprays kept running in the orchid houses. The plants are grown in moss and peat, the roots being housed in "slatted" boxes to allow air to penetrate. Three experts are in constant attendance on the plants under the direction of Pring.

So the public may better learn the manner in which orchids grow in their natural condition, a number of felled trees covered with Spanish moss have been placed in the north house at Shaw's Garden, where the plants are on display, the orchids being placed in the tree crotches. In the Andes orchids will be found anywhere from 50 to to 150 feet up in Bombax and Calibash trees. The collection of Tulipans was only obtained by the aid of natives, who are able to detect the plants far up among the branches.

Smoke Here Detrimental.

St. Louis smoke is also detrimental to orchids. Sulphur-dioxide in the air, resulting from excessive smoke, causes the flowers to fall off. Pring is hopeful of having his department moved to some smoke-free spot in St. Louis County. He expects the present collection to survive for 10 years, blooming annually for a period of about three weeks. The rearing of new plants from seed is almost impossible, because of the smallness of the seed and the many difficulties of artificial incubation.

The Shaw's Garden orchid collection consists of 15,000 plants gathered from all parts of the world. Individual plants are valued at from $10 to $1000. Among other species, in addition to the Tulipans, on display during the present show, will be the "slipper," "butterfly," "elephant - moth." "Cattleya" and "Brasso-Cattleya." The value of the entire collection is placed at approximately a half million dollars.

Hours to See Display.

An exhibit of orchids from Shaw's Garden was awarded first prize at the first national orchid show of the American Orchid Society at Boston last May. In addition, the Garden won a special prize for its display of colored photographs taken by Pring during the Colombian expedition.

The orchid exhibition may be viewed without charge from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. throughout the week, and from 1 to 5 p. m. on Sundays. The entrance to Shaw's Garden is at Tower Grove avenue and Flora place. Vandeventer street cars pass the gate.

SAY DOPE SMUGGLING STARTED AT DANZIG

German Experts Watching Geneva Conference Assert League Commissioner Can Stop It.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Large quantities of narcotics which the international dope ring is placing secretly on the American market are smuggled from Germany and shipped through the port of the Free State of Danzig, where a British commissioner, appointed by the League of Nations, is in authority.

If the American delegates at Geneva, fighting for the suppression of the narcotic traffic, fail in their efforts to limit the production of dope they can at least curtail the work of smugglers who make their money in America, in the opinion of German experts who have been following the discussion of international dope traffic at Geneva with great interest. These experts believe the reason the whole world is facing a dope terror is due to the British commissioner's failure to exercise due vigil at Danzig and the fact that in the chaos which followed Germany's defeat and internal strife, thousands of pounds of dope were smuggled out of Government warehouses.

Supervised by League.

This dope is virtually used up now but the alarming increase in the use of narcotics following the war brought unprecedented demands upon the Rhineland and other German factories, especially that of the Marck company, which is said to supply more than half the cocaine used in the world.

Although German officials declare this manufacture is legally supervised, hundreds of pounds are shipped from Danzig or through the Polish corridor, supervised by the League of Nations and finds its way secretly into England, France and Italy. There it fequently is repacked and smuggled into the United States and other countries.

German experts believe that Gen. McDonnell, now high commissioner to Sir Reginald Tower, under whose rule in Danzig war stores of narcotics found their way abroad, could, as a representative of the League of Nations and without further instructions from the league, effectively curtail the world's supply of cocaine, heroin and morphine.

Additional Tax Levied.

The Germans claim they have placed especially efficient guards at German ports and the border to prevent smuggling. Operations of the League at Danzig and entente army control of the Rhine bridgeheads provide two holes through which the Germans say virtually all the smuggling is done. The most difficult spot to watch, the Germans claim, is the Polish corridor which allows free entry into Danzig.

Germany's most recent legal action to check use of narcotics within the country has been to place an additional tax of 50 marks a pound on manufacturers. When narcotics are sold, the druggists pay the same amount which is refunded to the manufacturer so that the ultimate consumer eventually bears the burden of the high price which the Government hopes will check the sales.

Physicians and druggists also are checked up by Federal health agents and especial care is taken to prevent workmen from smuggling narcotics from factories. Importation of opium, which reached the high point in 1922 of 190 tons, has now decreased to 52 tons for 1924, up to October.

YOUTH TRIES TO HOLD UP BROADWAY BANK AT NOON

Teller Sounds Alarm, Summoning Special Policemen, But Would-Be Robber Escapes.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A youth swung briskly through the noonday crowd on Broadway at Forty-eighth street, entered the Chelsea Exchange Bank on the corner yesterday, and walked up to Abraham Greengold, teller.

The teller, counting currency, looked up as the young man shoved into his cage a check for $3000. "Look at the back of it," commanded the youth. Typewritten on the reverse side Greengold read:

"My partner and I have you covered. If you move hand or foot to sound an alarm you die. At 10:30 this morning we killed a teller in the Gotham National Bank."

Greengold dropped to the floor and reached down to an electric alarm communicating with the bank's special police, but when they arrived the robber had fled.

Pikers After a $10,000 Coach

Chancellor Hadley, Host to Players, Sounds Note of Optimism for Washington U.

Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley sounded a note of optimism for Washington University football in an informal talk at a dinner given by him to the football squad at the school Union Building on the campus last evening.

The Athletic Board is now endeavoring to sign the best coach available for next season. While the subject of salary was not touched up on by the Chancellor, it is understood that the athletic board is authorized to pay as high as $10,000 a year if they can get the man they want.

A new plan of coaching based upon a course of intensive study for all members of the squad was outlined by Dean McCourt, chairman of the Athletic Board. He said that all members of the squad, including freshmen, would be brought together in classes twice a week, starting tomorrow.

Chancellor Hadley said that it is planned to resod the athletic field and to restrict practice henceforth to some adjacent ground, thus preserving the actual playing space for varsity games.

The board of shategy which directed the football team in its late season games, was present as were also several "W" men of former years and alumni who have been prominently identified with sports at the Pikeway.

FRANK WACHSNUTH IS WINNER OF NATIONAL CROSS-COUNTRY TITLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Frank Wachsnuth, unattached, of New York, captured individual honors in the national senior cross-country championships of the Amateur Athletic Union over the six-mile Van Courtlandt Park course today in 31m 35s. The winning time was considered exceptionally good as the course was wet and swept by rain.

The Finnish-American Athletic Club took team honors with 31 points, the Meadowbrook Athletic Club of Philadelphia was second with 58, New York A. C. third with 71, Millrose A. C. fourth with 89, and the Dorchester Club of Boston fifth with 96.

The "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame

This quartet, esteemed the world's greatest all-time backfield by many critics, has galloped over the enemy to victory in every game this season. They have been dubbed the "Four Horsemen," and they are certainly rough riders. Left to right —Don Miller, Elmer Layden, Jim Crowley, Harry Stuhldreher.

Vespers and New York Team Play Thrilling, Scoreless Soccer Game

Visitors Show Real Stars in First of Two Exhibition Contests —Ben Millers Will Meet Invaders This Afternoon.

By Dent McSkimming.

While a scoreless tie game is always certain to prove something of a disappointment to both sides, yesterday's contest between the Indiana Club of New York City and the Vespers of the St. Louis Soccer League was so full of interesting incidents that the fruitless efforts at scoring did not carry their usual sting.

Indiana, a club composed of foreign-born players who were considered first-class in their native lands, gave a pleasing exhibition all the way and except for the all-important detail of shooting goals they were perhaps as polished an eleven as any other that has shown here. They showed some remarkable individuals in Schylander, Carlson, Levin and Renrulli.

How Teams Compare.

As is usually the case, the short passing, heading, general maneuvering and defensive covering-up of the visiting club were far superior to that of the St. Louisans. And, the local lads, as usual, were quicker to get to a free ball, were faster in starting their raids on the enemy goal, were more eager to shoot at the slightest opening, were more vigorous in the defense of their goal and generally gave the impression that they were willing to make greater sacrifice to gain a point.

Carlson, who a few years ago was called the greatest center forward in Sweden, was always dangerous, but his fame had preceded him and the Vesper backs were very careful to give him little opportunity to unleash his wicked shot. Still, he had the honor of making the finest try of the game when, in the second half, he sent Goaltender LaBarge stretching into the far corner of the goal for a shot which was unexpectedly smashed from far beyond the penalty line.

The closest thing to an actual score was Schylander's low, twisting shot which curved away from the local goaltender and was captured in the very corner.

Indiana had the widest opening for a score late in the second half when Magnuson's corner kick, low and hard-driven, went through Goaltender LaBarge's arms and hopped across the length of the goal with three Indiana forwards making desperate but futile efforts to reach the sphere. The gentlest tap would have put the

GIBBONS IN EAST TO START TRAINING FOR BATTLE WITH NORFOLK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight, who is to meet Kid Norfolk in a 15-round charity bout in Madison Square Garden on the night of Dec. 9, arrived here today from the West with Eddie Kane, his manager, and Sammy Mandell.

Gibbons, who weighs 179 pounds, or four pounds more than his stipulated weight for the bout, worked out in the Garden gymnasium for one hour this morning. He did no boxing but will put on the gloves tomorrow.

Promoters of the bout announced that Luis Vicentini, Chilean lightweight, and Tommy O'Brien of Milwaukee would be the attractions in one of two 10-round preliminaries, again.

Centre Defeats Georgia, 14-7, In Title Contest

Colonels Score Two Touchdowns and Bulldogs One in Second Period.

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ky., Nov. 29.—Centre defeated Georgia 14 to 7 here this afternoon in a game in which the Bull Dogs offered a strenuous resistance to the advance of the Colonels. All the scoring was in the second period. The home team was left with two yards to go for a touchdown at the end of the first period and made it on the second play of the second. Another followed shortly the after on a 10-yard run by Rabenstein. Georgia counted after recovering a Centre fumble, Nelson making the touchdown.

As a result of the victory, Centre will claim the championship of the South.

Neither team scored in the first period. With a 49-yard run by Nelson figuring prominently, Georgia advanced the ball to Centre's three-yard line where it was lost on downs. Centre's longest gaining play was a 30-yard run by Covington.

The period ended with the Colonels threatening to score, the home team having driven the ball inside the Georgians' ten-yard line following a forward pass for a net gain of 22 yards for a touchdown with two plays to make it in.

On the second play of the second period, Captain Covington, of Centre, slipped over the goal line on a quick opening play to score the first touchdown of the game. Lemon added the extra point with a place kick, making the score, Centre 7, Georgia 0.

Centre made another touchdown shortly after the first was scored in the second period. Following a poor kick out of bounds by Moore on his own 32-yard line, Centre advanced the ball to the 110-yard line and Rabenstein made the touchdown, Lemon again kicking goal.

Jose Love paved the way for a Georgia touchdown by recoving a fumble on Centre's 11-yard line. Nelson scored after a run of eight yards around left end. Hollis kicked goal.

The third period was without scoring. Centre lost the ball on downs on Georgia's 11-yard line and the Bull Dogs started a drive that proved impressive.

Georgia's last period air attack failed and neither team scored

Garbisch Kicks Four Field Goals to Give The Soldiers Victory

Captain Playing Last Game of His 8-Year Football Career, Misses First Three Tries, but Is Deadly Accurate Thereafter.

By Heywood Broun.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—It is a good stout boot the Army turns out for its boys and it was such a shoe which won this afternoon at Baltimore Stadium. The score was Army 12, Navy 0. Of course, it makes some difference who wears the brogan with the strong reinforced toe and today the foot inside belonged to Edward Garbisch, Captain of the Army team. This was his last day of football. He has been a star for eight years what with four years of play for Washington and Jefferson and now with the service team. But this was the best afternoon of all. Four times he lifted the ball over the bar and between the posts. Some of the kicks were long and some were short. Now and again he shot down a straight alley and again he had to find the range from some difficult angle.

A good gunner is Garbisch and if he ever gets a howitzer it will be bad news for enemy trenches. Among his qualities is persistence. In the beginning his kicking was not so good. His first three attempts failed. But, after all, that is the traditional way of artillerymen. Always there come a few short and a few long and then younr adroit cannoneer splits the bracket. So it was with Garbisch. His first was blocked. His next two were wide but his fourth sailed fair and true in the second period and set the score at Army 3, Navy 0.

It is true that he did miss one more in the first half but this was at big Bertha range, all the way from the forty-three yards line and he did not fail by much. This left his half record a mere one out of five which is not so much. But by now he had the range and with the coming of the third quarter the fire of Garbisch was accurate and devastating. He followed with three in succession and they were by no means easy. At the end of the run he had four out of eight which is not to be sneezed at.

Taylor Shines for Navy.

It was expected that the Army would easily split the Navy line but this did not prove to be the case. With the exception of one fine march in the fourth quarter the plays of the West Pointers made but little ground and that intermittently. Often the runner was spilled for a loss and in such cases it was usually Taylor, the Navy end and Captain, who crawled out from under the pile. He was a demon on defense.

The Army's best offensive weapon was the Navy's forward pass. This was a consistent ground gainer for the defending team. It was a good looking pass. It seemed to be premeditated. Hamilton, the Navy quarterback, threw the ball low and fast but there seemed to be a curse upon his efforts. It was almost as if the pigskin were polarized and the Army secondaries so many magnets. Again and again this sharp fast toss of the Navy plumped straight into the hands of an opponent. And worst of all the Navy had absolutely no scruples about forbidden territory. The shadow of their own goal posts was not a taboo to the Middies. They began the game by tossing a ofrward on the first play after receiving the kick-off. That was intercepted by an Army man and most of the subsequent ones went the same route.

Army Players Gather in Navy Passes—Then Garbisch Kicks

In fact you might almost say that in a certain sense there was a magnificent accuracy in these passes. Few were grounded. The result can hardly be blamed upon confusion as to the uniforms. In other years Navy and Army players have seemed much alike in their dark jerseys. This year Annapolis has plumped to color; the Navy players appeared in flashing old gold. They danced on the gridiron like daffodils. Nevertheless it was not these fair flowers but the grim black reapers who gathered in the forward passes.

The Army's aerial attack was not so much either but in this respect West Point showed better judgment.

Because the Navy pass was so extremely useful the Army usually refrained from trying any of its own and just got along nicely with the imported product. And after the interception there would come an Army drop kick. The complete tally of Garbisch's drop kicks is as follows: In the second quarter from the 27-yard line; in the third quarter from the 42 and from the 20; in the fourth quarter from the 28. Best of all was the shot from the 20 because this was kicked from a hideously sharp angle and into the teeth of the wind.

Crowd of 70,000.

Although the Navy lost it cannot be said that the young men who are about to be Admirals were much discouraged. They refused absolutely to keep cool with Coolidge. Indeed the President was all but swallowed up in the crowd of 70,000. Never did a chief executive make a less theatrical entrance. He happened in just about the moment that the Army mule was being trotted up and down the sidelines and so no one noticed that Coolidge had come. The President spent the first half in the Navy side of the field and then switched over. Even his passage across the gridiron was engineered quietly and without undue excitement.

Still, the men from Annapolis had no trouble at all in getting excited about practically everything which happened on the field. If an Army back was thrown for no gain the Navy stand burst into a roar because he had been stopped. If he made four there was still a Navy cheer because four yards is not so much if you look at it philosophically. Even when a West Pointer broke loose for a run there were Navy cheers because he had failed to make a touchdown. This game was unique among all others, because both sides cheered for one and the same thing.

NAVY TACTICS FAULTY THROUGHOUT GAME, TAD JONES DECLARES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29. "It seemed to me that Navy's tactics were faulty throughout the game," said Tad Jones, Yale head coach, who witnessed the Army-Navy game. "The Army attack was completely stopped by the Navy and yet time and time again the Navy, by using the forward pass indiscreetly, gave the Army possession of the ball within kicking distance of the goal when a punt would have gotten them out of trouble. Garbisch's four successful tries at goal for a total of 12 points place him in the front rank of the successful drop-kickers and place-kickers of the season."

CLEVELAND GAINS HIGH SCHOOL TITLE BY DEFEATING SOLDAN, 7-

Musgrove Wins Game With Touchdown and by End Run For the Additional Point

West End Team Fumbles at Opponent's Goal Line—Game Is a Battle of Quarterbacks With Kelly Finishing Second—Central Beats Yeatman.

Cleveland High School's football team upset all predictions and captured the Inter-Scholastic Football Championship by defeating the Soldan High School eleven, top-heavy favorites, by a single point, in a thrilling game at Francis Field yesterday afternoon. The final score was 7 to 6, and approximately 6000 spectators defied the cold to watch Cleveland win its second leg on the Yale trophy.

In the first game, Central defeated Yeatman by a score of 27 to 6.

The championship game was a battle of quarterbacks, and the team with the better field general won the decision. Homer Musgrove, Cleveland field strategist, gave a brilliant performance. Musgrove not only piloted his team to get full advantage of the breaks, which favored the South Side players throughout, but his kicking and running with the ball featured the Cleveland attack. Musgrove scored his team's touchdown to even the score, but it was his quick thinking on the subsequent play that gave Cleveland the one point advantage that decided the championship.

Musgrove's Play Wins Game.

On the try for point after touchdown, Musgrove was standing behind his line of scrimmage prepared to kick. The Soldan linemen, however, broke through and were rushing in upon him. Seeing that a kick would be blocked, Musgrove dashed around his left end, eluded a tackler and lunged over the goal line for the winning point.

That play eventually won the game, but it was only the determined playing of the Cleveland defense that maintained the one-point lead when the flashy Soldan attack threatened, as it did throughout the game.

Except for the first five minutes of play, when the speed of the Soldan backs took Cleveland by storm and enabled the West Enders to score their touchdown, the Cleveland defense held its own.

Soldan Passes Broken Up.

The work of Starkloff, Cleveland center, was particularly effective. The Cleveland secondary defense found little trouble in breaking up Soldan's vaunted overhead game, and in spite of the fact that Soldan was gaining on end runs and line plays, the West End players insisted on passing even in their own territory.

The usual result was that the pass was grounded or intercepted.

Cleveland, on the other hand, after gaining her slight lead in the second quarter, played a steady, conservative brand of football, waiting for breaks that favored them.

It took Coach Jimmy Cook's players little more than four minutes to score their touchdown. Baker began the game by returning Musgrove's kick-off 30 yards to Soldan's 30-yard line. Dietrich immediately kicked to Musgrove on his own 33-yard line. Cleveland was unable to gain through the Soldan line, and Musgrove punted to Kelly, who made a beautiful return of 30 yards to plant the ball on Cleveland's 35-yard line.

Montgomery made eight around right end. He was stopped on the next play, but then broke through his left tackle, dodging to the two-yard line before he was tackled. Kelly plunged over for the touchdown, but his subsequent kick was blocked.

Musgrove Stars at Punting.

It was Musgrove's superior punting which put his team in a position to score as the second period started. The Cleveland ace had the better of Dietrich in a kicking duel, and the South Siders gained possession of the ball on Soldan's 40-yard line. Musgrove made a gain through center, and then Yock broke through the line to make it first down on Soldan's 25-yard line. Musgrove and Jaques gained eight yards on plunges and Graham made a first down on the 14-yard mark.

Two plays were smothered, but on a double pass, Gram circled left end for a nine-yard gain before being forced out on the four-yard line. Jaques made another first down, and on two plunges Musgrove scored a touchdown on the first play of the second period. It was then that his quick thinking enabled him to score the extra point on an end run.

Soldan lost two splendid scoring chances in the third quarter, both as the result of fumbles. A fumble gave Cleveland the ball on her own 15-yard line, but the costliest error came a few minutes later after Soldan had worked the ball down to within six inches of Cleveland's goal. Kelly made a splendid 38-yard run back of Musgrove's punt to plant the ball on the 16-yard line. Montgomery and Horwitz made a first down on the four-yard line and Horwitz plunged close to the goal line. On the next play Kelly fumbled, and Cleveland recovered. Soldan had lost its best scoring opportunity.

Soldan made a last determined effort to score in the final quarter, but failed when Kelly's place kick was wide. Kelly cut loose with another spectacular return of a punt, carrying the kick 25 yards to the center of the field. A pass, Washburn to Dietrich, gained 11 yards. An off side penalty checked Soldan, but on the next play, Kelly again passed to Dietrich for 25 yards and first down on the 20-yard line. A plunge failed to gain, and on the second down Kelly elected to place kick. The kick failed and Cleveland took the ball to her own 20-yard line. The game ended soon afterward.

Three Touchdowns in Last Period Give Central Big Edge Over Yeatman

Although Central defeated Yeatman by a 27—6 score, the game was a close struggle until the final period when Yeatman became demoralized and allowed the red-sweatered players to score three touchdowns.

Yeatman's single touchdown was scored on a blocked kick in the third period, which was recovered by Haideman behind Central's goal. The subsequent try for goal was blocked and Yeatman threatened no more. Previous to the touchdown, Yeatman had carried the ball to the Central 10-yard line, largely by passes, but a drop kick failed. The rest of the game Yeatman was usually on the defense.

Central's Scoring.

Central scored early in the opening period. McCready carrying the ball most of the way and going over. Cameron's drop kick was low.

In the second period, an intercepted pass put Central in a position to score a field goal. Brasnell intercepted Blumenkamp's pass and ran with it 40 yards to Yeatman's 15-yard line. Passes and plunges failed and then Cameron, standing on the 25-yard line, registered with a drop kick.

Brown Runs 45 Yards.

A 45-yard run by Brown of Central, on which he scored a touchdown, furnished a thrill in the fourth quarter. Brown got the ball when Blumenkamp dropped a pass. Cameron's drop kick was blocked.

Cristal of Central intercepted a Yeatman pass and ran 35 yards for a touchdown. Hunt's kick failed.

Shortly before the end of the game, McCready intercepted a pass from Smith. Hunt passed 10 yards to Cameron and on the next play, Brasnell circled right end for a touchdown. Hunt again failed to kick goal. There was no further scoring.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Vindicated at Last.

THE football season just ended saw the forward pass rise to its greatest heights. This play dominated a great majority of the season's play everywhere and determined the victory in almost every game.

The rushing and kicking game have become secondary to the passing game and the once despised tail of the game now wags the old dog.

The old guard can hardly recognize the good old pastime.

Contrast today with that Thanksgiving day in St. Louis in 1906 when the new rules, permitting the forward pass for the first time, went into vogue.

That year all of the East and 90 per cent of the West turned the proboscis contemptuously skyward when the pass was mentioned. It was an interloper and not wanted. It couldn't possibly make good, and one season would see it relegated to oblivion. That was the verdict of the old guard coaches.

Enter Mr. Cochems.

BUT on the Thanksgiving day mentioned, one Edward Cochems of Wisconsin, coach of the St. Louis University football team, sent his unknown eleven to victory over the strong Iowa Hawkeyes by the unbelievable score of 21-0. And the long forward pass, devised by Cochems and executed by Robinson and Schneider, won the game and made history.

Lieutenant Hackett, who refereed that game, declared afterwards that in none of the contests in which he had officiated has he ever seen the like. He asserted the number and variety of passing plays shown was a revelation and would wake up the East.

It did—after fifteen years! Only today is the Cochems pass in general use.

Exit Eddie Cochems.

THE following year the pass was almost in disfavor to as great an extent as in 1906. But along came Cochems again, Thanksgiving day, and beat Nebraska (which had tied Minnesota) 39 to 0—probably the most humiliating defeat the Cornhuskers ever suffered.

That began to open the eyes of the football world. From that day the light was seen. The East was the last to wake up and then only when defeat forced it upon them.

And the man who discovered the pass, Cochems!

He has passed out of the coaching picture. At times he has tried to get back. But despite his wonderful record here, no school seems to want his services. He was driven to make his fortune in coal, or something like that.

As We See It.

CHICAGO dispatches inform us that Mat Champion Ed Lewis is to tour Europe soon, to mop up over there.

Here's your hat, Ed. What's your hurry?

Jack Dempsey is also reported as considering a mopping up trip abroad. But nobody will offer Jack Dempsey his hat, to hurry him on his way.

The reason is obvious—Dempsey is a CHAMPION, one willing to meet any and all comers. Lewis is a champion sidestepper meeting only those whom he does not fear or who are known to his manager.

One takes a chance; the other takes the money.

Lewis may be the greatest wrestler in the world, but we go on record as saying that we know of but one more unsatisfactory champion in athletic history than Lewis—

He was Jess Willard.

At that Willard had something on Lewis. He ADMITTED he was just out for the coin.

Time to Change.

THE Board of Education established a rule some years ago prohibiting St. Louis high school teams from playing outside of the city. It has been enforced rigidly ever since, somewhat to the narrowing of the high school athletic sphere.

The extreme of restrictive legislation seems to have been reached in this respect when the rule is made to apply even to county teams. Soldan High School, it is reported, has applied to the School Board for permission to play Normandy High at basketball.

That's dragging the well-known camel through the needle's eye with a vengeance.

Time to expand the city limits and take in the county so that our high school teams may play the county fives.

In passing, it may be said that many St. Louis high schools have violated the letter of the rule in this and other seasons by playing games outside the city limits—at Washington University Field.

Y. M. H. A. to Play.

The Y. M. H. A. will play its final football game of the season this afternoon at Junior High campus, opposing the fast Laclede Athletic Club.

Art Longworth, Champion Putter, Tells How to Get the Ball in the Hole

THE BACK STROKE • • • • • • THE ART LONGWORTH STANCE

Missouri Pro Title-Holder Uses a Novel One-Hand Grip and Stroke, Keeping the Club Open—He Declares Any Golfer Who Practices Hard Can Become Good Putter.

The following is the first of a series of 20 articles on golf by Art Longworth, instructor at the St. Louis Country Club, and champion among Missouri professionals. In these articles, Longworth will give advice on the use of all clubs, explain common mistakes by players, and tell how to meet difficult situations on the links. In connection with this series, Longworth will answer questions on golf for readers of the Post-Dispatch.

By Art Longworth,
Professional at the St. Louis Country Club.
(Copyright, 1924.)

THE average par for a golf course is 72, or an average of four strokes a hole. If par for a hole is three, one shot is allowed to reach the green and two putts to put the ball in the hole. If par is four, two shots are allowed to the green and two putts. On par five holes, three are to reach the green and two to go down. In other words, in fixing par on a 72-par course, 36 shots are allowed from the tee and through the fairways and 36 on the greens. Just half the shots allowed are for putts. I emphasize this to show importance of putting, a feature which too frequently is overlooked by men who spend hours practicing with their driver or iron and never think of devoting more than a few minutes to their putting.

I have heard it said that good putters are born and not made, and I want to cite my experience to refute that assertion.

Four years ago I was just a fair putter. Recently I have been told by such stars as Jock Hutchison and Bobby Cruickshank that I am one of the best professional putters in the game. I am stating this, not as a boast, but to drive home the point that any person who practices hard can become a good putter.

THE ART LONGWORTH GRIP

The One-Hand Grip.

I ATTRIBUTE my success as a putter primarily to my grip, which is different from that ordinarily employed. I grip the club and stroke the ball with my right hand only. My reason for this is that you can get a more even stroke with one hand. When both hands are gripping the club the hands have a tendency to work against each other. I want smoothness and firmness in stroking the ball and I can get this only when my two hands work as one. It is obvious that this can be accomplished only by having one of the hands, one of the arms, working as the "master hand," with the left hand doing the right hand's bidding. My grip, the key of my putting style, makes this possible.

In taking your stance, place the head of the putter in back of the ball and take your position, with a square stance, with your weight forward and on the left foot. The ball should be opposite the left instep and the feet about 18 inches apart. Both elbows should rest lightly against the body. As illustrated in the accompanying photo, the knees are relaxed. You cannot putt stiff-legged.

Keep the Putter Open.

NOW for the grip: Perhaps the accompanying photograph will tell more than words. Note the forefinger of the left hand. It overlaps the fingers of the right hand which grips the club shaft. Both thumbs are on the shaft, but the grip, with the left forefinger outside and pointing down, virtually takes the left hand out of the stroke. Study the picture and practice gripping the club in the way illustrated.

Do not sway the body or move the head in making the putt. Use a short back stroke and follow through with your club head.

In following through, keep the face of the putter open, that is with the toe of the club head turned out. Do not roll the right hand over the left. You should be able to see the face of your putter after stroking the ball.

Always rap the ball firmly and be up to the hole. That is old advice but it can't be emphasized too much. Give the ball a chance. The hole will never come to meet your ball. It is better to go past the hole a bit, then if your putt is on the line it will have a chance to drop in.

In sighting for a putt I always place the club head behind the ball and adjust my stance to the line of the putt. Then I place my club head in front of the ball to aid in getting my direction. In this way I have three objects to sight for my straight line to the cup, the ball, clubhead and hole.

Study the Ground.

OF course, each putt has to be studied, and the speed of the green and roll of ground must be taken into consideration.

I would advise starting with easy putts of, say, 18 inches, gradually working back to the longer putts as confidence is gained.

No one can teach the art of gauging distance in putting. But if you will learn this grip and stance and practice faithfully I am confident that you will cut strokes off your score. The individual may vary the stance a bit. For instance, a tall man will have his feet farther apart in putting than a small man. But the grip is the key to putting straight. One hand must do it, if there is to be freedom of movement and the grip makes that possible.

Study the grip, study the stance. The stance may vary a bit with the individual. The distance between the feet will vary according to the height of the player. Sight your putts carefully and if there is anything you care to inquire about, write your questions and I will try to help solve your problems.

The next article in the Art Longworth series will be on "Short Approaches—the Run-up shot." Longworth is the best man in the St. Louis district at this phase of golf.

Vespers Hold New York Club to Scoreless Tie

ball into the net for the winning goal.

George Corrigan and Irv Wimer both failed of goals when well-directed shots glanced off the goal posts. In each instance, however, Renzulli was in good position to clear.

Vespers Show Improvement.

In fairness to the visitors, it may be said that the Vespers played a better game in all departments than they had displayed at any previous time this season. The work of Scott and Hand at fullback was always good. Scott's strong kicking serving to reverse the order of attack many times. Hand was guilty of one misplay when he inadvertently centered the ball, giving Carlson a fine opening. However, Hand's stopping of forwards and his anticipation of enemy passes was so excellent that the one error was forgotten.

Oster, Burke and Fink were clever defenders, although their feeding of forwards was miserable as compared with similar efforts of the visiting halfbacks. The job of the local halfbacks was a much bigger one than that of the opposing line for the short passing of the New York forwards was at times very brilliant.

St. Louis Backs Speedy.

The speed of the St. Louis backs, in hurrying any opponent who appeared likely to take a shot, kept the Indiana men hustling and probably was largely responsible for their inability to score. To give them a bit of time with their shots would have spelled disaster.

While Manager Viberg used the great Carlson at inside left to open the game, he switched him to center in the second half, replacing Crilley with Shaw at inside left. This combination appeared to be much more effective.

One apparently "pet" play of the visitors which failed to materialize as planned was the kick-ahead by an inside forward in which Carlson was asked to beat the St. Louis backs to the ball. While Hand and Scott are not the fastest fullbacks in the local league, they were so well drilled in breaking up this sort of attack that they were at all times able to reach the ball first.

Levin Is Outstanding Star.

This afternoon, when Indiana lines up against the Ben Millers, they will see something new in the matter of a racing attack which they themselves tried yesterday to employ.

Duggan at outside right for the visitors was not up to his game. Sundberg, right halfback, demonstrated that he knows something about rough tactics in his jousts with Joe McCarthy but the local lad seldom came out second best.

The outstanding star of the day was Fullback Levin. His kicks were always powerful and well directed and he had a faculty for breaking up the local attack which must have been quite discouraging to McCarthy, Becker and Tracy. He is a big fellow and a clean player.

The best dribbler on the field was Schylander. He found a worthy opponent in Halfback Oster who usually beat the visitor to any high pass but Schylander's artful dodging and clever manipulation of the ball was very attractive.

This afternoon's game will start at 2:15 p. m., with Phil Kavanaugh as referee.

Manger Bill Foley of the Ben Millers said last night that he would use Peterson at right halfback rather than Eddie Croak. In other respects the team will appear as usual.

No major changes will be made in the lineup of the visitors, Manager Viberg said after yesterday's game. One of his best players, Left Fullback Ferrier, is not with the club. He was injured last Sunday and remained in New York.

Yesterday's game was viewed by about 1000 persons.

Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the American Soccer League, of which the Indiana club is a member, came to St. Louis to see the games. His reports large crowds attending the American League games in the East.

Open Champion Sought Longworth For Putting Lessons

ART LONGWORTH, author of the accompanying instructive article on putting, is recognized as the best putter, professional or amateur, in the St. Louis district. Longworth's fame as a putter is not purely local. Cyril Walker, present open champion, sought out Longworth at San Antonio, Tex., last February and took putting lessons from him. Joe Turnesa and Henry Ciuci are other professionals who have consulted Longworth.

Jimmy Manion, Trans-Mississippi champion and leading amateur golfer in the St. Louis district, recently told Longworth he was going to adopt Longworth's style of putting. "Once I get them in the hole so much better than I do that I'm going to try your stuff," Manion said.

Longworth introduced a new style of putting in St. Louis. The accompanying article explains the style employed by Longworth and the photographs illustrate the grip, which is the novel feature of Longworth's style, and his stance, which is orthodox.

Fordham Defeats Georgetown, 9-6

Victory for New York Team Is First in Six Years Over Washingtonians.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Remarkable open field running by Earl Graham, Fordham quarterback, which resulted in a touchdown in the first period, and a field goal kicked by the same player in the final quarter gave the New York eleven its first victory over Georgetown in six years at the Polo Grounds today, 9 to 6.

Graham broke away for a 48-yard sprint early in the game which took the ball to the Washingtonians' five-yard line. After Manning had failed, Graham pierced Georgetown's right tackle and dodged his way to a touchdown.

The Washington eleven tied the score at the beginning of the second period, Metzer and Hagerty having made spirited dashes in the closing minutes of the previous quarter. Gaffey scored the touchdown. Neither team was able to make the extra point.

In the last period Graham raced from mid-field to Georgetown's 30-yard line whence a forward pass hurled to Manning took the ball to the five-yard line. Here Georgetown held and on the fourth down Graham booted a field goal from the 15-yard line.

PICKENS TROPHY IS AWARDED TO ALABAMA AS CONFERENCE WINNER

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 29.—The University of Alabama football team was today awarded the Pickens trophy, given by Champ Pickens of Alabama to the Southern Conference champion. Alabama was the unanimous choice of 27 Southern sports writers.

Vanderbilt, who won the cup last year, surrendered it to Alabama. Three victories are required to obtain to permanent possession. Alabama's name will be engraved on the cup along with that of Vanderbilt. Alabama will retain the cup until the 1925 winner is announced.

The point system was used in determining the winner of the cup. Each member of the committee was asked to make first, second, third and fourth choice. First choice counted four points, second choice three, third choice two and fourth choice one.

Centre College, which defeated Alabama, is not a member of the conference.

The results were as follows:

Alabama 108 points, Georgia 67 points, Washington and Lee 61 points, Tulane 13 points, Florida 12 points, Vanderbilt 2 points.

BILLIKENS TO CHOOSE CAPTAIN AT BANQUET

The Student Conclave of St. Louis University will give the annual dinner to the football squad of the university at the American Annex at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, Dec. 2.

An effort is now being made to have as many of the former letter men and other alumni present as is possible, and the responses to date have been most encouraging to the promoters of the affair.

One feature of this annual affair is the election of a captain of the team for the coming year, and it is expected that members of the athletic council of the university will have some important statements to make concerning the schedule for next year. It is known that the athletic authorities of the Grand avenue institution have been in correspondence with some of the best teams in the country.

Alumni and former students of the university who wish to attend Tuesday night's affair can obtain tickets from the Rev. Theodore J. Schulte, S. J.

By EDWARD W. COCHRANE,

Referee of the Nebraska-Oklahoma, Drake-Iowa State, Missouri-Kansas Aggies, Iowa State-Nebraska Wesleyan, Kansas-Oklahoma Aggies, Drake-Grinnell, Kansas-Washington, Drake-Kansas Aggies, and other games.

BECAUSE of the fact that the Missouri Valley conference championship football struggle of 1924, which was brought to a close Thanksgiving day, has been the most even and the most hectic in the history of the organization, it is by no means an easy task to select the eleven men who so stood out above their rivals that they are entitled to the honor positions on the first mythical all-star team. Every feature of play has been carefully considered in making the selection, each man qualifying in his respective position as both a defensive and offensive power. Eight of the nine conference members are represented. Missouri, Nebraska and Drake, each placed two men. The other five placed one each and Washington was the only team which did not land a place, due to the fact that that team had a bad record for the year and did not have the material to rank with the rest of the field.

It was not difficult to select some of the men on the first team because they stood head and shoulders above the other candidates, while in other cases men placed on the second team were almost on a par with those on the first. There were also some men who are not on the two teams, but are so close that they missed places by a very narrow margin.

Smith Outstanding Star.

Of the outstanding men, Clyde Smith of Missouri, at center, had little serious opposition. He is also captain because he is one of the smartest players in the conference, shown by his able leadership of the Tiger eleven in 1923 and his services eagerly sought by Capt. Neal on the 1924 team. Smith rarely makes a bad pass, is a power on offense and one of the best defensive men in the organization. His work on defense has been a feature all year.

Ben Lingenfelter of Drake is another star. His end of the Drake team, with Stocking, a second team man, beside him, has made that team a stone wall. It was Lingenfelter who scooped the fumble that paved the Kansas Aggies. Not only is he a sure tackler, a speedy end to get down on punts, a splendid receiver of forward passes, but he can be brought into the backfield at any time and prove a splendid plunger. Lingenfelter is the most versatile end in the conference.

Fighting Tackles.

Brown of the Kansas Aggies at the other end, is a different type than Lingenfelter. He is very strong on defense, but also holds his own with the opposition on offense, especially in snagging passes. Brown has an ideal disposition and would make a good captain.

Babe Smith of Kansas and Ed Wier of Nebraska are as aggressive and good fighters, as the conference has had in years at the tackle positions. Both sturdy, seldom hurt and always giving their teams their best, they are the best tackles in the conference. Smith is the outstanding man of the Kansas team and Wier the best line man of the Cornhuskers.

Schmidt, captain of Iowa State, has been a tower of strength at guard. His work in making holes for the Behm boys to plunge through has helped Iowa State to establish such a splendid record. Duke of Grinnell has played at tackle most of the year. He is given guard position because he is too good to be left off the first team, but cannot beat the other two tackles out of a position.

Great Backfield.

Any coach in the conference would figure the championship won in advance could he start the season with such a backfield as Oresbough of Drake, Bond of Missouri, Rhodes of Nebraska and Bristow of Oklahoma.

What a combination. Orebaugh and Bristow are triple-threat men, each can kick, the Drake quarterback being the best punter of the two and an equal of the long punting Zuber of Kansas. Both can receive passes as well as pass. Bristow is a big percentage of the Oklahoma team. He was the man who beat Nebraska—the one big triumph for the Sooners this year—when he can run ends, plunge the line or do anything that can be asked of a fullback, including powerful defensive play. Put Bristow on a star team and he would be one of the greatest backs the conference has ever had. He is very fast and smart.

Bond of Missouri is a versatile player and the best man in the entire backfield. His work against Kansas for two years has been a feature of Missouri's attack while of Nebraska completes the great quartet because of his superior line-plunging ability.

On the second team are men who came close to landing on the first. J. Behm and Roberts have featured in the victories for Iowa State. Moran has been the one star back of the Grinnell team, who helped to beat Iowa State and Coe. Zuber of Kansas can pass, punt and run well enough to land on the first team, but his weakness is on the defense. In another year this youngster will correct that.

Zuber had no trouble landing on the second team as fullback, and in another year, if he continues to improve, he will be a sure shot for the first.

Sloan of Drake is good enough for the first team if it were not for the fact that such ends as Munn and Lingenfelter are in the conference. Collins of Nebraska was hard pressed by Walsh of Missouri for second place. Stocking and VanDyne of Drake and Missouri, respectively, gave the first team tackles a close run. Haley of Kansas and McGee of the Kansas Aggies are splendid guards—just about as good as the first team men. Hutchinson and Longstreet of Iowa State had a battle for the center position, with the Nebraskan winning out because of his versatility. He can play three positions well.

Other Splendid Players.

In making the selections such men as Capt. Burt of Kansas, N. Behm and Nave of Iowa State, Ambelang of Drake, Sweet of Grinnell, Walsh of Washington, McLuen and Everett of Drake, Mayer of Iowa State, Bloodgood of Nebraska, Davidson of Kansas, Lewis, Whiteman and Palmero of Missouri, Ewart of Drake and Harter and Ballard of the Kansas Aggies gave the first and second team men close battles for their places.

Principia Loses Only 3 Regulars

Browne, Stitt and Merriam Will Graduate Before 1925 Football Season.

By Davison Obear.

Principia Academy will start the 1925 football season with the loss of three regulars of this year's team. The three players who will be graduated are Carey Browne, Robert Stitt and Wallace Merriam.

Browne was captain of the 1924 team and played fullback. He aided the team considerably due to proved himself to be a capable his line plunging ability and also leader of the squad. Stitt, the quarterback, not only ran the signals well, but was a splendid open field runner. Merriam played in the halfback position during most of the contests this season. He was particularly good at secondary defense andq on a number of occasions prevented the opposing backs from gaining much ground.

The Principia teams of 1922 and 1923 were undefeated, but this year Coach Alfred Marquard, former Washington University star, was confronted with a harder task. He was forced to build an almost entirely new team. Capt. Browne and Hagens, a tackle, were the only regulars returning to school.

The Academy played seven games, winning three, losing three, and tying one game. Principia scored 55 points to 39 scored by opposing teams. Central Wesleyan College was the only eleven able to score more than one touchdown against the Academy.

Principia opened the season at Francis Field with a victory over Yeatman High School. The following week Principia met defeat at the hands of Soldan High, leaders of the Interscholastic League. In the two previous years the teams battled to a tie score in each contest.

The third game against Cleveland ended in a scoreless tie.

Principia surprised by defeating the Missouri Military Academy team from Mexico, Mo., in the next game. Missouri had won from Soldan, 8 to 7, and appeared two touchdowns better than Principia.

Coach Marquard's players defeated Western Military Academy, 13 to 0. Blackburn College won from Principia on Nov. 14 while Central Wesleyan defeated the local team the following week. The summary of games played by Principia this season is as follows:

Principia 19, Yeatman 0.
Soldan 10, Principia 0.
Principia 0, Cleveland 0.
Principia 7, Missouri M. A. 0.
Principia 13, Western M. A. 0.
Blackburn College 10, Principia 2.
Central Wesleyan College 19, Principia 14.

Total points, Principia 55; opponents 39. Games played 7, won 3 lost 3, tied 1.

St. Louisans' Dogs Win More Prizes

Dr. Minges' Dick's Jersey Prince and Wilson's Oxford Heather Shine at Sedalia.

Two St. Louis dog fanciers again carried off a large share of honors in a representative field trial when dogs owned by W. W. Minges and Graham Wilson won second and third places in the Missouri field trials at Sedalia last Wednesday.

Dr. Minges' Dick's Jersey Prince, the dog which won second place in the all-age stake at Sparta, Ill., was awarded second place in the all-age event at Sedalia. He was second to the setter Buddy. Tim Pallacho, owned by Dr. Minges, took third place in the same event.

Wilson's Oxford Heather, winner of the Derby event at Sparta, proved that its victory was well deserved by taking second place in the Derby at Sedalia.

These dogs are entered in the trials at Stuttgart, Ark., Dec. 29, and will be started in the United States field trials at Grand Junction, Tenn., Jan. 12. This is considered the championship bird dog trial of the year.

The athletic board, however, has not finally approved the contest nor can it do so until an opponent is definitely named. When the opponent is named Notre Dame will be glad to complete all other preliminaries, Father Walsh said.

Langford, Untrained, Put Joe Jeanette Out After Failing in Eleven Fights

Hard Swing From Right Knee, One in Series of Punches Put Over to Please Crowd When He Was Tired, Met Opponent on Chin.

In this excerpt from Sam Langford's life story, as told through a representative of the Post-Dispatch, the negro pugilist describes his many meetings with Joe Jeanette, another negro who made a name for himself in the ring.

UP to 1916 I had fought Joe Jeanette 11 times and I never was able to knock him out. I had started fighting him way back in 1905, and I just couldn't drop that boy for "10."

Sometimes he'd win the decision, sometimes I'd win it. Then it would be a draw. Every time we fought up to 1916, I went into the ring hoping I could knock him loose from his hair. I hit him about 100,000 punches and I hit him with everything but the referee's necktie—but I never could put Joe away.

Along in 1916 came a chance to fight Joe again, this time in Syracuse. I had got out of the idea that I could ever put him out. And, anyway, after that Syracuse bout had been made, we were offered another fight somewhere else for a couple of weeks later. So, not wishing to knock us out of that fight, even if I could, and feeling I just couldn't flatten Joe, anyway, I never trained a single minute for that fight.

Jeanette Rushes Fight.

JOE saw I was out of shape when I climbed through the ropes. And right there I guess he decided he'd do what he had been wanting to do for 11 years, and that was to knock me out.

He came tearing in at me like a wild man and pounded me all around the ring. He got awfully, awfully rough. That Joe is a lovely boy, except when he gets rough. Then he's bad. And bad boys just must be spanked.

So I began mixing it with Joe, and I was puffing like a freight engine and pretty soon Joe was puffing, too. And then Joe slowed up and I was so tired I just didn't know if it was Syracuse we were fighting in or Chicago, or where it was.

We were to go 10 rounds. We had gone six. Joe knew by that time that he couldn't stop me. And I was sure that even if I hit Joe on the chin with a shovel I couldn't put him away. But the customers had paid to see 10 rounds—not six or seven. They wanted a little action the rest of the way. Joe was still willing and he came in nasty like in the seventh.

Jeanette Has a Collision.

I HAD to do something to make it look good to the crowd. So I began throwing a lot of those haymakers and when I'd throw one and Joe would jump back the customers just laughed themselves sick.

Then something happened.

I took a right hand off my knee and I closed my eyes, playful like, and let it fly, thinking it would miss Joe by about a foot.

But Joe decided to rush me at that particular moment. The crazy swing caught Joe Jeanette squarely on the point of his chin, and the thing I had tried to do with 100,000 serious punches had been done with a joke swing.

I saw Joe stagger. I saw his knees bend. I thought there was some trick in it, and that Joe was trying to fake me into a trap and then maybe knock me dead. But no. Joe Jeanette crumpled to the floor and was counted out, and of all the surprised people in the place, I was the most surprised of all.

Joe had gone out—so dead, cold out, that it was about 10 minutes before he really came back to life.

Blue Jay Eleven Won Nine Games

Undefeated Westminster Team Shut Out Seven of Its Opponents.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FULTON, Mo., Nov. 29.—The Westminster College Blue Jays of Fulton, with nine straight victories to their credit, several of which were conference battles of the Missouri College Athletic Union, have emerged from a gruelling rugby campaign with the 1924 title in their grasp. The Blue Jays were the only aggregation of the new college organization to go through the grid season without a defeat.

Seven of the victories of the Blue Jays were shutouts for their opponents. Five of these came in succession at the beginning of the season. The first score to be made against them was by the Missouri Wesleyans of Cameron and come after second-string men had been inserted in the Westminster front. This also was true in the game with Central Wesleyan of Warrenton, who ran up nine points against the Blue Jays, the biggest score made against Westminster all season. In this game also the second-string squad was used in the last two quarters.

The Blue Jays' poorest game probably was against Targio, about the middle of the season. Westminster won this 7 to 0. The game with the Drury Panthers of Springfield also was a tight one and was won by the Blue Jays by one touchdown.

Westminster's veteran players, however, declared that the hardest game of the year was against their old-time rivals, the Central College Eagles at Fayette Thanksgiving day, which was captured by a score of 13 to 0. Dope had the Blue Jays odds on favorites, but the Eagles showed a wonderful defense and only the fighting spirit of the Fulton Presbyterians in the last quarter put two touchdowns across.

Westminster scored 160 points during the season, as against 16 for their opponents. The record for the season is as follows: Westminster 21, Missouri Military an 9; Westminster 13, Central 0.

BRAVES REPORTED FOR SALE AT LOW PRICE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Baseball gossips are retailing a story that the Boston Braves are for sale and that the price of the franchise is less than $400,000. According to insiders the stockholders are not willing to stand further losses and the club officials, as a result, are unable to obtain new players.

Manager Bancroft has been in Europe with the Giants and the White Sox and has not communicated with the Boston owners since the end of the baseball season. The National League, it is said, is considerably worried over the situation in Boston and will take it up at the December meeting in this city.

LACK OF MORALE COST BOXER FRED FULTON FAME AND WEALTH

'Ferocious Fred' Flivvered in All His Big Bouts

Boxer Recently Arrested in California, Easily Terrified by Opponents.

ALSO OWNED A WEAK JAW

Former Plasterer Wasted Several Opportunities to Make Fortune.

By Tom Andrews,
Editor of Boxing Guide and Author of "Ring Battles of Centuries."

"Ferocious" Frederick Fulton, the fighter with the lady-like heart, is once more in bad with the boxing world, this time in California, and at a time when it means so much to the game in the Golden State, a new law legalizing boxing having just been passed there.

The latest heavyweight sensation—Tony Fuente—a Mexican of Los Angeles, was going along like a real race horse, with offers galore from all parts of the country. His manager, Fred Winsor, saw wonderful prospects ahead, and there are, but this Fulton scandal just brought to light at Culver City, a suburb of Los Angeles, has caused an upset that few looked for.

It was the opening of the Culver City Club on a big scale and Fuente and Fulton were looked to for a real battle. Instead Fuente had Fred stretched on the canvas in less than 30 seconds after the call of time. It looked great for a time and Tony was a hero; then came the aftermath, with reports of fake, frame-up and the like. Fulton was jailed, accused of being a party to a frame-up, and others were under suspicion. It was alleged by officials that Fulton had agreed to "lay down" for a consideration of $7500.

Fulton Dazed at Start.

Fulton was strenuous in his denials, claiming that the first blow to his temple had dazed him so that he never recovered his senses in time to resume fighting. His manager, Jack Reddy, swore he knew nothing of any "deal," and forthwith announced that he was through as manager of the former plasterer.

It is a bad start for the game in Southern California, but better that it comes now than later. It shows plainly that the game needs strong hands at the helm and the "Fulton affair" may prove a blessing in disguise. There are plenty of able men on the Coast to handle the game in just as efficient a manner as in New York or other states.

To the casual observer it does not seem possible that the men interested in the promoting of the game would take a chance of trying to work a "frame-up" on the eve of legalizing the sport there. However, if any parties should be found guilty the new boxing commission should see that they are barred from the game.

Knocked Willard Down.

Fulton has had a rather varied career in the boxing game. He was formerly a plasterer at Rochester, Minn., but boxed for his own amusement occasionally. When Jess Willard was champion he toured the West and called at Rochester. Fulton boxed him and from all accounts knocked the champion down. That gave Frederick the impression that he could beat all the champions and he soon started after Willard. That was in 1915.

Mike Collins, now managing Jimmy Delaney and other boxers, was conducting a club at Rochester and matched Fulton up there. Mike said that when Fred fought Carl Morris he was so afraid that they had to threaten him to keep him in the ring, as Billy McCarney had frightened him nearly to frenzy by telling him that Morris usually killed his man.

Later Collins put in much time with Fulton and built him up, to be quite a card, so much so that he was matched with Willard to fight for the title at New Orleans, but the fight did not take place.

He was booked to meet Porky Flynn in New Orleans as a preliminary to the Willard match, but he took poor care of himself and made a miserable showing with Flynn, so much so that the club canceled the Willard match. Fred had other chances and as a rule bungled them the same way.

Then came his chance with Jack Dempsey at Harrison, N. J. Collins had $100,000 worth of contracts in his pocket if Fulton made a decent showing with Dempsey. The plasterer was coached what to do, but when they stepped to the ring center Frederick forgot everything he ever knew and stood there like a statue with his arms half down, as if to say "Well, here I am, now let her go." Dempsey did "let her go," first a left poke to the stomach and then a right haymaker to the jaw and it was all over in 15 seconds.

Fulton came near getting the same thing when he fought Frank Moran in New Orleans. He acted as if in a trance the first round and came near taking the count, but in the second braced up and in the third put Moran out with an uppercut. The fact is that Fulton has a weak jaw and no heart when he should show his courage. He is 24 years of age and through as a fighter.

Oxford Seniors Win.

By the Associated Press.
OXFORD, England, Nov. 29.—The Seniors defeated the Freshmen today in the usual football game between the American students at Oxford. "Bill" Carey, former Cornell University star, placed two goals from the field. The English spectators were highly amused.

Dad's in Trouble Again

FRED FULTON AND HIS LITTLE SON.
Fulton, who has had many ups and downs in his boxing career, is "down" again. He is out on bond in California, following his arrest on charges of faking in a boxing match, in which he ostensibly was knocked out in 37 seconds by Tony Fuenta.

Mayor Carrell Is First in Feature At Jefferson Park

General Cardona Sets Pace but Tires Near End of Race.

By Fred Digby,
Sports Editor of the New Orleans Item.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 29.—Form players were rewarded for the first time this afternoon at Jefferson Park when J. D. Wilson's 4-year-old gelding, Mayor Carrell, won the feature event of the program, which was without a handicap event. Gen. Cadorna finished second. Molinero was third. J. A. Mooney was astride the winner and was largely responsible for that racer's victory.

Away well, Mooney did not allow Mayor Carrell to go to the front, but sent him in close behind the pace being set by Gen. Cadorna and saved much ground on the turns. Upon reaching the stretch, Mooney let the Wilson gelding have his head, and he bounded to the front to win easily by a length and a half.

Gen. Cadorna was on his good behavior and left the webbing like a flash; but the pace he made was too much, and he could not stall off the rush of Mayor Carrell when the latter made his bid.

Sparkle Star Graduates.

By virtue of her victory in the opening dash at five furlongs, R. A. Fairbrain's Sparkle Star graduated from the maiden class, her margin at the end of the dash was a half length over the Green Tree stable's Cup O'Tea, which ruled the favorite in the betting, while the latter maintained an advantage of a head over Rolville with the balance of the field closely bunched.

Soon after the break Rolville was taken to the front and maintained the lead until reaching the final turning pole, when Sparkle Star, in the center of the track, made her bid which resulted in her victory. Cup O'Tea was hitting on all cylinders after working her way through the field along the outside.

Ten-to-One Shot Wins.

Mrs. M. F. Shapoff's Piedmont, at 10-1, won the second contest on the card, an affair for 3-year-olds and up at six furlongs, which resulted in an interesting contest. Quanah and First Call, outsiders in the betting, finished behind Piedmont in the order named.

Willie Fronk got Piedmont away from the gate in a hurry and immediately sent his charge out to make his own pace, but it was under hard urging that the Dick Finnell gelding took down the purse. Quanah was always a contender and for a time it appeared as though he would wear down the winner.

Another Favorite Fails.

The third successive favorite of the afternoon met defeat when S. N. Holman's Elector came home a length in advance of Elsass, the public's choice in the third race on the card. Buttress came from far back to be third. The winner was cleverly handled by Donald Mergler.

Elsass made the pace from the break with Elector at his throat latch in the run in through the stretch. After making the bend into the lane that leads to the finish line, Mergler urged Elector to the front and had his charge to win handily. All of the bad breaks of the racing went to R. A. Fairbrain's Buttress. After getting away none too well, she raced wide making the stretch turn.

CHAS. O. PFIEL IS SLATED FOR RE-ELECTION AS GOLF PRESIDENT

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Formal notice of an annual meeting on Dec. 21 at Chicago of the Western Golf Association was sent out today by Secretary Joseph W. Busch, but only election of officers and the usual routine were indicated as subjects for consideration.

Charles O. Pfeil of Memphis is slated for a third term as president and Melvin A. Taylor of Chicago and James D. Standish of Detroit are to be re-elected vice presidents and A. C. Allen of Chicago, treasurer. Robert McCutting of Chicago is to take the place of Busch as secretary and Henry A. Gardner of Chicago is to succeed Albert R. Gates as counsel.

It is thought that most of the tournaments will go to clubs outside Chicago next year, as all of them were held here last summer to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the association, which has grown to be the largest golf organization in the world as to the number of active club members.

No changes in rules have been announced, but renewed effort to aid in the building of new links will be made.

Sumpter Passes Swinging to Win Bowie Handicap

Sandmole Colt Takes Lead in Last Couple of Strides to Beat Favorite.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
BOWIE, Md., Nov. 29.—Robert Odom's Sumpter, a bay colt by Sandmole-Isirose, with Coltiletti up, was returned the winner of the Endurance Handicap over a route of one mile and the feature of the final day's racing. Harry Payne Whitney's Swinging was second. Arbitration third and Primrose fourth.

Sumpter's score in the Endurance did not come wholly unexpected. The Odom colt had won his two previous starts over the Bowie strip with such ridiculous ease that he went to the post with a host of friends. Swinging was installed the public choice. Single-loot was second while the entry of Campfire Tales, Primrose and Senalado were also well thought of.

Swinging flattered her supporters by breaking the quickest of all, making the pace to within a sixteenth of the finish, where Sumpter, closing resolutely on the rail, got up in the last couple of strides to win by a short head.

Owner Odom was enriched just $7650 as the result of Sumpter's victory. The Sandmole colt ran the eight furlongs in the very good time of 1.42 2-5.

Guy Bedwell's Senator Norris, displaying the same high-class form which returned him a winner in his two previous starts, took the measure of a better than average band of sprinters in the Final Handicap. Giving anywhere from four to twenty-three pounds to his opposition, the Bedwell colt, meeting with early interference, saved ground on the stretch turn and got up in time to win the decision by a head from Tester. Bill O'Flynn was third.

(Copyright, 1924.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A glimmering hopes that logical contender Harry Wills may have been nursing for a crack at Jack Dempsey's title have been pushed farther into the dim hereafter. The champion and Jack Kearns, his manager, before hopping off for the Golden West, where they plan to spend the Christmas holidays, let fall some talk about a European trip, which if it comes off, will remove them even farther from challenge-hurling distance from the Brown Panther for a long time to come.

Dempsey, it seems, was so pleased with the reception he got on his last visit to Europe that he thinks a bout between himself and some good second-rater would go big on the Continent. It is even reported that he has commissioned a Britisher to look around for a likely prospect to operate upon.

Georges Carpentier has been considered in that connection but it is doubtful if he would consent to have himself battered to pieces by the champion again, even if the crowds were willing to pay for it. Erminio Spalla is gesticulating wildly across the pond, urging Jack to cross over and mix with him. And even poor old Joe Beckett has been spoken of as a sacrificial offering.

Just now the big but clumsy Spaniard, Paolina, looks like about the best bet on the other side; but in his present state of artistic education he would be no match for the champion.

And besides—Paolina is thinking of coming to America for a little "scientific building up." He could not become a new Firpo even under Tex Rickard's expert manipulation if Jack plastered him over there.

Mrs. Potos was taken to the Jackson County jail at Murphysboro last Wednesday, having been unable to pay a $250 fine imposed by Federal Judge English after a jury had convicted her of possession of intoxicating liquor.

Humane Officer Ewing of East St. Louis has investigated the case and is convinced that Mrs. Potos is innocent of the liquor charge. He will appeal to Judge English tomorrow to commute her sentence. Unless she is given leniency by Judge English, Mrs. Potos will have to serve 30 days in jail before obtaining her release by filing a pauper's affidavit.

Mrs. Potos and Felix Venzelato, an employe, were convicted of the liquor charge after prohibition agents testified Venzelato destroyed what they believed to be intoxicating liquor when they entered Mrs. Potos' confectionery, then at Second street and Bowman avenue, with a search warrant last August. They testified Mrs. Potos was not in the confectionery when the raid was made. Ewing said he had been informed that Venzelato was selling liquor in the confectionery without the knowledge of Mrs. Potos.

Before she was taken to jail Mrs. Potos provided her children with sufficient fuel and clothing, but food had to be provided by welfare workers. The six Potos children—two boys and four girls—are from 2 to 14 years old. Anna being the oldest. Their father deserted them two years ago.

AIR SERVICE DEVELOPMENT IS MOST VITAL NEED OF DEFENSE, PERSHING SAYS

Infantry Still Backbone in War, General Reports, but Auxiliaries Are Essential.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—War experience and peacetime tests thus far made do not "altogether warrant" conclusions that either seacoast defenses or battleship protection can be dispensed with, Gen. John J. Pershing asserts in his last annual report as Chief of Staff of the Army, made public today at the War Department.

Summing up both actual experience with airplane bombing results in the World War and subsequent bombing tests against capital ships, the former commander of the American Expeditionary Forces says:

"Of course, some damage was done by aircraft bombing, and it would doubtless be somewhat greater in another war, but until it becomes vastly more probable that at present demonstrated, then it cannot be said that we are in a position to abandon past experience in warfare."

Infantry Backbone of Attack.

Pershing declares, however, that the most vital present need of the army is an increase in the air service and gradual development of its personnel and equipment. Especially because of its ability to observe enemy movement, he declares, the air service is essential to armies in the field, although the infantry is still "the backbone of the attack and the role of other arms is to help it reach the enemy."

"The idea that the principles of warfare have changed and that armed contests will be settled in any other way have nothing substantial in our experience to warrant serious consideration," Pershing adds.

Discussing the army air progress, the report says:

"Our experience in the World War as to airplane production and the training of personnel should be continuously borne in mind by all who appreciate the role of aviation in modern warfare. Early in 1917, it will be ecalled, an appropriation of $600,000,000 was hastily made with what seemed to be an effort to overcome previous inexcusable neglect to make provision even for experimental investigation, to say nothing of preparation for manufacture of airplanes. The voice of criticism for previous inaction was apparently stilled, for the time being, by the loudly heralded purposes to send 50,000 airplanes to the Western front without delay—a declaration that later brought many embarrassing moments to those of us abroad who knew how baseless and boastful such claims were.

Aviation of Great Importance.

"It is a matter of record that even the type of plane to be put in production was not decided upon until several months after we entered the war, and that no American plane was thrown in battle until August, 1918, and only some 600 planes had been sent to the front before the armistice.

"The Air Service has become an essential aid to the armies in the field, especially because of its ability to observe and obtain valuable information as to the immediate enemy battlefront. It is now possible for observers to direct the fire of our artillery from the air, and thus aviation has risen to very great importance as an auxiliary arm.

"Enthusiasts often forget the obligations of military aviation to other troops, and sometimes credit that service with ability to achieve results in war that have not received practical demonstration. Take, for example, the bombing tests last year in the Chesapeake. The manuevers showed that under the most favorable circumstances bombs of destructive size could be dropped with considerable precision. In these exercises, the vessel was at anchor in quiet waters; there was no opposing aviation, nor was there any anti-aircraft used against the bombing planes.

Bombing Planes Altitude Limited.

"Conclusion, from such trials, that aviation can take the place of either seacoast or battle fleet protection do not seem to be altogether warranted. Improvements in the accuracy of antiaircraft artillery appear to be keeping pace with improvements in aviation. Our own experiments against airplanes show that to avoid the danger of destruction they must fly at such a height as to eliminate the probability of accurate firing, and this would especially apply to bombing planes which have a limit as to altitude.

"During the World War extravagant tales of havoc done to enemy cities and installations were often brought back, in good faith, no doubt, by some of our aviators, but investigation after the armistice failed, in the majority of cases, to verify the correctness of such reports. Again, the damage done to the allies by the enemy's bombing craft, including Zeppelins, was almost negligible even from a material point of view, certainly so from a morale point of view and in its effect upon the final results. Of course, some damage was done by aircraft bombing, and it would doubtless be somewhat greater in another war, but until it becomes vastly more probable than at present demonstrated, then it cannot be said that we are in position to abandon past experience in warfare.

Claims as to Poison Gases.

"This brings up claims as to poison gases, and how whole populations can be wiped out, according to some theorists, by dropping gas bombs. The same reasoning exactly applies in this case. Moreover, I am not ready to concede that such inhumane destruction of noncombatants would be undertaken by any civilized nation, even though possible. Its use against troops, though horrible enough, was not, after the first gas attack, so destructive on either side as is generally believed. Here the counter development of the gas mask served as time went on to diminish the number of casualties.

"We are, therefore, logically forced back to the conclusion that armies must still fight our battles—and to win must overcome the opposing forces. The infantry still remains the backbone of the attack and the role of other arms is to help it reach the enemy. All must work in co-operation to that end. The idea that the principles of warfare have changed and that armed contests will be settled in any other way have nothing substantial in our experience to warrant serious consideration.

Air Service Auxiliary Arm.

"The air service on land should remain an auxiliary arm and a very important one in our service, available as now for independent use in mass or otherwise wherever necessary, but always under the orders of the Commander in Chief of the armies. Our air service should be developed to every reasonable extent, both as to personnel and material, and it is especially necessary that aircraft production be established and maintained on such a basis as to be easily expanded in time of emergency."

As one step to improve army air service conditions, Gen. Pershing recommends the training of a "larger proportion" of noncommissioned pilots.

"It was quite frequently stated during the World War," the report says, "that noncommissioned pilots were just as proficient in the mechanics of their profession and quite as likely to follow their leader and devote their whole time to the execution of their mission as many commissioned officers."

RULING IN JOSEPH PARKER'S CASE TO BE MADE TUESDAY

St. Louis Youth Under Sentence of Death in Indiana for Killing Detective.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 29.—Ruling on arguments for the re-opening of the case of Joseph Parker, St. Louis youth now awaiting execution for complicity in the murder of Detective Steve Kendall here last January, will be made Tuesday morning, in the Vigo County Circuit Court.

The arguments were on the supplemental motion to an original motion for a new trial which was overruled last term of court. Parker's attorneys claim that evidence brought out in the trial of Ed Barber, another St. Louis youth and convicted accomplice of Parker in the crime, gives them the right to ask for a new trial of the case. Barber was tried in the Clay County Circuit Court, at Brazil, Ind., and also was sentenced to death.

When Parker was convicted, his attorneys made a motion for a new trial which was overruled. They then appealed to the State Supreme Court.

Both the condemned youths, who are confessed members of the Cuckoo gang of St. Louis, are now in the state prison at Michigan City, where their execution is set for Jan. 16.

BRITISH STAND HAMPERS WORK ON REPARATIONS

Refuses, Alone of Allies, to Agree to Payment of U. S. Under Dawes Plan.

FRENCH WANT TO PLACATE AMERICA

Refunding Proposition to London and Washington Likely to Be on Same Lines.

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT, Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Great Britain has not yet agreed to the right of the United States to reparations from Germany under the Dawes plan. Although France, Belgium and Italy are willing to recognize American claims, British opposition still hampers the work of financial experts who are meeting here to pave the way for a conference of Finance Ministers on reparations. The whole series of financial discussions which must precede the Franco-American debt funding has been delayed.

French willingness for America to share in reparations is actuated by a desire to placate the United States. Belgium and Italy want American participation in reparations as insurance for continuance of payments under the Dawes plan. With the United States getting its share, they feel more sure that Germany will continue to pay.

Wants French to Pay, Too.

It is now understood that the conference of financial ministers will attempt to determine how the Dawes plan reparations shall be paid as well as the question of interallied debts. Winston Churchill, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, is said to be coming to Paris with the intention of finding a way to make the French and Italians pay.

Knowing no way of escape, the French and Italians are preparing funding propositions with long, preliminary moratoriums. The French offer to Britain undoubtedly will be similar to the offer to the United States, so discussion of the interallied debts will have an especial interest in America. Col. James A. Logan Jr. will be present at the conference but will not discuss allied indebtedness to America. That will come later, before the debt funding commission at Washington.

The conference of the financial Ministers, tentatively set for December, probably will not be held until January. Meanwhile, Agent-General Gilbert returned today to Berlin, having raised here the question of legality of the French and British recovery acts, under which both are collecting reparations directly by a levy of 26 per cent on German taxes.

While he is obliged to reimburse German exporters for taxes collected by Britain and France, Gilbert pointed out that the Dawes plan loan to Germany is for internal use. As the monthly average of taxes collected by Britain is more than 15,000,000 gold marks, British action makes a hole in the reparation of 83,000,000 gold marks being collected monthly.

British Collections Largest.

French collections under the recovery act are small compared to those of the British, who already probably are collecting more reparations than entitled. The British have expressed their willingness to turn their surplus over to others, but Gilbert still is doubtful of the legality of the operation.

FACES NEW MURDER CHARGE

Emil Zuke's Sweetheart to Be Arrested as Joint Slayer of Girl.

By the Associated Press.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 29.—When Florence McKinney, 19-year-old sweetheart of Emil Zuke, St. Joseph factory worker and confessed slayer of Cora May Raber, whose body was found late in September, appears in the Berrien County Circuit Court Dec. 8, to face a charge of second-degree murder, she will be re-arrested on a charge of first-degree murder, Charles W. Gore, prosecuting attorney, made known this fact tonight. She is under bail.

Zuke connected his sweetheart with the crime when he said she had aided him in taking the body to the spot where it was found. Prosecutor Gore intimates, however, that it may be shown that Zuke and Miss McKinney planned and executed the crime together.

Girl Suffers Loss of Memory.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 29.—Authorities here who are attempting to identify a young woman found in Chicago a week ago suffering from loss of memory, learned today that a girl giving the name of Florence Adams, was in Des Moines several months ago but returned to Chicago, en route to Evansville, Ind., after deciding not to enter Drake University. The young woman accepted employment with a newspaper here. On the day she was to report for work, her employer received a letter from Chicago saying she was in that city, en route to Evansville, returning there with her mother, who was ill.

CHLORINE TREATMENT FAILS, SAYS NEW YORK BOARD

Finds It Worthless in Most Cases and Harmful in Some, but Army Doctor Defends It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—"We can only reiterate that large numbers of patients are being successfully treated for acute respiratory diseases. Whooping cough shows cure or marked improvement in 70 to 75 per cent of the cases treated. Many children are treated every day."

This statement was made tonight by Col. Harry L. Gilchrist, army medical officer detailed to the Chemical Warfare Service and in charge of the chlorine gas chamber in the Munitions Building here, when his attention was called to the fact that after experimenting in two clinics the New York City Health Department declines to endorse the treatment.

The army's gas chamber here is being enlarged in order to take care of the increasing number of patients.

"Only UNIVERSITY HILLS Was Left and Now University Hills Is Passing Into History"

"ALL in the lifetime of one man. Forty-five years ago, with land abounding, with choice unconfined, James Creveling (we believe there's a strain of canny Scotch in the family) selected for his own a many-acre tract of oak-studded hilltops. The city nestled below, many miles east. What a wonderful estate. And the old Creveling homestead is still standing.

Shrewd James Creveling found his hilltops the magnet of the city's growth—the beacon of the city's westward march. The straight, unbroken path of value drew closer year by year.

Forty-five years (less than a lifetime), the city's finest residential plots grew to, grew around, grew beyond the acres upon which nature had lavished her best, the Creveling hilltops still shut out the city.

It is but a few months since the Creveling estate, the last and the finest of plots for residences in the path of value, became University Hills. The acres became home lots, the old oaks still standing, the hilltops circled with winding drives, the barred gates maintaining the old-time estate privacy.

In the city, yet out of the city; a city of a million; yet only a fortunate few hundred families can live life to the fullest out here on the old Creveling acres.

I would like to think that it was the work of the organization that I have given my all to building up that is making University Hills pass into history in a few month's time. But it isn't. It was the Creveling foresight in selection and the Creveling obstinacy in holding on long after the city was waiting for and wanting those acres for its finest homes.

Cyrus Crane Willmore"

The Closing Chapter of UNIVERSITY HILLS

Before the year closes it will be a closed book. When the Springtime sun coaxes leaves on the barren oaks, University Hills will be the homeland of beautiful residences. Romping youngsters in air that is clear and under skies that are blue, will laugh at fate, for the barred gateways shut out intrusion, and within the hills is a new schoolhouse and a natural park.

Way up here on top of the world nature's topography is unchanged, the private drives and winding parkways, and all the improvements, are built to survive this generation. For University Hills is to be a surpassing homeland for years and years. Restrictions are what you would have them, removed from the uncertainties of zoning measures. University Hills is in the center of University City with all the educational and living facilities attendant.

As a place for a home, where else can compare? But that is not all. Aside from a home, as an investment, where else or what else can compare? A few years ago there was prairie round about. In five years' time University Hills itself increased in value many fold. But now there is no prairie round about. Surrounded by the city's finest homes and highest-priced residential property, there is scarcely any to be had. Directly in the path of value, the upward swing is just started.

In University Hills improvements are made, all restrictions established, all prices so favorable that a record sale has been established. Any of the few remaining lots may be purchased, without advance, on terms that permit extending payments over several years.

This is the closing chapter of University Hills, a wonderful place to live, and of all the lots, only a few remain.

Our Field Office, 7200 Delmar, will be open all day. A representative will furnish any desired information.

"DID THE STEALING OTHERS GOT DOUGH"

Reformed Pickpocket and Former Convict Discusses Futility of Crime.

"I did the stealing and got the excitement, but others got the dough."

Thus Robert W. Fenton, former convict, summarizes his 23 years of picking pockets, during which, he estimates, he collected a hundred thousand or more dollars from "suckers," as he still terms his victims. Speaking Friday at the weekly luncheon of the Exchange Club, Fenton gave his audience first-hand hints on how to make it hard for the crook, and related many of his experiences.

The fruits of his labors, he asserted, went, for the most part, to crooked politicians, fixers, corrupt policemen and professional bondsmen, and he had nothing to show for his life of crime when he left it seven years ago.

Easy to Pick Pockets, He Says.

"It's easy to pick a pocket," he declared, "and the man who carries his wallet in his hip pocket deserves to lose it." "Why," he continued scornfully, "a smart dip doesn't have to put his finger into a hip pocket to lift the leather. He just kicks it out.

"Another thing. Tell your wives not to hide money behind pictures, or under the tablecloth, or in the coffee can in the kitchen. Those are the first places that get the attention of a sneak thief. The best protection for a home or a business place either is a good watchdog. The crook steers clear of a place with a dog, because he doesn't like noise and a dog is sure to make it.

"He isn't worrying about the town bull, the harness cop that walks down the main stream swinging his club. It's easy to keep an eye on the bull, but you can't shut a dog up without making a racket."

Fenton, who says he picked his first pocket when he was 13 years old, is a small man in the forties with sharp blue eyes, a strangely humped nose, and a quick, nervous speech that fairly bristles with words and phrases of the thieves' argot. He has done four penitentiary terms. Two years were spent in the Missouri penitentiary, three in a Canadian prison, two in Texas and 18 months in New York.

Corporation Got Him.

"Corporations got me in every time," he said. "A thief gets along all right as long as he robs individuals, but when he runs up against a corporation he's bound to be put away. A stockman's association in Kansas City landed me in Jefferson City for two years. When I got out I had $400. I got it from the prisoners. There was more thieving, more crapshooting and grafting inside those walls than I ever saw in a similar space on the outside."

Among his "notable jobs," Fenton mentioned a $10,000 pocket-picking experience in Quebec, Canada, in 1901, which he says he accomplished by relieving a messenger of a package while the latter was watching a parade in which were the Duke and Duchess of York. Fenton and other crooks from Chicago had gone to Quebec, he said, because they realized that the visit of the Duke and Duchess would make conditions ideal for their work.

The speaker laid his conversion to a kindly storekeeper in the House of Correction at Chicago who trusted him, and to a chance visit to a mission which he made seven years ago while he was waiting for a rendezvous with three other crooks.

"Overhead Away Too High."

"I come out of the mission and I'm going straight," he said, using the characteristic present tense. "But I've got nothing to show for it as I go down the sidewalk. The crooked politician, the grafting copper and the criminal lawyer have made me for every cent and I start out without a dime.

"Crime doesn't pay and you can't make it profitable. The overhead is way too high and somebody else is always getting what you make. I'm lifting leathers in a big town and I got to pay for protection. I've got to pay for influence when I'm pinched and I've got to pay a lawyer to get me out. The professional bondsman has to get his too. When I get out from under where am I? I'm busted and all my dough is in somebody's pocket."

Fenton, who is lecturing before civic, school and church organizations, will speak this evening at the Maple Avenue M. E. Church, Maple and Belt avenues.

RELATIVELY FIRM TONE TO MARKETS

Condition Called Not Surprising in View of Character of Industrial News and Continued Cheap Money — Conflict of Views.

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Following are the Associated Press stock averages.

	20 Industrials	20 Rails
Saturday	111.40	95.07
Friday	108.21	93.91
Week ago	111.47	95.07
High, 1924	111.47	97.27
Low, 1924	98.17	81.00

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review says:

"Although the markets have shown the effects of profit-taking, they have maintained a relatively firm tone. This is scarcely surprising as industrial news has remained good and money has continued cheap, if yesterday's run-up in the call loan rate due to first of the month operations be disregarded. Steel production has risen further and now approximates 70 per cent capacity. The demand for steel products has improved, a circumstance that is the more remarkable with the winter season approaching. The picture is one of consistent revival extending over a period of four months. Meanwhile money is slightly firmer, but still is available at unusually low rates. Call money on the Stock Exchange during the week has been obtainable at about 2½ per cent. The great bulk of the credit being extended by the Federal Reserve system has been made available at a price well below the 4½ per cent discount rate. The improvement in industry, furthermore, shows every sign of continuing, while the general and apparently well grounded expectation is for an indefinite maintenance of an easy money market.

"Some difference of opinion exists as to the significance of so active a stock market. Some see in it the signs of dangerous public speculation. Others see merely a normal readjustment of investment values in view of changed conditions in agriculture and in Europe, and of the improved political situation. Some see distribution of securities from strong to weak hands; others see accumulation. Some see the culmination of the bull market; others see the beginning of a new era.

Views of Market.

"Not improbably the exaggerated views in both directions are faulty. For some enterprises, such as the railroads, the election does open up a new prospect. In such instances a very definite depressant on prices has been removed. Similarly, the better prospects for scientific tax reduction furnish a basis for an increase in values among the securities of companies that are strong in reserves and that normally would be popular with investors of large means. On the other hand, a great general boom that will carry all enterprises into a land of easy profit seems improbable. Competition in some lines will remain intense, probably for this reason that the stock market has retained a considerable amount of its discriminating character. Finally, it remains to be seen just how big a 2,000,000 share day is. The country is growing all the time; the number of issues listed on the Exchange constantly is expanding. We have had an extended period of small turnovers in securities. It is just possible that after a year or two we may look on a 2,000,000 share day as not tremendous after all."

"Certainly the active markets seem to be making surprisingly small demands on the credit system. Loans on stocks and bonds have expanded little; the increase in Federal Reserve Bank credit is almost entirely in the form of acceptances that have financed exports. A speculation that is financed with the speculators' own funds obviously is something quite different from one that is had at the expense of bank credit and that comes into competition with a demand for funds for business purposes. While the situation will bear careful watching, there is little as yet to rouse fears with regard to the future stability of our price and credit structure.

Reserve Bank Policy.

"A certain amount of criticism is being directed against the Federal Reserve Banks on the score of their open market policies. It is averred that their purchases of short-term paper represent credit inflation. The Reserve Banks now hold upward of $800,000,000 in treasury, paper and acceptances. It is idle to charge that all this volume of paper represents an inflation. If the Reserve Banks had not bought in the open market the member banks undoubtedly would have discounted. Perhaps the discounts would have been a hundred million or two smaller, probably the cost of the money would have been higher. Fair criticism may be made to this extent; after all the mater is, perhaps, a relatively minor one. And the open market purchases may be nearing their end. In the last analysis, the Reserve Banks deserve to be judged by the general results of their policies.

"Domestic industry is expanding along conservative lines, while our European markets, assisted by firm exchanges, are improving. In general, therefore, the results are good."

"Although the volume of trading in stocks showed no signs of falling off, the turnover amounting to approximately 1,900,000 shares for the two-hour session, the advance for the list as a whole was checked by profit-taking. Since the 4 per cent rate for call money was not established until yesterday's trading was almost over its effect on speculative enthusiasm could not be gauged. However, the opening hour today was marked by strength in speculative issues, and the selling which followed hardly could be attributed to firmer call money. Week-end profit-taking, which may have been increased by the extremely gloomy weather, is sufficient to account for the irregularity of the closing hour. Despite realizations, the tone of the market remained steady and fractional advances and declines in the main body of stocks were fairly evenly distributed at the close. Bonds were moderately active, with uncertainty in the gilt-edged issues offset by increasing interest in the rails and tractions.

Rediscounts Decline.

"Advance of the call money rate to 4 per cent before the close of trading yesterday attracted more than usual attention to the weekly statement of the Federal Reserve System, which on account of the holiday was not published until yesterday evening. The statement strengthens the belief that the higher call rate was due principally to first of the month demands, although whether, with these out of the way, call money will decline again to its former level remains to be seen. At any rate, rediscounts, both at the New York institution and for the system as a whole, showed a further decline for the past week and the system has added further to its holdings of acceptances.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges today was decidedly dull. French francs were inclined to sag a bit from the high levels established on the previous day, although actual business done was small. The whole market suggested an absence of demand for foreign currencies, rather than active offerings. France at 5.37½ cents were 1½ points lower and sterling was ⅝ of a cent off at $4.82⅝. Ease in sterling may be due to some extent to unfavorable news from the Sudan but probably is principally the result of special operations in the London market. Other European currencies were a point or so lower.

Commodities Irregular.

"Commodity markets were irregular. Less favorable crop reports from the Argentine helped wheat, which gained about a cent in the morning trading, and corn also was stronger. Cotton, on the other hand, gave further evidence of liquidation. January futures at a late price of 22.44 cents were 10 points lower on the day."

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business Nov. 29, showed the following changes: Loans, discounts, investments increased $50,932,000; net demand deposits increased $48,248,000; time deposits decreased $1,211,000; circulation decreased $63,000, and excess reserves decreased $17,739,000.

Review of Metals

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The production of steel is being steadily increased to meet more active and growing demand. The railroad buying movement has given further evidences of broadening, although interrupted somewhat by the holiday. Structural materials were especially active for early delivery and the whole market showed a very firm undertone with irregularity in prices. Pig iron was also active for prompt shipment, although some furnaces were extended in the first quarter of next year at the 14c level for electrolytic. It was the official opinion that the probable buying at that level at the end of the week with sellers asking a further advance of $2 for the first quarter.

Tin was steadier, but both dealers and consumers continue slow to anticipate needs, despite heavy breakings of tin plate. Offerings of prompt were light and visible supplies are expected to show a fair increase.

Lead remained unchanged and firm, owing to bullish London advices and the continued improvement into consumption.

Zinc was more active and prices higher owing to increased buying for domestic consumption, although export business was checked by the higher prices.

Antimony quiet and prices showed further reactions for the week.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Cotton goods were quiet and barely steady in the gray cloth division today. Finished goods held without offers of changes and were largely moderately for future delivery. Wool for fall on a basis of from 7¼ to 10 per cent higher than last year due to rise in wool. Cotton and wool mixed garments were offered at about prices of a year ago, the drop in cotton offsetting the rise in wool in the fabrics. Knit goods lines for fall continued to be priced for late deliveries and there operated more freely. Hosiery was steady. Silk goods were steadier. Burlaps showed weakness due to the arrival of several steamships with quantities of goods available for spot sale.

Sales estimated at 88,000. Closing quotations: December, 20.25c; January, March, 19.60c; May, 18.85c; July, September, 17.65c.

Spot coffee firm: Rio 7s, 22¼c; Santos 4s, 29½c. Cost and freight offers helped Santos 2s and 4s at 26.50c.

No exchange on London 1-16d lower; exchange rate 100 reis higher. Rio Brazil 950 to 1025 reis higher; Santos 2000 to 2225 reis higher. Brazilian ports receipts 60,000; Jundiahy receipts 22,000.

Refined futures were nominal.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review, says:

"The accumulated influence of the placing of the German loan, the success of the French loan and the many other important financial transactions in this country having a bearing on the establishment of improved conditions on the Continent, were the chief forces at work in this market for European exchanges during the week. Naturally, this influence was exerted in varying degrees on countries whose commercial and financial positions differed. Firmness held strong, notably Holland and Sweden. While the placing of the French loan became a market force on Monday, it was not until Wednesday that exchanges all the greater and yesterday Dutch exchange was established at a new high for the year at 40.40 for cable checks, or 5 per cent above parity, bringing into acute prominence the matter of an outward movement of gold from this country. Bankers, however, stated that the question of a gold export point had not been decided and that the trend in that direction was for the time being unnecessary. Swiss exchange made a further advance, carrying francs over the 26.02 against a parity of 26.80, and borrowing facilities for exchange to a greater extent against this country.

"French exchange at the start was only steadily and did not make any material response to the success of the new loan, but on the following days was strong here and in London, going up to the highest level reached in some time.

"Sterling moved in an orderly manner and on Monday was quoted from the same time, because of the Egyptian situation, but with the clearing up of the trouble there, sterling recovered in London and India exchanges were both strong and made further advances. Canadian exchange was in demand and firm throughout the week and reached 100.06⅜, a new high for the year.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges Saturday was decidedly dull. French francs were inclined to sag a bit from the high levels established on opening day, although actual business done was small. The whole market suggested an absence of demand for francs, demands rather than active offerings. Francs at 5.87½ cents were 1½ points lower and sterling was off ½ cent at $4.62¾.

"Ease in sterling may be due to some extent to unfavorable news from the Sudan, but probably is principally the result of special operations in the London market. Other European currencies were a point or so lower.

Prosecutor Awaits Report of Chemical Examination Made After Animals Had Died in Flames.

TRACES OF CARBON MONOXIDE SOUGHT

Absence of Poison Believed to Indicate Preacher's Wife Was Dead Before Being Put Into Fire.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 29.—Investigation of the Bexley furnace mystery was at a standstill today while County Prosecutor John R. King and his aids awaited the report of scientific experts, expected Monday or Tuesday.

All efforts of investigators to ascertain how the practically cremated body of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, 50-year-old wife of the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, pastor of Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church, came to be in the furnace of the parsonage on Nov. 17, have been to no avail. The body of the victim was found by the pastor late in the afternoon after he had passed the afternoon attending to business and pastoral calls.

In a statement issued shortly after noon today the prosecutor declared that he and his aids have run down every clew that has been given them and that their investigation has been as complete as possible, with no result.

Nothing can be done now, he said, until the scientific report of Dr. H. M. Brundage, a pathologist, and Chemist C. F. Long, has been given to him.

The experts, by an experiment conducted with guinea pigs in the furnace expect to establish definitely whether or not Mrs. Sheatsley was dead when she entered the furnace.

Blood taken from her lungs shows that she was dead, according to Chemist Long, who reported to King that he was unable to find any trace of carbon-monoxide poisoning. Had she breathed after entering the fire box, he contends, the gas poisoning would have been evident in the blood.

King indicated today that additional scientific experts may be called into the case after Dr. Brundage and Mr. Long make their report. He refused to indicate for what purpose they might be used.

The Rev. Mr. Sheatsley has told Mr. King that he believed his wife committed suicide by casting herself into the furnace after becoming violently insane.

Prosecutor King maintains that she did not enter the furnace voluntarily.

COUNSEL MAY CALL EX-WIVES TO TESTIFY IN FORBES TRIAL

Government to Present Evidence of Veterans' Bureau Graft Tomorrow.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 29.—Presentation of evidence in the Government's case against Chas. R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans' Bureau, and John W. Thompson, St. Louis and Chicago contractor, will be started Monday. Formal statements to the jury were completed Friday and, rather than lock the jurors up over Sunday, after a short session today Federal Judge Carpenter agreed to the adjournment. Because of the glowing description of Forbes given the jurors by his attorneys, the first Mrs. Forbes may be summoned by the prosecution to tell of the "real Mr. Forbes." Because of the stress laid by the Government on the testimony of Elias H. Mortimer, Mortimer's divorced wife probably will be placed on the stand by the defense to intensify the dark picture of Mortimer presented to the jurors by the defense counsel. Mortimer's mother-in-law, Mrs. Tullege of Philadelphia, may supplement her daughter's testimony.

COTTON CROP PROSPECTS FOR STATE BETTER THAN IN 1923

Frost of Nov. 22 and Two Succeeding Nights Was Heavily Damaging.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 29.—Missouri's cotton crop prospects this year are better than last year, according to Federal and State crop reporting officials here, who said today that the prospects for the cotton crop at the middle of November was for 140,000 bales, compared with 121,000 bales at that time last year and 143,000 bales in 1922.

From all sections of the Missouri cotton belt, prospects declined decidedly after the effects of the frost of Nov. 22, showing conclusively that the frost was more damaging than first indications showed, the report said. The frost of the two succeeding nights prevented a recovery of the plant, it was added. In the southern counties the top crop, which was of considerable promise, was badly damaged and bolls, apparently fully grown, softened and yielded no lint, not even good bellies and snaps, it continued.

In New Madrid, Mississippi, Scott and Stoddard counties the frosts destroyed in many cases the major portion of the crop, as well as what might have been a top crop, the report said. Throughout nearly all the Missouri counties, the total yield is a heavy disappointment from September prospects.

The national crop is forecast at 12,992,00 bales, with increase in proportion during the first half of November in Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma, while prospects declined in most of the other cotton states, the report said. The ginnings to Nov. 4 were 104,152 bales in Missouri and 11,147,524 for the United States, while the total ginnings for the year 1923 were 10,140,000 bales.

NO REDRESS IN U. S. FOR WOMAN WHO LOST FARM BECAUSE

Justice Ruled "No Jurisdiction" in Ousting Out of Arkansas Road Commissioners to Take Up Case.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.

A RECENT decision of the United States Supreme Court denying relief to a 70-year-old Arkansas widow, who she alleged to be the virtual confiscation of road tax assessments, has created a remarkable situation.

Senator Borah has volunteered his assistance in any further steps she may undertake, and is expected to do likewise. The facts are said to have come to the attention of President Coolidge. Indeed, the latter's work to withhold further Federal aid to Arkansas pending satisfactory settlement of this episode is reported to have held up.

Considering the obscurity of the case and the parties to it, the commotion which it aroused is extraordinary. This is due to the extraordinary circumstances, and also to the fact that the principles of confiscation, vital to every property owner, and equally before the law—vital to all who live under the law—are raised in a most vivid and arresting form.

The plaintiff is Mrs. M. L. House of Menefee, Ark., owner of a 30,000-acre farm, of which she says no more than 1000 acres is regularly cultivatable. On this property she has been assessed $2500 a year in road taxes for a period of 20 years, beginning in 1919. Other State and county taxes on the farm bring her total yearly tax bill to more than $3000. The average gross income from the farm averages less than $5000, she declares, of which about half goes to the tenants who work it on a share basis.

Hearing in Federal Supreme Court Denied.

After she had been denied relief from the assessments by the State courts, she appealed to the United States Supreme Court, charging that her property was being confiscated without due process, and that she was denied equal protection under the law, in violation of the fourteenth amendment. In a brief opinion, written by Associate Justice McReynolds, the Court unanimously decided that it lacked jurisdiction.

In their brief, attorneys for the plaintiff had cited a case in which a railway company appealed to the Supreme Court for relief from similar assessments in another Arkansas road district a year ago. In that case the Court assumed jurisdiction, and in a stinging opinion, written also by Justice McReynolds, upheld the railroad. Comparison of the opinions in two cases which appear to have much in common, enters into every discussion of the matter. Undoubtedly it will serve in future as ammunition for those members of Congress who advocate curtailment of the powers of the court.

The assessments against Mrs. House were made under authority of a special road law passed by the Arkansas Legislature early in 1919. Her farm fell in two of the road districts created in Conway County. Then, and for several years previously, she lived in Washington, and the farm, worked by tenants, was the chief means of support for herself and her daughter, Miss Mary House.

Bonds were issued and assessments levied. Incidentally, a large amount of these bonds are said to be in the hands of St. Louis banks and bond dealers. NO REDRESS IN U. S. COURT FOR WOMAN WHO MAY LOSE FARM BECAUSE OF TAX

Justice Ruled "No Jurisdiction" in Suit Arising Out of Arkansas Road Levy— Senators to Take Up Case.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.

A RECENT decision of the United States Supreme Court, denying relief to a 70-year-old Arkansas widow who appealed from what she alleged to be the virtual confiscation of her farm through road tax assessments, has created a remarkable stir in the capital.

Senator Borah has volunteered his assistance to the aged plaintiff in any further steps she may undertake, and Senator Norris is expected to do likewise. The facts are said to have been called to the attention of President Coolidge. Indeed, influences are now at work to withhold further Federal aid to Arkansas roads until a more satisfactory settlement of this episode is reached.

Considering the obscurity of the case and the parties to it, the commotion which it aroused is extraordinary. This is due to the extraordinary circumstances, and also to the fact that the principles of confiscation, vital to every property owner, and equally before the law—vital to all who live under the law—are raised in a most vivid and arresting form.

The plaintiff is Mrs. M. L. House of Menefee, Ark., owner of a 30,000-acre farm, of which she says no more than 1000 acres is regularly cultivatable. On this property she has been assessed $2500 a year in road taxes for a period of 20 years, beginning in 1919. Other State and county taxes on the farm bring her total yearly tax bill to more than $3000. The average gross income from the farm averages less than $5000, she declares, of which about half goes to the tenants who work it on a share basis.

Hearing in Federal Supreme Court Denied.

After she had been denied relief from the assessments by the State courts, she appealed to the United States Supreme Court, charging that her property was being confiscated without due process, and that she was denied equal protection under the law, in violation of the fourteenth amendment. In a brief opinion, written by Associate Justice McReynolds, the Court unanimously decided that it lacked jurisdiction.

In their brief, attorneys for the plaintiff had cited a case in which a railway company appealed to the Supreme Court for relief from similar assessments in another Arkansas road district a year ago. In that case the Court assumed jurisdiction, and in a stinging opinion, written also by Justice McReynolds, upheld the railroad. Comparison of the opinions in two cases which appear to have much in common, enters into every discussion of the matter. Undoubtedly it will serve in future as ammunition for those members of Congress who advocate curtailment of the powers of the court.

The assessments against Mrs. House were made under authority of a special road law passed by the Arkansas Legislature early in 1919. Her farm fell in two of the road districts created in Conway County. Then, and for several years previously, she lived in Washington, and the farm, worked by tenants, was the chief means of support for herself and her daughter, Miss Mary House.

Bonds were issued and assessments levied. Incidentally, a large amount of these bonds are said to be in the hands of St. Louis banks and bond dealers. Significantly, it would seem the imperiling of the value of the bonds has been cited by supporters of the Road Commission as one argument for opposing Mrs. House's suit.

Notice Only Through Newspaper Publication.

In one district she was assessed $947, and in the other $1516 a year. Notice of assessments was given only through publication in a local weekly newspaper, and 18 days were allowed in which to make protests and be accorded hearings. As a matter of fact, Mrs. House says she never saw the paper, and knew nothing of the assessments until the following year, when it was too late to protest.

Then the appeal to the State courts and lost. The Supreme Court of Arkansas in a three to two decision, held against her. The dissenting judges were Hart and Wood. Many other road tax cases have been appealed to the State Supreme Court, and it is noted that in nearly every one, the Road Commissions have been upheld by a three to two vote, with Justices Hart and Wood dissenting.

In her appeal to the United States Supreme Court Mrs. House pleaded that her ignorance of the assessments should not be held against her. She charged that the assessments were grossly discriminatory and unfair. Adjacent property of approximately the same value was assessed at only one-eighth the value attributed to hers, it was stated.

Indeed, her counsel set forth, the whole assessments was based upon a valuation fixed in 1917, which included a considerable amount of valuable timber. Before 1919 all this timber was cut. Moreover, a considerable portion of the land was subsequently flooded, and the acreage itself was materially reduced through encroachments by the Arkansas River, the brief stated.

Tax assessors in 1919 recognized the shrinkage in the lands value, and reduced the valuation by $13,000. But the road commissioners, in assessing the road taxes, ignored the later valuation and based the assessment on the 1917 valuation, she charged.

"Either the facts were unknown to the commissioners when they made the assessments, or else they willfully perpetrated a fraud on the plaintiff," asserted the brief.

Federal Engineer Confirmed Complaints of Mrs. House.

Meantime, an investigation of the situation in Conway County had been made by Assistant Chief Engineer James, of the Federal Bureau of Highways, to obtain information upon which to extend or withhold Federal aid. James made a report in which he substantially confirmed Mrs. House's complaints. He stated that in some instances the discriminations against her amounted to 300 per cent, as compared with assessments on adjoining property. One such discrimination, he reported, was in favor of one of the road commissioners.

In her case before the State courts, Mrs. House had charged that one road project for which she had been assessed had been declared abandoned by the commissioners. The commissioners, however, testified in reply that their announcement had been "a subterfuge for the purpose of obtaining Federal aid," the project being one which Federal engineers disapproved. This explanation was held sufficient and valid by the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Confiscatory Element Disregarded in Opinion.

It is a common practice in the United States Supreme Court, because of the volume of business, to divide what are regarded as minor cases among the several Justices. Each examines the cases allotted to him, and reports his conclusions to his colleagues. While it is assumed that each member of the court goes thoroughly into every case before rendering his opinion, and while the court as a whole hears the arguments, in practice the Justices naturally lean considerably upon the member to whom the case was assigned for detailed study. Otherwise, it would be almost impossible for the court to get through with its docket. By those who are familiar with the habits of the court, this practice is taken as partially accounting for the absence of a dissenting opinion in the House case.

In his opinion Justice McReynolds ignored the alleged confiscatory consequences of the assessments and the charge of unequal protection under the law, and

Lloyd George Explains the Political Crisis in Egypt From British Viewpoint

QUOTES ROOSEVELT TO SHOW ENGLAND IS RIGHT

Murder of Sirdar Culmination of Incidents Challenging Empire to Protect Subjects Against Outrage; British Must Clear Out if They Have No Business There, or Stay if They Have.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
War-Time Premier of Great Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 29.

WHATEVER opinion may be formed of the developments in Egypt, they certainly ought not to have taken anyone by surprise. The murder of the Sirdar in clear daylight in the streets of Cairo and the easy escape of the assassins is the culmination of a series of incidents which constitute a challenge to the British empire to protect its subjects against outrage when they are engaged in discharging a duty at its call and on its behalf.

David Lloyd George

There are those who say we ought not to be there at all and that Egypt ought to be as entirely Egyptian as Britain is British. The late Labor ministry did not take that view of our responsibilities in Egypt, nor did the Liberal Government of 1906-1914. But surely, as long as we are represented by officials who discharge functions at our request, honor demands that we should protect them to the utmost of our power. The point was put by Mr. Roosevelt, with the forcible directness that characterized all his utterances, in a remarkable speech he delivered at the Mansion House during his visit to Europe in 1910.

What Roosevelt Said.

His words are so relevant to the present situation that I can do no better than quote them:

"It was with this primary object of establishing order that you went into Egypt 28 years ago, and chief and ample justification for your presence in Egypt was this absolute necessity of order being established from without, coupled with your ability and willingness to establish it. Now either you have the right to be in Egypt, or you have not; either it is or it is not your duty to establish and keep order. If you feel that you have not the right to be in Egypt, if you do not wish to establish and keep order there, why then by all means get out of Egypt.

If, as I hope, you feel that your duty to civilized mankind and your fealty to your own great traditions alike bid you to stay, then make fact and name agree and show that you are ready to meet, in every deed, the responsibility which is yours.

"It is the thing, not the form, which is vital; if the present forms of government in Egypt, established by you in the hope that they would help the Egyptians upward, merely serve to provoke and permit disorder, then it is for you to alter the forms, for, if you stay in Egypt, it is your first duty to keep order and, above all things, also to punish murder and to bring to justice all who directly or indirectly incite others to commit murder or condone crime when it is committed."

Right Nail on the Head.

He hit the right nail on the head, with all the Rooseveltian clank and fervor. The speech produced a great sensation at the time and all the people who hate facing disagreeable facts and prefer to hide their opinions in cloudy phrases raged at being awakened from their pleasant dreams by this disturbing realist. All that has happened in Egypt since the date of that speech has justified every word of that prophetic deliverance.

Today the British people have to decide whether they have any business to remain in Egypt at all. If they have not, then they ought to clear out altogether and leave Egypt to be governed—or misgoverned—by its own people, whatever the consequences may be. But if they have any responsibilities in Egypt as trustees, either for the British empire or for civilization, or for both, then they must insist, at all hazards, on order and good government being maintained. Britain has no right to place the lives of her officers in jeopardy and then make no effort to shield them from assassins. She must either defend her agents or abandon her task.

Art of Self-Government.

There is no responsible body of opinion in the world which would urge Britain to clear out of Egypt until the Egyptians have satisfied the nations of the earth that they have acquired a greater capacity for ordered self-government than they have yet displayed.

The art of self-government is not acquired in a generation. The nations who now possess it have won it through centuries of bitter experience. For at least 2500 years the Egyptians have been a subject people. Their first taste of real liberty came to them under British authority. Before the British occupation they were being autocratically and ruthlessly governed by a race of alien rulers.

Gradually and systematically, the Egyptian fellaheen have been given a voice, first through their provincial councils and ultimately through their Parliament, in the government of their own country. Never has the Egyptian peasant enjoyed such freedom. But it is safe to say that it is the Power that first gave him these privileges that can alone guarantee their continuance.

If the British forces should withdraw from Egypt chaos would then ensue and military despotism would follow. Another period of foreign occupation would become inevitable, for a disturbed Egypt is too great a menace to the world to be allowed to remain uncorrected.

Benefits of Occupation.

Egypt is not merely a country but a gateway. It is on the main road between the East and the West. A turbulent porter is a nuisance to those for whom the gate is vital. That is why an empire, whose seat of government is in the West, but whose greatest territories are in the East, has to concern itself with good government in Egypt.

That the British occupation has conferred inestimable benefits on the Egyptian population is beyond question. One has only to read the history of this unhappy land in the days preceding the British occupation, with its record of corruption, extortion, misery and brutality, and compare it with the Egypt of today in order to realize what British guidance has done for the Egyptians.

Here again Mr. Roosevelt's testimony has its value. In the course of the speech from which I have already quoted, he said: "You have given Egypt the best government it has ever had before; for never in history has the poor man in Egypt, the tiller of the soil, the ordinary laborer, been treated with as much justice and mercy under a rule as free from corruption and brutality as during the last 28 years."

The Egyptian nationalists refer with pride to the great days of the unmitigated Khedival rule, before the hated British intervened. Mr. Valentine Chirol, in his luminous treatise on the Egyptian problem, gives us some idea of what the nationalist paradise meant for the cultivators of the soil, who constitute nine-tenths of the Egyptian native population:

"Long since gone is the spectacle I witnessed in the days of Ismail of whole gangs of wretched peasants being dragged away in chains from their own fields to cultivate the vast estates which the Khedive and his favored Pashas had systematically filched from the people. Gone is the old system of corvee, under which the well-nigh annual task of averting the menace of a dangerously high or dangerously low Nile, was carried out by forced labor, cruelly recruited and still more cruelly handled. Gone is the kurbash, that used to blister the soles of the fellaheens' feet until they had disgorged their last piece of hidden silver or wearied the tax-gatherer's arm."

If the British occupation had satisfied itself with redressing the material evils of Khedival rule, it would have failed in its nobler purpose—the training of the Egyptian people themselves in the acts of ordered self-government. Material prosperity is a poor substitute for liberty and even-handed justice, without freedom, is but benevolent serfdom. That is why, by gradual steps, they were taught what they were never, in the glorious days of Egyptian nationalism, given an opportunity of learning—how to climb, unaided, the precipitous paths of liberty. First, local self-government was conferred upon them, "as the best preparation and education for the ultimate exercise of more responsible functions." Then came legislation with large and growing powers and, finally, came the declaration of Egyptian independence in 1922.

It is a misfortune that those who led the fight for freedom have done their best to prove they are as yet unfit for it. The position is a difficult one for both British and Eygptians. Until the latter have demonstrated, by years of stable and well-ordered government, that they can be trusted to safeguard the great gateway, the nations of the West cannot abandon the trust which is now being administered on their behalf by Britain.

Geographical Helplessness.

On the other hand, as long as a foreign country exercises control inside the land of Egypt, the pride of the people will be offended and friction must now and again ensue. All depends on the wisdom and restraint shown and the authority wielded by the Egyptian leaders. If they bear in mind the peculiar position of their country in reference to the East and the West, its geographical helplessness against an invader, the fact that its people have never, in their long and tragic history, enjoyed the measure of freedom now secured to them by the British arm and the rapid development of that freedom during the last 40 years, they will realize the folly of the course they are now pursuing.

The British Government, in spite of much provocation, do not as yet threaten to withdraw or circumscribe Egyptian independence. Why drive it to the disastrous alternative between revocation and retreat?

Status of the Sudan

The Egyptian claim to the Sudan is so entirely indefensible that it is hardly worth arguing. A claim based on conquest coming from a people in revolt against a mild foreign occupation shows that, whatever intellectual qualities the ruling Egyptian possesses, a sense of honor is not to be found amongst them. And the claim, such as it is, cannot be substantiated. The conquest was due to British leadership, British equipment, British organization and British valor. If Britain withdrew from the Sudan, another Mahdi would soon make short work of Egyptian misrule.

The Sudanese have much to say about the government under which they choose to live; the Egyptians have no right or say in the matter. I therefore rejoice at the decision of the Government to put an end to the "dual ownership" of the Sudan. It was indefensible and had become unworkable.

Roosevelt's Remarks on British in Egypt

IT was with this primary object of establishing order that you went into Egypt 28 years ago, and chief and ample justification for your presence in Egypt was this absolute necessity of order being established from without, coupled with your ability and willingness to establish it. Now either you have the right to be in Egypt or you have not; either it is or it is not your duty to establish and keep order. If you feel that you have not the right to be in Egypt, if you do not wish to establish and keep order there, why then by all means get out of Egypt.

If, as I hope, you feel that your duty to civilized mankind and your fealty to your own great traditions alike bid you to stay, then make fact and name agree and show that you are ready to meet, in every deed, the responsibility which is yours.

Hoover Tells of Steps to Solve Big Problems Created By Rapid Growth of Radio

Can't Tell Where It Is Headed, Says Secretary, and Legislation Might Hurt Development.

By ELLIOTT THURSTON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.

HERBERT HOOVER feels a good deal like Jack of Bean Stalk notoriety. It fell to both to have most of the responsibility for a couple of abnormal growths. Jack's adventure was confined to one colored bean that grew until it hit Heaven. Hoover's bean is the radio. Somebody planted it in his Department of Commerce. It has been growing just as fast as Jack's bean stalk, but where Jack had the advantage over Hoover was in being able to tell in which direction his bean stalk was sprouting.

All Hoover is humanly able to tell is that the radio bean grows so fast and changes its mind so often that it is more or less idle to predict what it will do next. It also becomes folly to climb up the stalk in the belief that particular shoot is the main trunk. And as for the wealth and the giants at the top—Hoover is convinced they are there all right.

A few general offshoots, sundry main stems, a number of roots and indications of one or two menacing giants have been classified by Hoover, however, and his conclusions, while still in a state of flux, offer far more real and potential myth, mystery, romance and reality than ever came from Jack's garden.

"Nobody knows where this thing is headed," said Hoover when asked by the Post-Dispatch to tell the radio audience what to expect next, "and anybody would be foolish to make any very final predictions. Radio is here to stay, of course, and it has long since emerged from a novelty or a fad into something pretty close to a public utility.

"Unlimited Possibilities."

"It has unlimited possibilities. It isn't hard to imagine daily programs of national broadcasting, and of international broadcasting. Just how that is to be accomplished will probably be determined in the next few years—the mechanism of it. We have already seen that a given program can be circulated all over this country by one of several means and that it is only one step more to hook it up abroad."

Perhaps the most threatening giants that emerge from the upper reaches of the radio stalk are those with an eye on monopoly, on self-exploitation or advertising and on censorship.

Hoover believes in unfettered, unhampered growth, without needlesome pruning. Regulation by law of the radio art and industry he considers dangerous, for the law drafters cannot foresee where the plant is going to grow next, and their clipping might spoil the most valuable of all offshoots.

More specifically, Hoover is strenuously opposed to trying to levy a direct tax on the radio audience by any means yet suggested. The British license system is highly obnoxious and tends to limit growth.

"This country would never stand for licensing or taxing radio listeners," Hoover emphasized. "That idea only works when one company has a monopoly and all the reverence so derived goes into one pool, and we don't like monopoly. And then how are you going to keep the unlicensed folks from listening in? Are you going to have a police force snooping around for illicit aerials, and searching people's homes?"

Hoover has a new way of chuckling that suggests more than words. He said something about dry law enforcement and then he chuckled. It seemed to be a natural inference that he thinks licensing listeners would hardly solve the problem of how to pay for the radio programs unless enforcement were better than anything yet seen around Prohibition Headquarters.

"People go into theaters and pay admission," Hoover remarked, "and that solves the problem right there for the stage or concert hall, but it is obvious that there is no such way of getting the radio audience to pay for what it gets. So you've got to approach that some other way—leaving out the license tax scheme. I've heard only one very feasible suggestion. That is to fix a certain tax—say two per cent, for instance—on the sale of radio equipment. One company reports sales running over $20,000,000 in 1923, and that will be a good deal higher for this year. You could provide enough that way to pay for daily programs of the best skill and talent throughout the year.

"Can't Live on Jazz."

"It would perhaps be possible to work it by setting up a general committee which would be charged with the duty of arranging these programs, paying for the services of artists and so on out of this fund. But of course as soon as you do that you are likely to get into conflict over what sort of programs to put out. One thing is certain—the radio industry can't live on an endless diet of jazz."

"No, nor of political speeches," suggested the interviewer.

Hoover nodded and recalled a political speech he had made out West during the last campaign. "It was just an ordinary speech," he said, "and one that wouldn't have gotten any space in the newspapers, and didn't get much space as a matter of fact. The point I wanted to bring out was that material of this sort, ordinarily of little interest to the public, gets a tremendous reception when put out over the radio. Not merely that people listen in, but they get interested in things in which they never had any interest before. And they showed it in this case by writing in here for copies of that speech. There were something like 200,000 copies of it mailed out as a result.

"Now one important thing about it is that it increases newspaper interest. The psychology of it appears to be that people who listen to speeches over the radio want to read those speeches in print in their newspapers the next day.

"You see there's no conflict with the newspaper business in radio, and that is especially true of advertising. The radio can be used for indirect advertising, but that is all. Just where the line is has yet to be shown, perhaps. But the radio audience will certainly never stand for direct advertising. People will gladly listen to some hotel's orchestra broadcasting music, which is indirect advertising for the hotel, but if you try to sell them some brand of shoes or anything else over the radio you'll have no radio audience. People won't stand for that. It would kill the radio industry as quick as anything you can think of.

Programs Advertise Hotel.

"The newspaper remains the medium for specific advertising, and radio never will supplant it. That seems perfectly plain to me, but there appears to be a good deal of doubt in some minds about how far the radio is going to usurp other advertising media. You can indirectly advertise a name over the radio by having such-and-such an orchestra or performer but that is as far as you can go, and to make that name mean anything, to identify it, you must turn to specific advertising."

Hoover remarked that it has Republicanism and Plunder.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT IS a proven fact that America is the most murderous country in the world. But why should we repine, since the Republican party has just won or purchased another lease of power? The Warden of Sing Sing avers that the prevailing criminality is due to America's lack of moral fiber. Forget it—Coolidge is elected. While criminality in other countries shows a tendency to decrease, here the tendency is upward. But then there was hot trading in the stock exchanges immediately after the election.

Seriously, is there not a marked analogy between the moral decline and Republican ascendancy? This we do know, that since the Republican landslide in 1920 we have been living in a carnival of crime. No peace period in our history has been equal to it in that respect. Most of the homicides we read about have been committed in the pursuit of plunder. "Bandit" has been headlined oftener than any other ugly word in the language.

Republicanism, as we have seen it in operation, is indurated selfishness. Mammon, in dazzling costume, has been set up, and his high priests, "the Interests," have been encouraging all to worship him. The high priests endeavor to slake their thirst for gain by the proceeds of a tariff or tax on all, and the common worshipers seek the quickest way possible—the Rob Roy or Jesse James method being most in vogue. Hence hold-ups and robberies, gunning and killing.

"Ephraim is joined to idols; let him alone." There is no asylum in the Republican party for men of liberal thought and idealism. The late campaign proved that the organization is too solid and too stolid to be moved by stoutest argument and the most powerful appeals to reason and to conscience. It cannot be beaten except by a split, and that, happily, is likely to come. A party of vision and of sympathy with the aspirations of mankind will then take hold, and encourage something else than a passion for sordid gain. Otherwise our national stigma will only the more firmly attach itself, and our country become a moral morgue.

What stopped the big drouth of 1913? The big planet Saturn, at quadrature, Sept. 10, 1913.

What stopped the big drive on Paris in September, 1914? The autumn rains caused by Venus at its greatest distance east of the sun, followed by Saturn at quadrature, as predicted and sent to the German Emperor, to the British and to the French Government at Lyons, where another station of this mathematical weather science had been started, Feb. 13, 1914.

When asked why they had stopped the drive on Paris, and were mounting their heavy artillery on concrete foundations in dry weather, the German reply was, "Oh, it is just a military maneuver."

When will the next drouth begin? Sept. 18, 1925; because there will be no planets in position to keep the earth away from the sun from Sept. 18 to Nov. 18.

The Passing of the Home.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I ALMOST invariably scan the feature page before I lay aside my paper. But that is all—just scan it, and skim it, because most that is said is only language. Good language, usually, but only language. Nothing to appeal to you, and leave a deep impression. Many of these feature writers still choose the home as their topic, and equally as many, in this hardened and sinning old world choose love. Both of which are out of date. The auto has supplanted the dwelling, and visions of the luxurious life have steeled the heart against love. In consequence the millions we are expending for roads will give the divorce courts more to grind. It was love that established the home as we have known it. It is now no longer a place endeared to the heart, but merely a place to eat and sleep when all pleasures pall. Perhaps I am too old-fashioned, too exacting, too prone to criticise; but when you see the ladies out with gun and dog and other ladies clambering in and out of automobiles all day long, what can you do but criticise? What can you do but mourn this passing of the home, the fireside of song and story immortalized by love, never to return? Perhaps some of these feature writers would devote their time and talents to a remedy; but with the concrete being laid down and the gravel spread, they know their efforts would be hopeless.

THE STATE AND THE SWINDLER.

The Hawkins swindle was J. Rufus Wallingford finance. It was more daring, however, more intricate and more extensive than any coup attempted or carried out by the late George Randolph Chester's mythical crook. Its actual results, from the standpoint of a fleeced public may be summarized in the statement that about 6000 small investors lost a total of more than $5,000,000.

This gigantic robbery was operated in many states that assume by law to protect their citizens against such swindles and swindlers. Such protection is the object of Blue Sky Departments. It is their reason for being. When such departments fail, as they notoriously failed in this instance, the question is one of vital public concern.

In his instructions to the jury Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger of Milwaukee, who tried the case at Indianapolis, referred to this point in these words:

> It is a melancholy fact that State Legislatures do not take drastic measures to prevent such monumental frauds as you now have before you. The history of these cases in Federal courts is a sad commentary on law enforcement, for nearly all of them show that Blue Sky Departments were made the instrumentalities of stock swindlers instead of functioning, as they should, as protective agencies for the public.

A flagrant example of the condition described by Judge Geiger is afforded by the Hawkins conspiracy. It was developed in the trial that the State Banking Department of Ohio had officially certificated at $65 a share the stock of the common stock of the Hawkins company which in point of fact was not worth its purported par value of 1 cent a share. The stock was worthless. Yet it was officially and legally sponsored by the State of Ohio, which fact might have been—and probably was—used in selling it. It is obvious, anyhow, that the men who knowingly took part in this conspiracy would not scruple to utilize an asset of this character.

Judge Geiger, therefore, is manifestly stating an undeniable and disquieting truth when he says that Blue Sky Departments which fail to determine the value of a security before permitting its sale become the instrumentalities of stock swindlers. He is right, too, in urging State Legislatures to prevent such monumental frauds by drastic measures. Whether a State can or should be made financially liable for a stock which it, in effect, guarantees may be open to question, but its moral responsibility cannot be questioned.

Blue Sky Departments must be competent or they should be abolished. An incompetent department is a menace; it is far worse than none at all. The Blue Sky Department must either prevent swindles or promote them. It cannot occupy a neutral zone.

What Ohio may do with its State Banking Department that certified the worthless Hawkins stock is for Ohio to decide. But since Missouri has figured conspicuously in the Hawkins conspiracy, it is hoped that the Legislature which meets at Jefferson City in January will act on Judge Geiger's advice and see to it that our Blue Sky Department will perform the purpose of protecting the public from high-powered swindlers, whatever their industrial, political or sanctimonious repute.

MODERN PEACE ANGELS.

It happens that the new name chosen for the ZR-3 is the name of a famous California city. And Los Angeles is welcome to make the most of it. But it seems evident that, in the choice of the title "Los Angeles" for the monster dirigible, now to be devoted to peace uses, the idea of peace, as proclaimed by the biblical angels, was more decisive than that it should bear the name of a certain city.

There was something touching, something poetic, and, it is to be hoped, something prophetic, in the fact that the wife of the President of the nation which decided the World War should christen this converted warship of the air by releasing a number of doves, age-long symbols of peace, each gentle bird-bearing the gospel message sung by the angels of old "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men."

Filled with the nondestructive helium gas, the Los Angeles can be utilized to help bring the world together by voyages of discovery, contribute to the spread of knowledge, prevent forest conflagrations, further aviation, perhaps greatly advance the science of meteorology, and in many ways act as modern angel of peace. She may be the harbinger of a fleet devoted to such uses, making the airways of the greatest benefit to mankind.

PROHIBITION JOBS MENACED.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, raises a cry of genuine alarm at the suggestion of the conference of senior Circuit Judges of the United States that prohibition enforcement be transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice. Chief Justice Taft, in a letter to Attorney-General Stone, urges that the change would be beneficial, in that it would place the entire expenditure of appropriations for enforcement under the direction of the Attorney-General. It is estimated that prohibition enforcement for the next two years will be at the rate of $25,000,000 a year. In addition, the change would "put a stop to the attempted prosecution of trivial, futile and unimportant cases, which now crowd the dockets through the ill-advised zeal and ignorance of prohibition agents." Only those cases would be taken up, say the Judges, which will really deter offenders, and for such cases the District Attorneys would be personally responsible.

To this reasonable suggestion Wheeler, speaking for all the host of present-day enforcement agents, including their Ku Klux volunteers, says that such a change would make conditions worse. He asserts that enforcement cannot be appropriately transferred to the Justice Department, and that if the transfer were made "we would be swamped in bootleg liquor."

In the view of Mr. Wheeler, the evidence in the possession of Chief Justice Taft and the conference of senior Circuit Judges to the effect that the present system of enforcement is a failure and that the proposed change is absolutely necessary, counts for nothing. Wheeler insists that prohibition is being adequately enforced, in spite of all the facts to the contrary that have been published, as, for example, that police statistics show that the city of Washington is wetter than Paris.

Mr. Wheeler and his cohorts know that the proposed transfer would mean a wholesale overhauling of jobs and jobholders. That, and not law enforcement, is the cause of his opposition.

THE ONE WAY OUT.

"The stupidity of Congress."

"The lethargy of the people themselves."

Those are the two dams that are blocking river improvement. The statement was made by Senator Reed of Missouri in his address to the convention of the Mississippi Valley Association at Evansville, Ind.

The speaker went on to say that, if the people would shake off their lethargy and go after members of Congress with letters and telegrams and personal appeals, and continue to press their demands insistently and persistently, Congress would presently respond.

We believe the Senator has hit the right note. Certainly he is correct in saying that it would be a waste of time now to discuss or argue the advisability or necessity of improving our rivers. That point is no longer debatable. The country has got to have cheaper transportation. The only way to get it, or at least the practicable, economic way, is by improving and equipping the rivers and co-ordinating them with the railroads into a thoroughly national transportation system.

So, the question now is, How can it be done? Senator Reed has given his answer. It is the plan of a practical politician who knows what he is talking about.

As a matter of fact, the plan is not original with Mr. Reed. For years the Post-Dispatch has importuned the people of the Valley states to interest themselves in their great river's development. The Post-Dispatch has long believed, and still ardently believes, that development of the river ought to be the paramount issue of the Valley until the desired object is accomplished. Moreover, as we have frequently said, it is not a sectional issue, but a national issue. There is not a business anywhere in the United States today but labors under the burden of excessive transportation costs. There is not a business anywhere but would be benefited by cheaper transportation.

Cheaper transportation cannot be had by way of the railroads, or by the economies possible in any plan of railroad consolidation, assuming that a plan can be devised which public opinion will approve.

Our railroads are today at the peak of efficiency. They are managed—most of them—with consummate ability. It may not be said, in view of the tremendous progress made in the last 10 years, that our railroads have reached the last word in mechanical and administrative capacity, but despite this progress transportation costs have gone to dizzy heights. A solution of the transportation problem, therefore, must be sought in another agency. That agency is the rivers.

"If I were dictator of the United States," says Senator Reed, "and could do just what I wanted to do, I would harness every river in the country."

That dictator is here. His name is Economic Necessity. The cost of transportation is away out of proportion in the general equation. That is not a theory. It is a grim condition. The one way out is the rivers.

EMPTY PROMISES.

Proponents of the reduced freight rates on coal ordered by the Illinois Commerce Commission from the mines to East St. Louis, increasing the discrimination against St. Louis from 25 cents to 46 cents a ton, are offering to St. Louis the sedative of a corresponding decrease to St. Louis, which is hopeless of attainment.

The ultimate authority in interstate rates is the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has refused, after an exhaustive hearing, to grant reduced rates to St. Louis. Only by the Interstate Commerce Commission reversing itself could the benefits of the reduced east side rate be extended to St. Louis. There has arisen since the commission refused to reduce the St. Louis rate no new conditions justifying an expectation that the commission will reverse itself.

The only new condition is that created by the action of the Illinois commission in granting the reduced rate to East St. Louis, but that is a condition which the Interstate Commission has the power to remove, since it is authorized to abrogate any intrastate rate that is in conflict with any interstate rate. The reduced East St. Louis rate is in conflict with the St. Louis rate and highly prejudicial to St. Louis in that it increases the discrimination.

An effort is being made to allay St. Louis' resentment by suggesting the possibility of a corresponding reduction to St. Louis, but that is a matter for the Interstate Commerce Commission, to which an appeal should immediately be made and pressed.

We trust that the simultaneous resignation of the President's two private secretaries is not an organized walkout.

PORK AND POETRY IN CHICAGO.

Pork and poetry in Chicago now go hand in hand. To say it perhaps more poetically, and yet with a closer approach to literalness, pork reposes in the bosom of poetry. The Chicago shoat and William Shakspeare, both "cured" by time and other refining agencies, have been telescoped, the one into the other, at the International Livestock Exposition.

What we seem to be striving to express is the simple fact that a special building devoted to meats, of which bacon is the piece de resistance, is an exact replica of the house in which Shakspeare was born.

The Chicago pork packers apparently disbelieve in the Baconian theory as to the authorship of the Shakspearean plays. Otherwise, would not they display their bacon in a replica of the birthhouse of Francis Bacon? And yet the very fact that they have selected Shakspeare's house of origin wherein to exhibit their super-refined side meat suggests that these pork-and-poetry experts have gone still farther on the anti-Baconian route, even to the point of believing that Shakspeare wrote Bacon.

However that may be, the thing of interest here is that this tribute of pork to poetry indicates that at last the Chicago school of "new poetry" founded by Hattie Monroe, priestess of poetry in Chicago, of the South Side (or is it the West Side?) has been operating in the prosaic mentalities of the pork packers. To be sure, that being accepted as a fact, the packers should have patterned their meathouse after the birthhouse of Carl Sandburg, master minesinger of the stockyards and the slaughter houses. But, Chicago being Mr. Sandburg's own country, it is easy to understand why the prophet is not honored in this instance.

SAUL, IN DREAM, SPEAKS TO DAVID.

Already do they hail thee King—my son?
For, when Saul slept,
The moon upon his restless face,
Didst thou not cut
Seven portions from his mantle
And seven gems from out the hilt
That clasped a death for thee—my son....

Still, David, keep thy peace!

My armor bearer—
Do they hail thee King already?
Because the King's own son came warning thee of death?
And when King Saul came raging to thy cave
Thou wert fled.....

David, David, speak—yet, David, keep thy peace!

The King loves song:
Saul loves thee.....

The King grows old;
Saul is foolish.....

His eyes see clouds.....
Saul grows weak:

The King's full arm unnerved.
His sword grows short—he weeps—my son.

My son David.....

Hear, then, thou self-fed fool!

I did not sleep!
The mantle and the gems were thine—I willed it!
Jonathan—came to thee—first, because—
The King willed to be late!

David, David!
Be thou King!
Thy song hath taught Saul—love—
And taught him how to weep.....

The Huckleberry Finn Farm.

(From Mark Twain's Autobiography.)

"The farmhouse stood in the middle of a very large yard," he writes, "and the yard was fenced on three sides with rails and on the rear side with high palings; against these stood the smokehouse; beyond the palings was the orchard; beyond the orchard were the negro quarters and the tobacco fields.

"Down a piece, abreast the house, stood a little log cabin against a rail fence, and there the woody hill fell sharply away, past the barns, the corn crib, the stables and the tobacco curing house, to a limpid brook which sang along over its gravelly bed and curved and frisked in and out and here and there and yonder in the deep shade of overhanging foliage and vines—a divine place for wading; and it had swimming pools, too, which were forbidden to us and therefore much frequented by us. For we were little Christian children and had early been taught the value of forbidden fruit. • • • In the little cabin lived a bed-ridden, white-headed slave woman whom we visited daily and looked upon with awe, for we believed she was upward of a thousand years old and had talked with Moses.

"I can see the farm yet with perfect clearness. I can see all its belongings, all its details—the family room of the house, with a trundle bed in one corner and a spinning wheel in another—a wheel whose rising and falling wail, heard from a distance, was the mournfullest of sounds to me and made me homesick and filled my atmosphere with the wandering spirits of the dead; the vast fireplace, piled high, on winter nights, with flaming hickory logs from whose ends a sugary sap bubbled out, but not to go to waste, for we scraped it off and ate it; the lazy cat spread out on the rough hearthstones; the drowsy dogs braced against the jambs, blinking; my aunt in one chimney corner, knitting; my uncle in the other, smoking his corncob pipe; the slick and carpetless oak floor faintly mirroring the dancing flame tongues and freckled with black indentations where fire coals had popped out and died a leisurely death; half a dozen children romping in the background twilight; splint-bottomed chairs here and there, some with rockers; a cradle—out of service, but waiting with confidence; in the early cold mornings a snuggle of children, in shirts and chemises, occupying the hearthstone and procrastinating—they could not bear to leave that comfortable place to go out on the wind-swept floor space between the house and the kitchen where the general tin basin stood, and wash.

THE GREAT WORD.

Sir: An editorial writer in one of the leading Eastern journals recently asserted and endeavored to prove that the word service is the greatest word in the language; greater even than love. His article was a fine example of sophistry, which is simply logic based on false premises.

A moment's consideration will reveal the fact to any mature intellect that without love service lacks the very element that gives it its value; resembling a coin of false metal, bearing the stamp, but having no intrinsic value. Such false doctrine would place the servant higher than the master, for service is the handmaid of love.

There is no greater word than love. Service is merely one, albeit the greatest, of its many attributes. Love embraces all things. In it we live, move and have our being. Without it there would be no harmony, no coherence, no sustained effort. "Love extinguished, earth and heaven must fail." It is a word if infinite meaning, imparting to the finite mind a consciousness of the essence of God. Love expresses the only quality with which we are endowed that can establish our relationship with the divine.

THE MERAMEC JADE.

They say the woman dark is treacherous—
I do not know.
I know the Meramec is a Spanish jade—
Nor dark-eyed, yet she has the lure of the South—
Sometimes her eyes are grey,
Or blue, with glints of green and gold.
But the slithering way she has of twisting through the ordered line
Of dignified oak and elm.
Her mocking laughter when she escapes their peaceful, watchful path,
And rushes headlong through a course
All her own—
Devious, capricious—
Her treacherous smile, as she lies supinely content in her cove—
You never know what the jade is up to.
Cross-currents of fate in the depths of her—
The undertow of a rapacity unsatisfied—
Serene, indifferent,—
The Meramec jade.

WOMEN IN PUBLIC OFFICE.

From the Chicago News.

WOMEN are making steady and [illegible] rapid progress in American politics. Since the passage of the nineteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution giving the sex full franchise rights there have been woman members of Congress, woman legislators and even woman judges of courts. The service women have performed in legislative positions has been good. As to what woman can do in executive offices the world soon will have an opportunity to judge by the results in Texas and Wyoming. And on those results may largely depend woman's further advance in office holding. The women voters particularly want efficient, progressive government, not office for members of their sex. But the day of women in elective positions has definitely dawned. It may be assumed that if women voters get better results in government from women in office than they get from men in office, they will adopt a policy in voting by no means complimentary to the male of the species. A little wholesale competition in beneficial office holding should prove a good thing all around.

PROTECTING RADIO AMATEURS.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

COMMISSIONER D. B. CARSON of the Bureau of Navigation has recommended to Secretary Hoover that radio amateurs be given wave lengths to play with that are below 100 meters. He points out that amateurs succeeded with transcontinental signals and with transoceanic communication with a low wave length. And rightfully he claims that the enthusiasm of amateurs is needed to keep radio moving upward. The amateurs deserve encouragement if only because of their past achievements. The relegation to wave lengths below 100 meters will not interfere with the powerful broadcasting stations, although it would appear that the number of licenses would be greatly restricted. Commissioner Carson's argument on payment for radio programs has sound common sense at this time. He believes that the advertising benefits received are important and that the public for the present is well content to pay for big entertainments in the price of the receiving equipment they buy. Slowly some sort of order is coming out of radio chaos, and Government regulation has already reached the point where it is no longer necessary for the Department of Commerce to assume the role of an ionized traffic patrolman.

CAMPAIGN LYING.

From the Washington Post.

THE deplorable prevalence of personal detraction and sometimes actual defamation of character, in our political campaigns gives point to an incident in England in connection with the recent election. At a public meeting the speaker, a Parliamentary candidate, was subjected to some heckling, and one of his interlocutors charged him with being a divorced man and his wife with being a divorced woman. Both these charges were absolutely untrue. The much grieved speaker thereupon had the heckler summoned to court, on a charge not of defamation of character, but of making false statements for the purpose of affecting the election. The man was found guilty, and was fined £5 and, in addition, deprived of the right of suffrage for five years. That should be an effective remedy of discouraging campaign lying; though if it were generally applied in this country it would probably cause a perceptible diminution of the vote at the next election.

been conclusively demonstrated to the satisfaction of many department stores, hotels, theaters and other advertisers that radio offers them a medium for indirectly reaching the public, and that this is so valuable as to be worth the expenditure of large sums in procuring talent and putting forth the best possible programs. One Washington hotel pays $500 for two hours in the evening, once or twice a week. Its only return is indirect advertising of the hotel name. And the radio audience is furnished a program of dance music for which the cabaret habitues are voluntarily shelling out high menu prices and a cover charge.

While it has not yet been shown which medium is best for broadcasting nationally, or internationally, various authorities think that either the super-power development or else the telephone hookup will prove best in the end. In any case, the thing has been done, and will be done more. Indeed, Mr. Hoover would like to see daily programs offering a balanced combination of materials—discussion of political problems; educational courses; classic music; jazz; whatever can be put on the air legitimately to interest some class of listeners. The time could be allotted, so that those who like church music and hate jazz may have their hour, and vice versa.

As for how the radio industry is ultimately to be put on a solid financial basis, Hoover believes that it is far too early to foresee. Sale of equipment now more than compensates for great outlays in providing programs. This bids fair to be a continuing condition. At least no "saturation point" is in sight for consumption of radio outfits and outfitters.

"Obviously since the existence of the industry is dependent upon the programs, it is a prime essential that programs be constant and the very best possible," said Hoover, "and the manufacturers of equipment will never kill their own goose by letting the program descend to low levels, to offensive advertising or to driving away trade.

"But there is also a vast opportunity here for philanthropy. No greater educational medium exists than radio. Music lovers, for example, would do well in spreading appreciation of good music by paying to have the best music made available to the radio audience. It is interesting to note, too, that several universities are operating their own stations. It is worth while as an indirect advertising medium for them. But taking it from a philanthropic standpoint, here is a way of reaching millions in the interest

Censorship "Undesirable."

"We have had a splendid spirit of co-operation throughout the industry. Its problems have been met in the light of what is best for the future of radio and the best interests of the public. While that continues regulation by law, especially censorship is unnecessary and undesirable. We need some general definition in law, of course, but nothing that will fetter this thing.

"I ventured some modest predictions a year or so ago. Those predictions were realized and passed in very short order. At present prediction seems rather beside the point. Radio is becoming more important in the life of the country every day. It is already one of the necessary adjuncts. Right now I think the most important thing is improvement of what is put on the air. It isn't so much a question of growth, in other words, because that takes care of itself, as long as the material put out is really worth while. That is the most vital thing of all."

As Hoover expresses it, radio must render "fundamental service," and by that he means it must go beyond the ability of local broadcasting directors in scaring up talent for entertainment purposes, and must furnish with fixed regularity, day by day, material of national interest and importance in music, religion and public affairs.

"Material available locally is not enough to insure continuing interest," he emphasized. "It must be subordinate to the transmission of nationally and internationally important material of all kinds. The local broadcasting station must, in other words, make available to the audience the greatest music, entertainment and enlightenment which the nation and the world affords.

"This means organization of a system of national broadcasting, the interconnection of stations, rebroadcasting by one method or another. That this is possible has already been proved. The next step is to make it a daily reality and that step is the one I hope to see taken at the earliest moment possible. Great problems are involved here, but they can be and will be met and overcome, I think, with the same amazing rapidity that has marked the magical growth of the radio art."

Hoover suggested at the Third Annual Radio Conference a month ago that organization might be accomplished on a basis similar to that of the press associations, under guidance and direction of a central agency, which would furnish each day the events and material of outstanding interest and importance, furnishing it by interconnection to the various local broadcasting agencies as a regular service, free of partisan influence of any kind. Such material would then be put out locally at specified hours to supplement local programs.

"Then we would have the industry as a genuine public service institution," Hoover added. "It would mean permanent, increasing public interest, a solid foundation for the future growth of the industry. If I were to venture any prediction I should say that this is the next step."

LINCOLN PUBLIC SCHOOL TO BE DEDICATED TUESDAY

First Modern Elementary School for Negroes Erected at a Cost of $250,000.

The Lincoln School, 2300 Walnut street, the first modern elementary school constructed in the city for negroes, will be dedicated with ceremonies Tuesday night. The ceremonies will be in charge of the Negro Patrons' Association. Members of the Board of Education have been invited to attend.

The school, which has been occupied since the opening of the school year last September, was erected at a cost of approximately $250,000. About 1000 pupils attend the school. The old building, which was originally constructed for white pupils, is being used as a manual training and domestic science department for the new school building.

Thomas E. Spencer, assistant to Superintendent of Schools Maddox, said yesterday the construction of the school building is a part of the program to provide better school facilities for negro children. "The school is a landmark in the policy of the Board of Education to give the negro the best opportunity to obtain an education," he stated. An intermediate school exclusively for negroes is under construction at Cardinal avenue and Market street.

$25,000 SUIT IN BELLEVILLE AGAINST LLOYDS OF LONDON

Action Brought by New York Wholesale Jewelers, Who Lost $176,000 in Diamonds in Chicago.

Suit for recovery of $125,000 on a theft insurance policy was filed yesterday at Belleville against Lloyds of London by the Joseph Frackman Co. of New York, wholesale jewelers, one of whose agents was robbed Oct. 1 last of $176,000 in diamonds in Chicago.

Following the robbery a claim was made under the policy, which was resisted by Lloyds on the grounds that it had expired and that an application for its renewal had not been finally approved.

A. M. Frumberg of Laughlin, Frumburg, Blodgett & Russell, who filed the suit, said the theft had been proved by the arrest and identification of the thieves.

THE deplorable prevalence of personal detraction and sometimes actual assassination of character, in our political campaigns gives point to an incident in England in connection with the recent election. At a public meeting the speaker, a Parliamentary candidate, was subjected to some heckling, and one of his interlocutors charged him with being a divorced man and his wife with being a divorced woman. Both these charges were absolutely untrue. The aggrieved speaker thereupon had the heckler summoned to court, on a charge not of defamation of character, but of making false statements for the purpose of affecting the election. The man was found guilty, and was fined £5 and, in addition, deprived of the right of suffrage for five years. That should be an effective method of discouraging campaign lying; though if it were generally applied in this country it would probably cause a perceptible diminution of the vote at the next election.

NO REDRESS IN COURT FOR WOMAN WHO MAY LOSE FARM FOR TAX

based the decision upon the question of whether the manner in which they had been made constituted "due process." He said:

"The (Arkansas) Supreme Court, having considered the objections, held that the statute allowed 28 days after the first publication, during which time petitioner might have objected to the assessment, and declared this was adequate. Plaintiff in error now insists that the act is null because it prescribes insufficient notice and description of the assessed lands. Accepting the statute as construed by the State Supreme Court, the suggested objections to its validity appear to us wholly wanting in merit."

Different Ruling in Case Brought by Railroad.

The earlier opinion of Justice McReynolds, which is now being compared with the foregoing opinion, was on the appeal of the Kansas City Southern Railway against the Little River (Arkansas) road district. Here also, the railroad alleged the assessment to be confiscatory, and charged unequal protection. In that case Justice McReynolds took spirited notice of the elements of confiscation and inequality going into them in some detail. In his opinion reversing the case and upholding the plaintiff, he said:

"They divided the farming lands into five zones and assessed all within the same zone without regard for improvements or market value. A pipe line, telephone line and telegraph line were severally assessed at $2500, $300 and $300 a mile without any designated basis. Petitioners duly maintained that the assessments were unequal, arbitrary, unreasonable and in violation of due process and the equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth amendment.

"The statute under consideration prescribes no definite standard for determining benefits upon proposed improvements. We think the discrimination so palpable and arbitrary as to amount to a denial of the equal protection of the law. Benefits from local improvements must be estimated upon contiguous property according to some standard which will probbaly produce approximately correct general results. To say that 9.7 miles of railroad will receive benefits amounting to $67,900 from the construction of a gravel road, seems wholly improbable, if not impossible. Equal protection of the law must be extended to all. The judgment of the court below is reversed."

Virtually all of these points, so emphatically recognized and sustained in the railroad case, were raised in the House case without avail.

Must Sell Farm to Pay Taxes.

Mrs. House and her daughter have gone back to Arkansas and are living on the farm. In a recent despairing letter to friends here, following the Supreme Court's decision, she said she saw no way out of her distress and was convinced that the farm would have to be sold for the taxes. With close cultivation and successful crops, she explained, the farm could not be expected to produce enough to pay the taxes, after the tenants' share is deducted.

There is no appeal from a decision of the United States Supreme Court. Only in unusual instances do public men even permit themselves to criticize the actions of the court publicly. The extension of Federal aid to State roads, however, is a function of which the executive branch of the Government has full control.

It is believed by some influential officials, in sympathy with Mrs. House, that a firm attitude on the part of Federal road officials might persuade the Arkansas authorities to lighten her burden. Arkansas wants all the Federal aid it can get, and Arkansas road officials are not in good odor in the capital.

When Senator La Follette renews his strictures on the attitude of the Supreme Court on economic questions, if he does, there is small chance that he will overlook the case of the Arkansas widow.

Mother of Sick Child Sought. Nurses at Barnes Hospital are trying to locate Mrs. Louise Hackey, wife of Jess Starkey of Mt. Vernon, Ill., who left home two months ago and is supposed to be in St. Louis. Nelda, 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Starkey, is ill at the hospital.

OPERA CHORUS SCHOOL TO OPEN THIS WEEK

Applicants for Parts in Municipal Productions Can Register on First Three Days.

St. Louis singers who desire places in next summer's Municipal Opera chorus and who have not registered for admission to the training school for choristers maintained by the Municipal Theater Association may do so on tomorrow, Tuesday or Wednesday. Enrollment of chorus applicants began last Monday and more than 300 singers have registered for the training course.

The chorus school will open tomorrow night at Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards. Classes will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, weekly, until general rehearsals begin for the first opera to be produced next summer at the open-air theater in Forest Park.

The first week of the school will be devoted to examinations of chorus school applicants. These examinations will be conducted by David E. Russell, Frank Rainger and Charles Previn—manager, stage director and musical director, respectively, of the theater association.

As has been announced, the training course, which in previous years was limited to a study of the vocal numbers of the various operas forming the open-air theater repertories, has been widened to include training in all branches of stage work. Chorus candidates will be assigned to classes in accordance with their individual qualifications. Classes for training in music sight reading, ensemble singing, dancing and dramatic reading will be organized. Instruction in stage deportment will also be a feature.

The theater association has engaged both Rainger and Previn on a yearly basis and they will serve as instructors at the school as well as supervising the productions to be made next summer. Both have been associated with the opera enterprise for three years.

Consideration of operas for next summer's repertory is now occupying the attention of the Executive Productions Committee of the theater association and an announcement of the 10 works to be produced may be expected shortly. The 1925 season, according to present plans, will open on Monday night, May 25. Reservations of seats for the season is the largest in the history of the enterprise and presages another successful season, providing weather is favorable.

Information concerning the opera season and the chorus school may be obtained at the offices of the theater association, 1880 Arcade Building.

ADVENT LUTHERAN CHURCH TO DEDICATE CHAPEL TODAY

The chapel of the Advent Lutheran Church, 3721 South Grand boulevard, will be dedicated at 10:30 a. m. today by the Rev. Frederick M. Hanes, pastor of the church. The Rev. John F. Seibert, general secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the United Lutheran Church in America, will deliver the dedication address.

Afternoon exercises, starting at 2:30 o'clock, will include addresses by The Rev. Eldon C. Dolbeer, field missionary of the Illinois Synod, and The Rev. Arthur H. Armstrong, executive secretary of the Church Federation of St. Louis. The chapel is the first unit of the church plant, which will cost $150,000 when completed. The structure is of brick in Gothic design, with cut-stone and terra cotta trimming. The congregation was organized Dec. 18, 1921, services being held in Rubicam Hall, Grand boulevard and Potomac street.

Merry Spanish Party Given By Society's Young Married Set at the Country Club

Clubhouse Transformed Into the Plaza de Toros, in Madrid, and Guests Appear in Costumes of Matadors, Toreadors, Senoritas and Senoras—Decorations Gay and Colorful.

A SPANISH party, given Thanksgiving eve at the St. Louis Country Club by society's young married set, disputed for a night the prominence of debutante functions with which the autumn is always replete. The affair was conceived by Mrs. Russell Gardner, Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus and Mrs. Eugene F. Williams Jr., and they, with their friends, succeeded in making it the merriest, as well as one of the most beautiful, given thus far this season.

The clubhouse represented the Plaza de Toros, in Madrid, with dinner tables in place of the massive amphitheater seats. Opposite the main doorway hung a magenta drapery, on which, in gold letters was printed the words, "Coleccion De Las Principales Suretas de Corrida de Toros," (collection of the principal pictures, or posters, of the corridor of bulls), and below it appeared the figure of a matador in action. The lights in the entrance way and the rooms beyond were subdued by great inverted bowls of red and green cubed silk from which hung huge silk tassels. In one corner of the rough tiled reception hall was built a vine-clad door, possibly to the tiny chapel which is a part of the bull ring.

The ingenuous hostesses had concentrated their decorative efforts in the dining rooms, or, more properly, the arena, and had created a luxuriously gay and colorful scene for the guests as they entered. The decorations consisted mainly of Spanish shawls in brilliant hues, many of them from the treasure houses of Europe and lent by the sponsors for the evening. Dozens of them were hung on the walls, or cascaded over the gold cloth which draped the mantels.

At the eastern end of the club was constructed the piazzo and blue painted doorway of a Spanish hacienda. Gay shawls draped the railing of the tiny porch and growing ferns added a realistic touch. A fountain played in the patio and the guests lounged on the steps between dances. On another wall was fashioned a fan of tri-cornered mantillas of Chantilly lace which covered it. The foundation was pink silk and long black velvet sticks supported it.

In the midst of such a setting senoritas and fascinating senoras danced with laughing toreadors, and stately ladies of the court promenaded with daring matadors, their stilletos thrust deep in broad scarlet sashes, or "fajas." During the dinner, served at yellow-covered tables lighted with tapers, the guests entertained each other, while a stringed orchestra twanged accompaniment. Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Lewis dipped and whirled through a Spanish tango, and were followed in turn by Marion Niedringhaus and Kenneth Drummond singing Spanish melodies, and Mrs. Donald Bixby and Clarence Maloy dancing. A bit of the ridiculous was a burlesque on a bull fight, Spain's national sport. Tom Reyburn, in brown jersey, with hoofs and a horned head mask, made a creditable bull, although the tail was torn from his costume in the melee. Oliver Anderson and Andrew McCreery, in short blue velvet trousers and boleros, with red tasseled hats and scarlet cloaks, were matadors. James H. Platt, resplendent in purple satin and gold braid, cleverly announced the events.

After the last course was served, the dancing became general and later prizes were given for the most beautiful costumes. Most of the women guests wore mantillas, the traditional headdress of Spain, although here and there might be seen a peasant with a gay kerchief tied about her hair. Red was the favorite color, and jewelry was much in evidence. The men adopted the picturesque costume of the Aragonese for the most part, consisting of short black velvet breeches, black or red stockings and faja, and velvet bolero.

Mrs. Williams was lovely in white satin, the skirt fashioned with flaring flounces edged with gold, and a white mantilla. Mrs. Niedringhaus, too, wore white satin, with red stockings and fan. Mrs. Gardner, who is quite petite, wore a short black velvet frock and bolero, with green hoop earrings and tinkling bracelets.

Mrs. Harold Kauffman, whose artistic ability was brought into play in arranging the decorations, was attractive in a short flounced black lace frock over silver cloth. The bodice, cut low, was draped with a beautiful green shawl which hung to her knees. Her broad sash matched it in color, and her shallow crowned Spanish hat was tasseled at the brim by tiny green balls. Mrs. John T. Davis was a grande dame in green satin, almost covered with black Chantilly lace. A mantilla of the same lace was worn high over her wavy hair, and she carried a green ostrich feather fan.

Mrs. Harrison Hobiltzelle, one of the most beautiful women in society, and former

Henriette de Penaloza Becomes a Bride In Church Wedding

Her Marriage to Hubertas Schotten in Ferguson Followed by Reception at Home —Couple Will Sail for Honolulu on Their Honeymoon.

ONE of the many lovely weddings which have taken place this year was that of Miss Henriette de Penaloza, daughter of Mrs. Marie Reine Fusz de Penaloza, and Hubertas Schotten, yesterday, at SS. John and James Catholic Church, in Ferguson. The Rev. John J. Godfrey performed the ceremony and a reception followed at the home of the bride's mother.

Chrysanthemums in the autumn shades combined with greenery decorated both house and church and reflected the coloring of the gowns worn by the bride's attendants. Miss Elizabeth Thatcher was maid of honor for her cousin; Mrs. Francis Sinclair Warner, matron of honor, and Misses Helen Reyburn and Bertha Condie, bridesmaids. Their gowns were ecru georgette made in tight bodice and bouffant fashion, trimmed with ostrich banding shading from yellow to brown. The frock worn by Miss Thatcher was made over flesh satin and the others over yellow. Picture hats of brown satin with lace scarves hanging to the hem line of the gowns completed the costumes. Their flowers were small yellow and brown chrysanthemums tied with ribbon to match.

The bride wore a severely silhouetted gown of white brocaded crepe brought from Paris last summer. It was made with long tight sleeves and no trimming except a pearl girdle which fastened at the front and ended in long strands at the edge of the skirt. A satin court train weighted with orange blossoms draped from the V-shaped bodice, and over this fell the tulle veil arranged under a tiny wreath of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mr. Schotten's gift to his bride was part of the jewelry which had belonged to his mother, and she wore a sapphire and diamond dinner ring.

Driscoll Donovan was best man; Eugene de Penaloza, Hudson Thatcher and Harry Stimson, groomsmen, and Charles Chambers and George William Thatcher, ushers.

The bride gave her matron and maid of honor pearl bracelets and her bridesmaids beaded bags. Mr. Schotten presented his attendants with cigarette cases.

Guests at the bridal table, in addition to the wedding party, were Misses Dell Ryan of Scranton, Pa.; Juliette Reyburn, Father Godfrey and Francis Sinclair Warner. Roses and valley lilies nestling in tulle formed the centerpieces.

Mr. and Mrs. Schotten will sail Dec. 5 for Honolulu, and will return by way of the Rocky Mountains, where they will spend a few days. They are to be away six weeks. Mrs. Schotten is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville and spent last summer in Europe. Mr. Schotten is an alumnus of St. Louis University.

Dr. and Mrs. Floyd Stewart, 5266 Washington boulevard, will have their son, S. Floyd Stewart home for Christmas. Young Stewart graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology last June, and is now living in Schenectady, N. Y. He will be accompanied by J. C. Balsbough, and Guernsel Taylor of Pittsburg, formerly of St. Louis. A buffet supper for the visitors will be given by Miss Evelyn Stewart and Mr. Seymour Stewart, Dec. 23.

A tea will be given Mrs. John C. Muckerman, 4464 West Pine boulevard, for her debutante daughter, Miss Alice, the afternoon of Tuesday, Dec. 16. This is the second affair to introduce Miss Muckerman, a theater party having been given earlier in the season.

Mrs. Ernest R. Kroeger, 5284 Westminster place, has returned to St. Louis after an absence of a year in Europe. The Misses Eleanor and Beatrice Kroeger will remain in Paris during the winter and spring.

MERRY SPANISH PARTY GIVEN BY SOCIETY'S YOUNG MARRIED SET

Veiled Prophet queen, wore an exquisite shawl draped closely about her figure as a gown. The background and deep fringe were beige, and the flowers with which it was embroidered were in shades of red. A white silk lace mantilla draped over a high comb and was caught becomingly about her face. Another exquisite shawl of orchid background, worked in a myriad of colors, was worn by Mrs. August A. Busch Jr. Her jewelry consisted of dozens of bracelets, each of a different shade, and a long rope of pearls.

A number of the men reversed the order of things by dressing as girls, and vice versa. Mrs. George R. Wendling made an adorable Spanish boy in black satin trousers and boleros banded by a green brocaded sash. A broad-brimmed black velvet hat with a green scarf topped her costume, and she wore filagreed gold hoop earrings. Miss Mary Francis Dickson, too, went as a boy, with velvet trousers, sleeveless white shirt and red bandana.

Carl Koehler, on the other hand, was a smiling, cigarette-smoking senorita, in scarlet skirt and spangled bolera, with a scarlet gypsy headdress over long black curls.

Miss Lucy Terry was her radiant self in a vivid red shawl, which contrasted well with her brilliant coloring and dark hair. Mrs. Charles Bascom was gowned entirely in pink. Her bouffant satin frock, made ankle-length, was almost covered at the back by a pink lace mantilla, and pink flowers were fastened at her belt. Mrs. Webster Tilton looked very much a bride, in panniered white satin with long antilla, caught to her wrists.

Filagreed silver jewelry brought from Spain was worn by Miss Eppes Hawes, who was draped in a white embroidered shawl. There was an exquisitely carved necklace, earrings and pin which held red roses to her white lace headdress.

Misses Grace Wallace and Eleanor Simmons were garbed for a "fiesta," in black lace frocks combined with satin, the former with yellow bodice and Miss Simmons in red. Each had a black mantilla.

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer wore a black taffeta frock, bouffant at the hips. Her hair was held by a broad band of gold ribbon, and her mantilla was draped high at the back.

Space does not permit of further description, although each costume was worthy. Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Werne, Mr. and Mrs. Ephron Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hager Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bixby, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gamble, the latter in vivid orange and black, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence King, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Hotchkiss, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Gifford, Mr. and Mrs. Rowe Garesche, Miss Katherine Steedman, Dozier Gardner, Fred Orthwein, Taylor and Stuart Stickney.

Miss Florence Thompson, of Kansas City, sister of John R. Thompson, whose thoroughbreds took part in the horse show at the Coliseum last week, is the guest of Miss Eleanor Atkins, of 5138 Waterman avenue. She will remain for several days, and will be the honor guest at infomal parties.

Mrs. L. J. Friedheim, 6155 Westminster place, has returned from a two weeks' visit to her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. Freed, in Trenton, Tenn. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. C. Westbury.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Baldwin have returned from their wedding trip and will be at home after today at the Georgian Court apartments. Mrs. Baldwin was, before her marriage, Miss Madalyn Ewing of Nevada, Mo.

Lady Peek, the wife of Sir Wilfred Peek of Devonshire, England, has departed for the East after a two weeks' stay with her mother, Mrs. William C. Stribling of the St. Regis apartments, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Holliday. Mr. and Mrs. Holliday accompanied her to Baltimore, where they attended the Army-Navy football game yesterday, as guests of Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War. Lady Peek will sail Dec. 6 for her home.

Mrs. Dan W. Jones of 4330 McPherson avenue, has been called to Newport, R. I., by the death of a great-aunt. She is expected home in a few days.

Miss Evelyn Guy, daughter of William Evans Guy of 10 Portland place, has gone to California to spend the winter. Mrs. Henry Fennimore Cooper, another daughter of Mrs. Guy, will arrive Dec. 10 to visit her father.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Pflagler of 19 Kingsbury place have returned from the East, where they went to attend the Harvard-Princeton football game. Their son, Henry, is a student at Princeton.

Miss Virginia Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch Simmons of New York, who made her debut while the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, departed Tuesday for the East to visit her family. She will return to St. Louis for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. William Bagnell of 12 Westmoreland place, and her son, Robert, have returned from Kansas City, where they went to attend the funeral of Mrs. Bagnell's brother, Washington Adams.

WHAT MISSOURIANS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL ARE DOING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President and Mrs. Coolidge have made the announcement that they will abandon at a program of official receptions and dinners at the White House for the season of 1924-1925, beginning with a Cabinet dinner on Jan. 14 and ending with the Army and Navy reception on Feb. 19. This marks the close of official entertaining there for the President and Mrs. Coolidge's youngest son, Calvin Jr., who died in August.

The hopes for an official inaugural ball or an unofficial one, with President and Mrs. Coolidge have been blasted, however, by an official notice from the White House that they would not attend such an unofficial function.

The Princess Cantacuzene is very busy with the preparations for the Grand Russian fete to be given at the New Willard on Monday, with her imperial highness the Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia as the guest of honor. A distinguished committee is in charge of the fete, including the Princess' mother, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, who is well known in St. Louis, where she has frequently visited the Dents.

Gen. Pershing, Rear Admiral Roberts, Rear Admiral Leigh Palmer and Rear Admiral Hutchinson were among the Missouri notables who were in the receiving line at the Navy Relief Ball on Thanksgiving day.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. Jusserand were the guests in whose honor Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, entertained at Boundary Castle at dinner on Thursday.

Most of the Missouri delegation in Congress have returned to Washington in time to attend the opening sessions of the short term of Congress, which will begin tomorrow. Senator and Mrs. Selden P. Spencer will return from Atlantic City Sunday, after stopping over in Baltimore to witness the Army and Navy game. Senator and Mrs. James A. Reed arrived last week and reopened their house here.

Among the delegation in the House, the majority and their families are here. Representative and Mrs. Clarence Cannon have reopened their home at 10 Tenth street northeast; Representative and Mrs. Clement C. Dickinson are at Congress Hall, where Speaker Champ Clark and his family lived for so long and where he died; Representative and Mrs. Harry Hawes and the Misses Hawes are at the New Willard; Representative Henry L. Jost of Kansas City, who is a bachelor, has put up at the Racquet Club; Representative and Mrs. Samuel C. Major are in their apartment at the Shawmut and Representative and Mrs. Joe J. Manlove are at the Argonne.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who is now in St. Louis, will return to Washington for the convening of Congress to engage in the "carry-on" policy adopted by the Democratic men and women alike in the national capital. Mrs. Blair and Mrs. Blair Bannister will live at the National Democratic Woman's Club, of which Mrs. J. Borden Harriman is president.

Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge entertained guests at luncheon and afterwards in their box at the naval air station to witness the christening of the airship Los Angeles by Mrs. Coolidge.

Among the other people interested to St. Louis noted were the assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis. Mrs. Davis wore a smart black suit with black fox collar and had a handsome Persian lamb coat which she put on as the weather became colder. Representative and Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton has a group of young people with them. The dean of George Washington University and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins spent a great deal of time in the hangars examining the heavier-than-air machines and were among those who were invited into the Los Angeles after the christening to inspect it.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Puller will give a series of dinners next month when their guests will be chosen from among the congressional and official sets. Mrs. Puller is also giving a series of luncheons.

Miss Bessie McKeldin, daughter of Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer, wife of the chairman of the United States Shipping Board, entertained at a luncheon and dinner last week for Miss Elizabeth Cone, daughter of Rear Admiral Cone, whose marriage will take place shortly.

Miss Beatrice Henderson entertained at a tea for a group of the season's debutantes Thanksgiving day. Although she is to make her debut to society this winter this prettiest Washington debutante still claims Missouri as her native state. She is keeping up her study of current literature, French and music and never misses her lesson period.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Knabe, 4264 Neville avenue, University City, spent the last week in New Orleans, La., attending the Southern Medical Association Convention.

Mrs. W. H. Dewey of Lincoln, Neb., spent the last week-end with her sister, Mrs. H. G. Ray of Russell boulevard. She departed Sunday for Cincinnati, O., to join Mr. Dewey, a member of the company playing "Lightnin'" there.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President and Mrs. Coolidge have made announcement that they will entertain at a program of official receptions and dinners at the White House for the season of 1924-1925, beginning with a Cabinet dinner on Jan. 16 and ending with the Army and Navy reception on Feb. 19. This marks the close of official entertaining there for the President and Mrs. Coolidge's youngest son, Calvin Jr., who died in August.

The hopes for an official inaugural ball or an unofficial one, with President and Mrs. Coolidge have been blasted, however, by an official notice from the White House that they would not attend such an unofficial function.

The Princess Cantacuzene is very busy with the preparations for the grand Russian fete to be given at the New Willard on Monday, with her imperial highness the Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia as the guest of honor. A distinguished committee is in charge of the fete, including the Princess' mother, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, who is well known in St. Louis, where she has frequently visited the Dents.

Gen. Pershing, Rear Admiral Hanrix, Rear Admiral Leigh Palmer and Rear Admiral Hutchinson were among the Missouri notables who were in the receiving line at the Navy Relief Ball on Thanksgiving day.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. Jusserand were the guests in honor Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, entertained at Sundary Castle at dinner on Thursday.

Most of the Missouri delegation in Congress have returned to Washington in time to attend the opening sessions of the short term of Congress, which will begin tomorrow. Senator and Mrs. Selden P. Spencer will return from Atlantic City Sunday, after stopping over in Baltimore to witness the Army and Navy game. Senator and Mrs. James A. Reed arrived last week and reopened their house here.

Among the delegation in the house, the majority and their families are here. Representative and Mrs. Clarence Cannon have reopened their home at 10 Tenth street northeast; Representative and Mrs. Clement C. Dickinson are in Congress Hall, where Speaker champ Clark and his family lived for so long and where he died; Representative and Mrs. Harry Hawes and the Misses Hawes are at the New Willard; Representative Henry L. Jost of Kansas City, who is a bachelor, has put up at the Racquet Club; Representative and Mrs. Samuel C. Major are in their apartment at the Shawmut and Representative and Mrs. Joe J. Manlove are at the Argonne.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who is now in St. Louis, will return to Washington for the convening of Congress to engage in the "carry-on" policy adopted by the Democratic men and women alike in the national capital. Mrs. Blair and Mrs. Blair Bannister will live at the National Democratic Woman's Club, of which Mrs. J. Borden Harriman is president.

Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge entertained guests at Washington and afterwards in their box at the naval air station to witness the christening of the airship Los Angeles by Mrs. Coolidge.

Among the other people interested in St. Louis noted were the assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis. Mrs. Davis wore a smart black suit with black fur collar and had a handsome Persian lamb coat which she put on as the weather became colder. Representative and Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton has a group of young people with them. The dean of George Washington University and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins spent a great deal of time in the hangars examining the heavier-than-air machines and were among those who were invited into the Los Angeles after the christening to inspect it.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Puller will give a series of dinners next month when their guests will be chosen from among the congressional and official sets. Mrs. Puller is also giving a series of luncheons.

Miss Bessie McKeldin, daughter of Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer, wife of the chairman of the United States Shipping Board, entertained at a luncheon and dinner last week for Miss Elizabeth Cone, daughter of Rear Admiral Cone, whose marriage will take place shortly.

Miss Beatrice Henderson entertained at a tea for a group of the season's debutantes Thanksgiving day. Although she is to make her debut to society this winter this prettiest Washington debutante still claims Missouri as her native state is keeping up her study of current literature, French and music and never misses her lesson period.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Knabe, 424 Melville avenue, University City, spent the last week in New Orleans, La., attending the Southern Medical Association Convention.

Mrs. W. E. Dewey of Lincoln, Neb., spent the last week-end with her sister, Mrs. H. G. Ray of Russell boulevard. She departed Sunday for Cincinnati, O., to join Mr. Dewey, a member of the company playing "Lightnin'" there.

WE present this event as the ULTIMATE in value-giving. It is a wonderful sale in every sense of the word. It has been carefully prepared; it involves 600 new Dresses; it presents fashions of the most recent origin.

FOR an occasion such as this we strive to surpass anything that has been attempted before, and that we have succeeded will be evident the moment you arrive here Monday.

STYLE correctness is the dominant feature of these models, and women who usually pay more than $22 for a dress are particularly urged to participate Monday in this event.

¶ This is the sort of a sale at which the woman or miss who needs the most Frocks is the luckiest.

¶ Because the styles are so new, the Dresses so varied in type, there will be two compelling urges to buy—the style urge and the urge to provide Frocks for every occasion.

¶ Ombre chiffons, sheerest Georgettes, portray characteristic Parisian fashion notes.

¶ Satins are sleeveless, just as Paris is wearing them; rust and blonde, the newest shades, offering wide selection.

¶ New tiers and flares, velvet ruffles, gilt braid and buttons, chic shoulder flowers, fur hem bands are some of newest adornments.

¶ Velvets, long-sleeved or sleeveless, velva broches, heavy cloth Frocks, vividly embroidered, beautiful crepes, also figure prominently for matrons and misses.

For sheer individuality, smartness and charm, these Dresses will capture your fancy the moment you see them. Many are exact duplicates of chic Parisian creations; others reveal the originality characteristic of leading American designers—each one being an example of the highest type of workmanship. And because there are but few duplicates among the smartest models, early selection Monday is suggested.

A bazaar luncheon and dinner will be given by the ladies of the University M. E. Church, South, at 6511 Delmar boulevard, Friday and Saturday from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. Fancy articles for the holiday season and a variety of table delicacies will be on sale.

Mrs. B. F. Bush and Mrs. Arthur Lieber entertained Tuesday night with a Thanksgiving party for the girls of the Night and Day Camp and the Open Air Schools maintained by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. This was one of a series of parties which Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Lieber will give for these girls. The camp was decorated in autumn leaves and other symbols of the Thanksgiving season and a feature of the entertainment was a play given by the younger children in which "health" was the leading role.

Plans have been completed for the card party to be given by the Earnest Endeavor Club, M. F. W. C., tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the residence of Mrs. R. L. Sexton. The proceeds will be used for the Christmas activities.

CHOOSES HAWAIIAN HUSBAND IN PREFERENCE TO BROTHER

Effort of Former Sailor to Get Sister to Go to Omaha With Him Fails.

Mrs. Dorothy Aham, 16-year-old bride of Horo Aham, 23 years old, a medical student at St. Louis University, was asked to choose yesterday between her husband and her brother, Charles Gates of 5623 Dale avenue. She threw her arms about her husband.

It seems that Friday evening the brother, having reached St. Louis after an enlistment in the Navy, went to 4007 West Pine boulevard, where the couple were boarding, and started to abuse Aham for marrying his sister. He declared, "No sister of mine is going to live with an Hawaiian."

Aham was so overcome by the attitude of his brother-in-law that he went into another room, and while his wife clung to him, swallowed a considerable quantity of aspirin. Mrs. Aham then became hysterical and both were removed to City Hospital. Neither was in a serious condition.

Yesterday morning the newlyweds were discharged and Mrs. Aham's brother was on hand, still determined to take his sister away. He said, "you're coming with me to Omaha," where his wife makes her home.

"I'm not," cried Mrs. Aham, grasping her husband's arm. "I'm going to stay with Horo."

TRAFFIC RULES TO BE ENFORCED DESPITE DECISION

Capt. Gerk Says Arrests for Violations of Traffic Council Regulations Will Continue.

LAWYER FREED ON PARKING CHARGE

Judge Hochdoerfer Holds That Rules, Not Backed by Ordinances, Are Ineffective.

Policemen will continue to enforce rules of the Traffic Council unless advised by the City Counselor not to, or otherwise stopped, Capt. Gerk of the Traffic Bureau yesterday said in discussing the ruling by Judge Hochdoerfer of the Court of Criminal Correction that Traffic Council rules, not backed by ordinances, are ineffective.

The court ruling was made in a test case, in which J. Ray Weinbrenner, an attorney, was acquitted of a charge based on his arrest for parking his car in front of 419 Olive street shortly after 4 p. m., when all parking there was prohibited by a council rule.

Authority was given the council in the new traffic ordinance, by which it was created a number of months ago, to make rules effective for 90 days and succeeded by permanent ordinances.

Alderman Brod, chairman of the Traffic Council, said the situation brought up by the ruling would be considered at the council's next meeting, Wednesday. City Counselor Senti said the city would sue out a writ of error in the State Supreme Court, seeking to have the council's authority to make rules sustained.

Parking on Olive street, as well as Locust street and Washington avenue, between 7 and 10 a. m. and 4 and 6 p. m., between Fourth street and Twelfth boulevard, has been prohibited by a council rule. An ordinance which will become effective Dec. 12 will replace this. Motorists violating this rule between now and Dec. 12 might have to go to the trouble and expense of appealing to the Court of Criminal Correction to be freed of charges.

Weinbrenner, who brought the test case, was fined $5 in Police Court for failure to obey a reasonable command of a police officer, which was: "Don't park here." He appealed. Judge Hochdoerfer held that direction of traffic, in the meaning of the ordinance, did not include direction of parking, and held that no case had been made against Weinbrenner by the city under this charge.

TWO NEGROES ARRESTED IN HOLDUP OF MRS. STICKNEY

Woman Identifies One and Says Second Man Looks Like Other Robber.

A negro identified by Mrs. W. Arthur Stickney as one of two who robbed her of jewelry valued at $15,000, on Ladue road, west of Price road, St. Louis County, the evening of Nov. 10, was arrested through the work of a squad of four negro city detectives, headed by Sergeant Ira Cooper.

Mrs. Stickney was robbed as she drove towards her home on the St. Louis Country Club grounds. When Sergt. Cooper received her descriptions of the robbers, he concluded one of them was Alonzo Dowell, 28 years old, 3129 Lawton boulevard, who is under appeal bond from a five-year penitentiary sentence for robbery, received Oct. 27, and has two robbery charges pending against him in St. Louis County.

The squad could not find Dowell, but got word to him that Cooper could "help him" in one of the county cases. Dowell went to Police Headquarters Friday for his "help" and was arrested instead. Mrs. Stickney identified him as the robber who had a revolver and did the talking. The detectives reported that Dowell said, "Well, you got me right," and named his companion. The other man was arrested, and Mrs. Stickney said he looked like the other robber and his car looked like the one they used. This prisoner denied guilt. Sergeant Cooper is hopeful of recovering the jewelry.

DOUBLE MISSION THIS WEEK

A double mission will start today at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion, Twenty-eighth and Washington avenue, with one for children at 4 o'clock this afternoon and the other for adults at 8 p. m. The missions will continue every afternoon and evening this week. Saturday at these hours the children's mission is in charge of the Rev. K. O. Crosby of Chicago. The mission will be opened by the Rev. H. W. Mizner, rector of St. Stephen's Church, and the Rev. E. S. White, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion.

The mission for adults will be conducted by Rev. F. S. Fleming of Chicago. His general subject for the mission will be "The More Abundant Life."

INJUNCTION AGAINST ODD FELLOWS BUILDING DISSOLVED

Work of Razing Structure to Second Floor and Changing it to 14 Stories Can Proceed.

The temporary restraining order which, since Nov. 15, has held up the reconstruction of the Odd Fellows' Building, Ninth and Olive streets, was dissolved yesterday by Circuit Judge Pearcy, and the work of razing the eight-story building to the second floor, and changing it to 14 stories, at a cost of $1,000,000, will proceed.

The restraining order was obtained by the Brandt Shoe Co. and Julius E. Schaeffer florist, who objected that the alterations and the construction of canopies for the protection of pedestrians was injurious to their business. Judge Pearcy held that the petitioners had no rights above the first floor, of which they are tenants, and that the owners of the building were entitled to proceed with the reconstruction under proper precautions.

Ziegfeld "Follies" and "Sitting Pretty" at Theaters

Last Year's New Amsterdam With Different Principals—Star in Bolton-Wodehouse Musical Comedy

The eighteenth edition of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Follies" of the principals who sparkled in the show's run, and a Bolton-Wodehouse-Kern musical comedy in which the piquant Dolly Sisters are starred, opened each, at the American and Shubert-Jefferson.

Miss Mary Nash, emotional actress and luminary of such plays as "The Lady," "The Lure" and "The Man Who Came Back," will play at the Orpheum this week in a mine-dare drama entitled "Fear," by Blaine Sterne. The Woodward Players at the Empress are understudying "The Bad Man," by Porter Emerson Brown, in which Holbrook Blinn portrayed Pancho Lopez. Drawn from Pancho Villa, at the Shubert-Jefferson during October, 1922. The Woodward troupe at the Pershing, after a brief season of spoken drama and two weeks of musical comedy, gave up the ghost last night, owing to lack of sustenance. The Columbia's second revival of old-fashioned melodrama is "The Rosary," by Edward L. Rose.

Spectacles and Comedy, Too.

THE issue of the "Follies" now on tour has been described as the speediest and most amusing of the series, and as combining the characteristic Ziegfeld opulence of settings and costume, and rarity of feminine beauty, with a rapid-fire battery of genuine comedy. The book and lyrics are by Paul Gerard Smith and Gene Buck. Victor Herbert, Rudolf Friml and Dave Stamper supplied the tunes. The sets are by Joseph Urban, and the staging by Ned Wayburn. Ben Ali Haggin has designed a living art spectacle, and one of the features is a comic optical illusion, the Mirrorgraph.

Ziegfeld "Follies" and "Sitting Pretty" at Theaters Tonight

Last Year's New Amsterdam Opus Arrives With Different Principals—Dolly Sisters Star in Bolton-Wodehouse-Kern Musical Comedy.

THE eighteenth edition of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Follies," minus most of the principals who sparkled in the show during its New York run, and a Bolton-Wodehouse-Kern musical comedy, "Sitting Pretty," in which the piquant Dolly Sisters are starred, open tonight for a week's run each, at the American and Shubert-Jefferson, respectively.

Miss Mary Nash, emotional actress and luminary of such plays as "Her Lady," "The Lure" and "The Man Who Came Back," will play at the Orpheum this week in a mystery drama entitled "Fear," by Rose Sterne. The Woodward players at the Empress are underlining "The Bad Man," by Porter Emerson Brown, in which Holbrook Blinn portrayed Pancho Lopez, bandit from Pancho Villa, at the Shubert-Jefferson during October, 1922. The Woodward troupe at the Empress, after a brief season of spoken drama and two weeks of musical comedy, gave up the ghost last night, owing to lack of sustenance. The Columbia's second revival of old-fashioned melodrama is "The Rosary," by Edward L. Rose.

Raised Musical Comedy Tone.

A MUSICAL comedy of a new and superior brand was created at the Princess Theater in New York through the collaboration of Guy Bolton, playwright; Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, raconteur and lyricist; and Jerome Kern, inventor of catchy tunes. Together they wrote such charming successes as "Oh Boy," "Leave it to Jane" and "Oh, Lady, Lady." After several years of separation the trio was reunited for the creation of "Sitting Pretty," which was written particularly for the Dolly Sisters, and which was produced in New York last April. The Hungarian twins are making their first American tour, following their recent triumphs in London and Paris.

"The Swan" and "Tarnish."

ALSO featured in the cast is Frank McIntyre, comedian. It includes Paul Frawley, Fred Santley and a chorus of selected misses. Another Vincent Lopez syncopated band travels with the show.

Next week the American will present Eva La Gallienne in Ferenc Molnar's celebrated drama, "The Swan," beginning Monday night. On Sunday evening Gilbert Emery's notable play, "Tarnish," will open a week's engagement at the Shubert-Jefferson, with Edith Taliaferro at the head of the cast. Following at the Twelfth boulevard playhouse will be Walker Whiteside, in "Sakura," a play with a Japanese locale. "Blossom Time," the so-called Franz Schubert operetta, will play a return engagement at the Shubert-Jefferson during Christmas week.

Stock and Variety.

SUPPORTING J. Glynn McFarlane in the title role of "The Bad Man" at the Empress will be Hazel Whitmore, Edward Schilling, William Abram, Leo Lindhard, Bobby Reed, Raymond Brown, Sylva Farnese, Charles Colville, Toni Sargent, Adele Bradford and Clare Hatton.

The characters of Virgil and Dante in "Dante's Inferno" Kings and Rivoli

"Dante's Inferno", "Abraham Lincoln" On Screen Bills

Julian Eltinge Appears in Person at the Missouri While Loew's Has "The Snob" and "Man Who Came Back" is at Delmonte.

"DANTE'S INFERNO," the picturization of Dante Alighieri's trip through the seven regions of Hell, is the feature at the Kings and Rivoli theaters this week. The story of the immortal poet's poem concerns his visionary journey through the nether regions. He enters Hell, and there is met by his sweetheart, Beatrice, who entreats the wraith of the poet Virgil to accompany Dante on his tour. Virgil agrees, and acts as guide.

Some scenic wonders are said to have been performed by the producers in making their sets. A short modern story, to introduce the theme, is included in the picture.

"Abraham Lincoln," which began its local showing last Friday, is at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters. The picture is the first film or acting venture of George Billings, the counterpart of the famous American. The story is a dramatic entertainment based on Lincoln's life from the cradle to the grave and many humorous incidents are introduced. It is not until Lincoln becomes the war-heckled President of the United States, however, that the picture attains the dramatic power. Lincoln's unpopularity in some quarters, the handicaps and disfavor created by the Civil War, and his ultimate triumph are all shown.

Played up as an attraction over the feature picture at the Missouri Theater this week is Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator who is making a personal appearance in what is said to be his final tour of the country. Eltinge, who has been on the stage about 20 years, is reported to be ready to quit the footlights and retire. The screen attraction will be James Cruze' picture, "The Garden of Weeds." It has the "back-stage" of Broadway's Great White Way for its atmosphere and was adapted from the stage play of the same name. Betty Compson has the role of a chorus girl. The supporting cast consists of Warner Baxter, Rockliffe Fellowes, Charles Ogle and Al St. John.

"The Man Who Came Back" is showing at the Delmonte this week. This play, originally written by John Fleming Wilson and dramatized by Jules Eckert Goodman, features George O'Brien, a newcomer in the rank of stars, and Dorothy Mackaill, who is well known for her work in pictures opposite Richard Barthelmess. THE following notes are given in explanation of the successive movements of the suite:

"There are quiet little gnomes amongst the toadstools and grasshoppers and field-mice keep them company."

"There are bluebells that tinkle in the breeze, and fairy chimes, too. The glow-worm lights her tiny lamp, and the night-moth joins the throng."

"There is a human here, singing his favorite ditty. The little-folk, too, are in a merry mood. The human is alarmed, his song erratic. He is pixy-laden."

"There are revels in the pixy-ring; gnomes, elves and all join the merry dance."

Chaliapin Tuesday Night.

FOR his second St. Louis recital, Tuesday evening at the Odeon, Feodor Chaliapin as usual makes no announcement of his program in advance, but will choose his songs as the spirit moves him. Song books will be provided so that the audience may follow his selections, which will number some 20 or more songs. He will be assisted by Abraham Shokin, violinist, and Max Rabinovitch, pianist. The former will play two movements, the Andante and Rondo, from Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole."

Nathan Sachs, St. Louis pianist and teacher, will venture a recital at the Sheldon Auditorium on the evening of Dec. 6. His program will be devoted to more or less modern composers, and will embrace works by Saint-Saens, Chaminade, Crescentini, Pirani, Scharbal, Albeniz, Samara, Kleruff, Grieg, Rachmaninoff, MacDowell, Foote, Dett, Leschetizky, Paderewski, Liszt and Raff. Sachs will present his own Theme and Variations, in F major.

In addition to the work of previous years, which was confined to study of vocal numbers to be given in productions at the Municipal Theater, the course this year will be extended to sight reading of music, dancing, dramatic reading and stage department. The school will be in charge of Charles Previn and Frank A. Rainger, musical and stage directors of the organization, who have been engaged to give their entire time to the undertaking.

Pauline Lord Stars in Theater Guild Triumph

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.

IN the Rotary Clubs, the assumption is always made that life tends toward joy and happiness. In the arts the assumption is made that it doesn't. At any rate, practically all the plays which have won permanence in critical regard are tragedies. The feeling exists that when a man of genius really tackles down to his ultimate form of expression he must express himself in terms of disillusion and frustration. Indeed, the phrase "a happy ending" stands now in the language as a reproach. It is supposed to be something which motion picture directors lack on to mechanics in order to please the unintelligent public.

But whether life is always for the worst or not (and I don't want to commit myself on this point until my eighty-ninth birthday), it must be that there are stories in the life of man in which the will to be happy wins out over all threat of static suffering. Humanity has weapons in heart and mind to make violent battle against tragedy. One of these weapons is the comic spirit. Laughter need not be merely a digression. It can partake of heroism. It can, at times, punch as hard and as true as misfortune.

They Knew What They Wanted, by Sidney Howard, which was presented Monday night at the Garrick by the Theater Guild, is a play in which the comic spirit lashes out against tragedy and topples it. Up to the very middle of the third act one is led to believe that for all the attendant fun the dramatist means, in the end, to leave his characters tightly held in the grip of a hopeless fate. You have reason to suspect that the vision of calm comfort that has come to the poor battered little heroine is only a device to heighten the pathos of her tumble back again into turbulent insecurity.

An Unusual Triangle.

CONSIDER the theme of the play. Tony, an elderly Italian wine grower in California, decides that he wants a wife and children. In a San Francisco restaurant he sees a waitress who catches his fancy, although she has not even noticed him as he sits among the other patrons of the place. Returning to his home, Tony proposes to her by mail. She replies and requests a picture. Terrified at the fear of refusal, Tony sends, not his own photograph, but one of Joe, his young foreman. And when Amy appears at the vineyard, it is Joe who meets her, for Tony has driven off the road on his way to the station and broken both legs.

The girl's first sight of her betrothed is as he is carried home on a stretcher. She repents of the bargain she has made, but goes through with her wedding. It is on this same night, as she watches outside of the door of the maimed man, whom she has married, that she yields to Joe. There is no love in her surrender and the affair with Joe is not continued.

When the last act opens, three months later, we find that Amy has come to love the spirited, kindly, heroically swaggering old man who is slowly knitting his fractures and crawling back to health. He represents to her not only a loved object but the complete and pleasant security which has been denied to her all her life. And it is at this moment that she learns that she is to have a baby.

The Comic Spirit Lets Drive.

ALL traditions of the theater and most traditions of life say that nothing but stark misery can possibly come out of this situation. She must slink away with Joe, whom she does not love and who does not love her. And it is right here that the playwright gloriously breaks every precedent. As a rule, characters in plays never handle any given situation by spreading the facts boldly before the interested party. Seventy-nine and two-thirds per cent of all plays produced upon the American stage in the last 15 years have been founded upon the common misunderstandings of the characters concerned.

Amy is more forthright. She tells Tony what has happened. There is a scene of violent rage, but then, at the thought of losing his Amy, Tony calms down. He decides that the fact that he loves Amy and Amy loves him has not been altered by what has happened. She is to stay on. He will accept the child as his own. Now this solution carries complete conviction.

Much of the persuasiveness is contained in a single line. It is rather a ribald line, and besides its effect depends upon the reading. So there is ample reason for not setting it down in cold type. The line looses the most terrific laughter of the evening and it also sets free the very tears of triumph. The Comic Spirit draws back its good right arm and lets drive. The blow lands flush upon the jaw of tragedy. There are times when tragedy is like that.

Pauline Lord and Richard Bennett.

THERE is no play in New York this season, and it really seems likely that there will be any play where one may see a performance as good as that of Pauline Lord. It is wholly impossible for me to describe what manner of acting she does in "They Knew What They Wanted." It is filled with an emotion which tugs to tears and to laughter. Everything which she does is recognized as truthful and veracious, but it is not a bare and over-repressed piece of naturalism. Miss Lord fills the part with thousands of imaginative devices so that flames dance upon her shoulders.

Richard Bennett is glorious as the old Italian and altogether is one of the worthy theatrical events of the year. Indeed, I feel that "What Price Glory?" must now take second place for "They Knew What They Wanted" is the very best New York has to offer at the moment.

A NEW play by Tom Barry entitled "Dawn," which appeared Monday night at the Sam H. Harris Theater, will be classed as serious. Its second act brings to Broadway as free and furious a jazz party as the younger generation has staged all season long, and still, on the whole, this production bears a stern-faced message for humanity.

That message is neither fresh in concept nor unique in presentation, and in spite of this a large audience welcomed it with no lack of enthusiasm.

Mr. Barry would give a slap to what he considers New England's Puritanical religious bigotry. A nutty old fanatic who trembles and clenches his fists beneath his family's noses is seen in moral combat with his daughter. In order to make his story zippy, the author has the girl "ruined" by a fast-working member of her gang and proceeds to bring the final curtain down upon a terrific rain of sociological declamation on the part of the girl's mother.

"I," shrieks mother, looking father squarely in the eye, while daughter reclines faint on the sofa, "came to you the same as she is going to her sweetheart." She indicated she would like to see the old terror laugh that one off. But he hesitates a moment, then says:

"I don't believe what you have just said about yourself. I believe you are lying."

"Well," observes mother, gazing into the wings, "what of it?"

A Clumsy Suicide.

MUCH of the evening is devoted to scenes tending to construct character and reinforce argument. The result is largely one of unevenness and not a little preposterousness. When father and his pious sister are not crowing and snapping and moaning over the wickedness of the world, daughter and mother are building alibis or condoning liberalism.

In the second act a girl friend of the heroine commits suicide, and this is effected with great clumsiness and lack of reasonable approach.

Emma Dunn returns to a part not taxing her talents overmuch, yet providing her an opportunity for some little eloquence and fiery delivery. Zita Johann, as Judith, the daughter, is quite acceptable, and Howard Lang, as the father, was all right excepting those moments when he forgot what he was to say next. The settings are well chosen and well made.

story concerns young Potter, son of a New York millionaire, who breaks with his father after burning up Broadway and is sent to San Francisco to work in his father's shipyards. Here his escapades cause him to be taken by a sea captain to Shanghai, where he sinks lower and lower. Finally, when he has just about touched bottom, he is saved from himself by Marcelle, and begins life anew on a farm in Honolulu. The Washington University Glee Club appears as a special attraction on the stage and the program is completed by a comedy and news and views.

"The Snob," the first production for Metro-Goldwyn by Monta Bell, is the feature screen attraction at Loew's State. It is an unusual story in one respect at least, in that the central character is an unsympathetic one, and much of the picture is used to create this personality. Conrad Nagel assumes the leading character, John Gilbert is "the snob" and Norma Shearer has the character of the wife of "the snob." Rita Owin, former Follies dancer, appears on the stage, introducing a series of dances that range from the classical to the eccentric and jazz. Another stage attraction are the Kentucky Serenaders, who have been held over for a second and final week.

What They Are DOING IN Movie Studios

THE Cosmopolitan company which is filming the picturization of Peter B. Kyne's story, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," returned to Los Angeles last week from a nine weeks' trip to Honolulu. The company spent the most of its time in Tahaiti, where the greater part of the story is located and where most of the exterior scenes for the picture were made. In the cast are Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell.

Katherine Ray, beauty contest winner, has made her debut in motion pictures at the Paramount Long Island studio. She was a mannequin in the Fifth Avenue gown shop in Sidney Olcott's production "Salome of the Tenements."

R. William Neill has finished shooting "The Desert Fiddler," with Charles Ray. The picture is now being cut and titled for early distribution.

Colleen Moore's next First National starring vehicle to follow "So Big" will be a picturization of "Sally," in which Marilyn Miller starred on the stage.

Work on Marion Davies' "Zander the Great" is progressing rapidly on the West coast.

Anna Q. Nilsson is to have the leading feminine role in "One Way Street," which is to be one of the first of the productions to be made by First National in the East, at Biograph studio in New York. "One Way Street" is an adaptation of Beale Davis' novel of social and diplomatic life in London. Ben Lyon is to have the chief masculine role.

"The Dancers" will be the second picture in which Madge Bellamy is cast with George O'Brien, the new William Fox star. She is also seen in the feminine lead in "The Iron Horse."

Lucy Fox, who played with Tom Mix in "Teeth," has the feminine lead in "The Arizona Romeo," opposite Buck Jones.

Broadway soon will see the screen version of "The Fool," Channing Pollock's play.

Work has been started on the sixth of the Van Bibber comedies by Richard aHrding Davis. The latest adventure of the dilettante is "Van Bibber and the Navy."

Alma Rubens is playing the title role in Gerald Cranston's Lady," James Kirkwood has the leading male part.

Seena Owen will be seen in the screen version of James Oliver Curwood's "The Hunted Woman," which has just gone into production.

Since completing his first starring picture, "The Chorus Lady," Margaret Livingston has been kept busy playing in pictures with an "all star" cast. She played in "Up the Ladder," and as soon as that was completed she began work in the Schulberg production, "Capital Punishment."

Lile Lee has been selected to play opposite Thomas Meighan in his next starring picture, "Coming Through." Miss Lee has arrived in New York from the coast with her husband, James Kirkwood and baby son after more than a year's absence.

Richard Dix's next picture, "The Maker of Gestures," is being adapted to the screen by Gerald C. Duffy from a short story by John Monk Saunders.

William de Mille has arrived at the Paramount Long Island studio with his most recent production, "Locked Doors," which was filmed on the West Coast. The director will cut and edit this picture with the aid of Clara Beranger, his scenarist, and Adelaide Cannon, film cutter and editor who came East with the producer for this work.

As George Jean Nathan Views New York Plays

BY permission of the American Mercury are reprinted, from its December issue, the following unadmadversions upon plays current in New York. The excerpts are from the pen of George Jean Nathan, notable critic of the theater and co-editor, with Henry L. Mencken, of his monthly review.

By GEORGE JEAN NATHAN,
Co-Editor, With Henry L. Mencken, of the American Mercury.

"THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY."

THE notion that it is time that has showed up the superficiality and spuriousness of the Pinero drama, that the years elapsed since its creation have been its most devastating critic seems to me somewhat (too complimentary to the genial Sir Arthur. While it is true that it has taken the general public some 30 years or so to discover that the Pinero plays which originally seemed to it to be great masterpieces are intrinsically nothing but third-rate social melodrama, about the only intelligent person who was fooled these threescore years ago was our estimable friend Archer.

I speak specifically on this occasion of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," since it has just been revived by Arthur Hopkins, but what is said of this play applies to the others. "Tanqueray," when it was originally produced, was a popular success not because it was a good play, but because it was, at the time, in the eyes of the generality of theater-goers a daring novelty. It succeeded in the early eighteen nineties for precisely the same reason that such a play as "On Trial" has succeeded more recently. It belongs not to that catalogue of the theater which contains sound drama, but to that catalogue which contains tricky drama. It has assurredly been effective at the box office, and it has also impressed profoundly the one-inch-deep emotionalism of two-feet-thick skulls, but so, too, have been effective in the same way "The White Heather." Lew Morrison's "Faust" and "Saving a Woman in Two."

"Tanqueray" is in good truth pathetically feeble stuff. Even the much-vaunted perfection of its mechanical structure does not overly enchant those of us who doubt that men are suddenly given to the writing of letters when they have friends in to dinner, that the inevitable and expected person always shows up at the right moment, that the crisis of one's life goes arm in arm with extravagant coincidence, and other such artless dramatic conveniences.

Yet there is, above all this, a sure smear of clay on the Pinero food, and that is the manner in which he deliberately cheats his own theme. That theme, as you know, is the possibility of happiness in marriage between a sensitive man of middle years and a woman with a past. But Pinero never gives the theme a free field and a fair chance. Conscious, perhaps, of his inability to tackle the thesis squarely and work it out to a reasonable philosophical conclusion, he evades the responsibility by so exaggerating and melodramatizing it that he is able shrewdly to persuade his susceptible audiences without convincing them.

His Paula Tanqueray is not a woman with merely a past; she is a woman with what may politely be termed a pipperfect. She is a burlesque extravaganza of a woman with a past. She has a record that makes the average gutter girl's look like Peter the Hermit's. She is not theaten and driven to death at length by conventionality in the persons of Ellean and certain of the other personages of the play but by Pinero, and before she starts Poor Aubrey's unhappiness is chalked up for him before the curtain rises. If it hadn't turned out to be Ardale it might have been the butler.

Miss Ethel Barrymore's conception of the stellar role is inapt and inexpedient. She plays Paula as a shrew, a nag, a sulker, and a general gloom. Her Paula would have wrecked any marriage, even if she had been a virgin. Miss Barrymore never for a moment suggests that the reactions of the present are the results of the past; she suggests continuously that what she is with Tanqueray she must also have been with Darcy Ethurst, Jarman, Ardale and all her other lovers. And she suggests coincidently that marriage or no marriage, the majority of these gentlemen had just as hard a time of it with her as poor Aubrey.

"THE SAINT."

THE character of Valdes in Stark Young's play "The Saint," serves at once as an unwitting metaphysical autobiography of the author and as a criticism of him. The particularateness the befuddlement and the obscurity of the character, groping boozily and uncertainly for truth and beauty, are the particularateness, the befuddlement and the obscurity of Young. The author, an essayist and dramatic critic, is like his Valdes, not without sensitiveness and esthetic impulse, and what is more, he can write, but his mind lacks order and discipline and his pen ever travels across paper blindfolded.

Where the call is for emotion in terms of good English, as, for example, in his essays on Italy, Young is equal to the occasion, but where the call is also for clear, direct plan and thought, as in a play like "The Saint" or in the field of dramatic criticism, he is lost. The result in such cases is confusion. In criticism, in particular, is Young a mere composer of cross-word puzzles. Valdes, of a Franciscan seminary on the Texas border, is a baffled searcher after clarity. Life, love, art—all flirt with him, tempt him, torture him, and finally elude him. Young, of the New Republic and the New York Times, is his soul-mate.

The trouble with our affable colleague is that of a hoochie-coochie dancer in a mosquito swamp. His scratchings interfere with his art. He tries to do too many things at the same time, and the itch is greater, woe! woe! than the talent. To read his uncompromising remarks on playwriting leads us properly to expect of him that his own attempts in this quarter shall be—shall we put it?—up to the uncompromising remarks. And when we read his equally uncompromising diatribes against contemporary stage direction, stage illumination and the direction of actors we have a right to expect equally that one of his own productions shall be somewhat exceptional.

"The Saint" is a fairly good play, but it is not a good enough play for one who criticizes other plays as Young criticizes them. The production of "The Saint," for which Young is largely responsible and which presumably represents his critical theories in action, is, aside from Robert Edmond Jones' settings, not nearly so good as many which he has been in the habit of scolding.

Mr. Young has potential ability as a playwright, as a director and as a critic. What he needs is a manager.

I nominate Mr. Erlanger.

"THE GUARDSMAN."

LIKE any number of other modern Hungarian comedies, Molnar's "The Guardsman" has found its theme in an antecedent comedy by Schnitzler. The tale of the suspecting husband who wishes to learn if his wife is unfaithful to him, but who is yet reluctant to know the truth if it be the truth finds its counterpart in the first episode of "Anatol," wherein that Lothario would know if his mistress has deceived him, but is yet held back by his timidity in facing what may be the fact. Molnar has spun a softly wise and jolly little play out of the motif, and the Theater Guild has shrewdly rescued it from the limbo to which a dull American theater-going public consigned it upon its initial revealment in these parts 11 years ago.

Alfred Lunt's performance of the husband is the best of the four performances that I have witnessed; a singularly sagacious instance of comedy acting bestowed upon a dual role which, if handled as it was in the London presentation, for example, becomes nothing but a tricky vaudeville quick-change act of the Henri de Vries, Fregoli or Charles Aldrich order. But Miss Fontanne's performance of the wife is, save in the early part of the first act and the latter part of the third, as thoughtless and injudicious as Lunt's is the opposite.

For all that has been written to the contrary, it is clearly Molnar's idea that the wife does not recognize her disguised husband until the third act is well under way. The by-play between the wife and the critic-friend at the conclusion of the play emphasizes this point, I point, incidentally, carefully stressed by the Guild producers as it was carefully stressed in the first presentation of the play in Austria-Hungary. Yet Miss Fontanne conveys to the audience throughout the second act that she has penetrated the disguise and thus takes all the juice out of the play.

Whether she conveys this intentionally or not, I do not know. She is unfortunate in being the possessor of a set and changeless smile—one that seeks to register various widely differentiated reactions in precisely the same manner—and this smile, which stubbornly declines to modulate its meanings to fit on this occasion disastrously implies that she is not tricked by her husband's artifice. The prodigient ironic comedy of the middle act thus becomes so lopsided that it loses most of its biting humor.

"TIGER CATS."

IN "TIGER CATS," by the Danish Karen Bramson, we have Strindberg and Wedekind in red undershirts and Hurtig and Seamon pants alternately belaboring each other with sausages and seltzer siphons. If ever there was a case of unintentional burlesque, this is one. Take away Beinson's mounting of the play, permit smoking in all parts of the house and have boys sell crackerjack and chewing gum in the aisles between the acts, and all that would be missing to make one certain that one was in the Columbia Theater would be a half dozen sailors, more or less crocked, and the scene in which someone alludes to the Hebrew comedian as Mr. McCarthy.

There is hardly a writer for the theater in the Scandinavian countries who doesn't try his or her hand at a Strindberg opus soon or late, and Mme. Bramson now duly steps into the ring, bows and takes her turn. What she has set herself to do is to combine a character like the wife in "The Father" with a theme like that of "The Dance of Death," with a few chords out of Wedekind's hard-pedal Lulu thrown in for good measure. What she has succeeded in achieving is a ridiculously intense piece of nonsense the central figures of which are characterized only by notes placed in the program and by descriptive adjectives placed in the mouths of the minor characters. Aside from this, the playwright has done utterly nothing in the way of creating character, her central male and female figures are merely empty bottles upon which from time to time the other persons in the play stick large-lettered labels.

The hero of "Tiger Cats" is designated in the program as "an eminent neurologist." At the very beginning of the play, we are privileged to hear this august fellow dictate to his secretary his latest contribution to the world of pathological thought. What he dictates would make even an osteopath laugh. The central female character of the play is denominated a vicious serpent in satin, one who holds her husband in complete thrall with the whip of sex. Yet, aside from a casual line in the text to that effect, there is absolutely no dramatic proof of the fact, the husband's keen sexual relish for his wife having plainly evaporated before the play begins and the crux of the play attesting further and positively to his physical indifference to her.

The Strindberg philosophy of hate-in-love La Bramson tries true enough, to make the underlying motif of her play, but the job is too much for her. All that she does in the way of dramatizing the philosophy is to make the husband periodically clench his fists and stride abruptly toward the window for a relieving breath of air and the wife clench her teeth and stride emptily out of the room with her tummy thrust forward at an impertinent bulge.

Mr. Belasco, for all the accustomed energy and patience which he has expended upon the presentation, has, aside from his usually admirable illumination tricks, not helped the play any. Although the scene in the adaptation—made from the French translation—is laid in Paris, the only suggestion of French atmosphere is the blouse and apron worn by the hero's valet. Otherwise, what with the English accents of Robert Loraine and other of the actors, the locale, for all that it matters, might just as well be set down as London or Boston.

The direction, too, is in an equated channels. I need, in connection, call attention only the episode following the husband's shooting of his wife when, with the clockwork of the 1890 melodrama, the doors at stage left stage right and upper center open simultaneously and frame in Mirabeau the startled maid, manservant and secretary.

Mr. Loraine does everything with the leading male role, but act it, of course, Mr. Loraine is so great a pet of the English theater-going public that, as with all of its pets, it hates to put him to the trouble of exerting himself in the way of acting, but this after all, isn't Mr. Loraine's fault. Miss Katharine Cornell is excellent, as always in the opposite role.

Jacqueline Logan, the former Follies girl, is to be featured in "Off the Highway," a story of the sisters in New York.

Next Week—"Tarnish," Molnar's "The Swan"

TWO plays of a value justifying more than perfunctory advance notifications are Gilbert Emery's "Tarnish," which comes to the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night, and Ferenc Molnar's "The Swan," which begins a week's engagement the following evening, at the American. St. Louis playgoers in the same week will make the acquaintance of two of the prominent successes of last season, one by an American, and the other by a Hungarian. The star of "Tarnish" is Edith Taliaferro, and Miss Eva Le Gallienne is similarly featured in "The Swan," as she was also in Molnar's "Liliom," with Joseph Schildkraut.

"The Swan," produced during October of last year at the Cort Theater in New York, was instantly acclaimed as a superb production, an excellent play and a charming entertainment. The vitality and freshness of minor incident were found amazing. The wit of the prettiest, the sentiment subtly conceived and silky in the rich suggestion of reticence," said Heywood Broun. It is the old story of the Prince, the Princess and the commoner. It is a tutor who dares love the Princess, and it is the Prince who wins her in the end.

On Stage Since She Was 15.

MISS LE GALLIENNE'S performance of the Princess was declared equal to her portrait in "Liliom," which played here two years ago. The daughter of Richard le Gallienne, the poet, she has been on the stage since her fifteenth year, playing with Constance Collier in "Mona Vanna," with Julia Opp Faversham, with Laurette Taylor in "The Melody of Youth" and with Henry E. Dixey in "Mr. Lazarus." Then followed "Liliom," and finally stardom in "The Swan."

Molnar, Hungary's leading dramatist, began his career as an adapter of French and German plays. His first original success was a farce, "The Attorney for the Defense." Then came "The Devil," which won an international name for the author; and "Liliom," which failed when first shown in Budapesth, and did not succeed until it was revived 18 years later. Among his other plays produced in this country are "The Guardsman" and "Fashions for Men."

Tarnished Story of "Tarnish."

GILBERT EMERY'S play was also produced in October, 1923, at the Belmont Theater, New York. It concerns a young woman who wants to idealize her life. The hero proposes marriage to her and through a plausible set of circumstances she finds him only an hour later in the room of a lady of the pavement. She refuses to listen to explanations until a tawdry woman herself rises in high moral might and tells the hero that her sense of outraged virtue is a mean thing, and that those without a basis in truth are more dirty than sin.

Miss Taliaferro has played "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and other undertakings. She will be supported here by Frederick March, Marion Benda, Curtis Dempsey, Edith Shayne, Grace Connell, Dorothy Chase and Lee Ripley.

I Paid $5.00

To obtain powders like these.

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I long paid $5.00 per box for my face powder. So do most beauties in the movies and on the stage. We have them made to order, by the greatest of experts, and no price is too high to pay.

I have for 40 years consulted the leading powder experts. I have obtained their best, regardless of the cost. So many of my friends have for decades ordered their powders through me.

When I offered my beauty helps to women, they overwhelmed me with requests for powder. They wanted to use what I use. But I could not offer them this powder at the price I paid.

So I went to the makers. I told them I could sell a million boxes at ordinary prices. They finally agreed to supply it—my identical powders—under the name of Edna Wallace Hopper.

Now you can obtain it. Every druggist and toilet counter has it. It comes in two types. One is heavy, clinging, cold cream powder. That is the type I like best. But the other is light and fluffy. The heavy powder in square box costs $1.00, the light in round boxes only 50 cents.

You will find these supreme creations. No powders you have used can compare. Any face powder branded Edna Wallace Hopper is an exquisite product.

In Studio and Gallery

ST. LOUIS activities have a pleasant way of demonstrating themselves once a year in brilliant spectacle. Society has the Veiled Prophet; merchandising interests have the Fashion Show; sportsmen have the Horse Show; motorists have the Automobile Show; horticulturists have the Flower show, and artists have the Guild's Open Competitive Exhibition, the most significant local art display on the St. Louis calendar.

A week ago a reception at the Guild formally opened the twelfth annual exhibition. Now that the torrents of grief and gladness, horror and hilarity, agony and exultation resulting from that revelation are subsiding, a general and unbiased inspection of the works is taking place. The fluctuations of opinion based precariously on first-night impressions fraught with surprise and similar dizzying distractions have given way to saner contemplation of both the collective and individual merits of the paintings, drawings, etchings and sculpture.

William Schevill's "Adam and Eve" is one of the first paintings to attract attention and arouse comment. It is a gigantic undertaking and one which has not, even yet, received its final fullfilments from the artist. The qualities within the picture are so different and even inconsistent that the definite determination of the painting as one thing or another—decorative or realistic—becomes problematical. We would prefer it to be entirely decorative since its very subject invites a primitive manner of handling. We would like it to be flatter, more as a design instead of a figure study. But there is some fine drawing in the picture as it now stands and there is no eluding the fact that some splendid painting is contained in every section of the canvas. Our only regret is that the picture is so literal. An archaic Adam and Eve in modern style is anachronistic. To a number of spectators will occur the idea of comparing and contrasting Mr. Schevill's "Adam and Eve" with Eugene Francis Savage's "Expulsion" recently purchased by the City Art Museum and now hung in Gallery 18.

Our idea of the greatest picture in the Guild Show is Oscar Bernhaus' big, dazzling, resonant "Autumn Days" that sings right out in rich contralto. Its remarkable simplicity of actual subject . . . . . an Indian and horse, tree trunks and foliage . . . . . so ardently handled as to almost inflate the canvas, shows the strength of its conception, its propelling force. The ease, the pleasure, the dexterity with which the idea was executed are so delightfully present in every square inch. Sympathy for the old white horse, interest in the weathered old Indian, respect for the gnarled old tree trunks combine to strengthen the effect of the pattern of the picture. It is semi-realistic, just the right amount of "decorativeness" being maintained to distinguish it and place it among the "unforgetables."

We speak of the ease and pleasure with which the picture was done. Nowhere are these qualities more evident than in the foliage of the trees. An elaborate series of fingerprints rivaled in clarity only by those advocated in the Bertillon system construct the driving power of paint and color that make up the moving foliage. Anyone purchasing this picture has, therefore, permanent and incontrovertible identification and proof of the authenticity of the painting.

ARTHUR MITCHELL'S 40 paintings and sketches exhibited at the Healy Galleries form a pleasant group of St. Louis scenes painted at random. Eads Bridge, Kingshighway, Portland place, Lindell boulevard, etc., have supplied material for a number of pictures. Some of Mr. Mitchell's impressions are very nice. Sunlight playing strongly on the ornamental walls of the Coronado Hotel has been contrasted effectively with the shadow of the Masonic Temple construction. The Cathedral has been painted in full blue lights that suggest either early morning or early eveping, appropriate to the structure and subject. Pride in the metropolitan aspect and atmosphere of Kingshighway and Lindell has been shown in the dignified delineation of the Hotel Chase, the Chester and the St. Regis apartments. Looking down "Church Row," Mr. Mitchell depicts the edifices there with an impartial admiration befitting the proximity of the Second Baptist Church, Temple Isreal, St. John's Methodist and the First Church of Christ, Scientist. Mr. Mitchell's paintings are not especially profound, but they are not painted with emotional or inspirational motives. These pictures represent Mr. Mitchell's recreation and were done for the sheer enjoyment derived thereby by the painter.

AN exhibit of Bulgarian peasant textile weaving and needlework is being shown in the Delivery Hall of the Central Public Library until the end of the month. The work is done by Mrs. Angeline Dimithrova, cousin of Walter Rousseff, through whom the exhibit here was made possible. The 11 pieces shown are blouse cut in characteristic Bulgarian peasant style. Mrs. Dimitrova is an instructor of design in the Bulgarian schools and teaches not only pattern designing but textile weaving as exemplified in the actual cloth from which these blouses are made. The skillful needlework is as important in its finesse as is the intricate design executed in the decorative bandings and stitchings. Aside from their beauty of technique, the blouses have a quaint charm. They are for sale and may be purchased through the art department of the Public Library will be replaced Dec. 1 by a collection of paintings by Albert Block, former St. Louis artist, now professor of fine arts at the University of Kansas. Mr. Block belongs among the "progressives" and his work is extremely modern in tendency, thus promising an interesting show for the following month.

The December exhibition at the City Art Museum will consist of 25 paintings by California artists. Benjamin C. Brown, a former St. Louis artist, assembled the collection, which is now being circulated by the American Federation of Arts. Foremost among the Western artists represented are William Ritschell, William Wendt and Benjamin Brown. The Pacific Coast and other California scenery comprises the subjects.

The Post-Dispatch Black and White Competition is a new event being inaugurated this year which, if successful, will become an annual affair of much interest and benefit to all workers in any black and white medium. Any artist, resident or nonresident, may enter any number of drawings of St. Louis scenes in the competition. Any black and white medium may be used and only original drawings are eligible. All work submitted will be exhibited. The size must not exceed 25x30 inches. The Post-Dispatch offers the following prizes as a special incentive: First prize, $250; second prize, $100; third prize, $50. It also reserves the right to publication of all work submitted, and the winning pictures will become its property for uses within its discretion. All artists are urged to compete and make the contest successful. Details can be obtained from the Artists' Guild.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

WEEKS SAYS TOO MUCH ECONOMY IS HURTING ARMY

Country Must Consider "Sound and Continuing Policy," Declares Secretary in Annual Report.

URGES INCREASE IN PERSONNEL

Force Must "Live on Imagination" Unless Greater Income for Efficient Organization Is Assured.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Secretary Weeks advised President Coolidge in his annual report made public today that conditions in the United States Army now have reached the stage where "a sound and continuing policy with regard to its necessities must be seriously considered by the legislative department of our Government."

In this connection the War Secretary declared the Army's requirements had been studied with care and fitted into a 10-year program which should be put into effect by Congress "in a manner that will conform not only to the military needs of the military service but also to the financial condition of the Government."

In another section of the report the statement was made that "the pressure for necessary progress and improvement is even greater" than the "pressure for economy." The Secretary recited in detail the retrenchments made by the Army in the last few years in order to effect economies and keep within appropriations made by Congress and added:

"With the funds allowed during the past fiscal year, however, it has not been possible either to carry out the full mission of the defense forces or to practice true economy."

Strength Near "Danger Point."

The statement to Congress made by President Coolidge in his first message, pointing out that reductions in the army's commissioned and enlisted strength had reduced its power to the "danger point" and asserted that "further reductions should not be made," was referred to by the Secretary who declared the chief executive's words now composed "an understatement of the necessities of the case."

The Secretary advanced the opinion that the time had come when the country should look further into the future when considering army problems and the year-to-year method of treating such questions should give way to a continuing policy of relief and increased provision for the three components of the military service—the regular army, the National Guard and the organized reserves.

"As we face this unfortunate situation, like the business man arranging his schedule of work and his plans for the allotment of funds, and decide that relief is urgently needed and must be spread over a period of years," the Secretary said, "we are faced with two determining factors in American law and custom. The estimated date when our process of rehabilitation must be complete when the various treaties arising out of the Washington conference cease to be effective, and when the superannuation of the veterans of the World War will have practically eliminated our reserve of citizens of experience in the field, would seem to require that our plans for rehabilitation and our expenditure for that purpose can be spread over and much reach an end at the expiration of a 10-year period, providing such a plan and such expenditures begin to be effective at this time."

Urges Increase.

After pointing to defects in the army establishment, caused by shortage of officers and enlisted men, and again putting himself on record in favor of increasing their numbers respectively from 12,000 to 13,000 and from 125,000 to 130,000, Secretary Weeks said:

"If future emergencies come to the United States, we shall have to create virtually our entire force after the declaration of war, which will be a tremendous task, however well conceived. Probably in no other army in the world, consequently, is it so important as in ours that organization, material, equipment, training plans and mobilization projects should be as simple as possible.

"Practicality does not thrive in circumstances where shortage of officers makes its necessary to detail, as instructors with civilian components, officers who have not had sufficient duty with a unit of their own branch of service. Practicality does not thrive in inactive units, depleted strengths, imaginary maneuvers, paper plans, fictitious reserve stocks and theoretical weapons.

Depend Too Much on Theory.

"Our greatest peril today is too great a dependence upon theory to the exclusion of fact. This is the danger against which the army must always strive. This is the one important fact underlying the general situation as well as the detailed elements of our present military situation, a fact of which the legislative department of the Government should take ample cognizance in considering the practical projects which the army deems essential to the execution of the mission assigned to it by law. Unless we are to live upon imagination, the army must have an income that bears a tangible relation to its needs."

By way of illustrating some of the "deleterious effects of our period of extraordinary economy," the secretary cited a shortage of commissioned personnel which, he said, had reduced the "quota of officers on duty with units of all components to less than 80 per cent of peace requirements." Lack of funds, he added, also had made it necessary to issue clothing to enlisted men from war stocks, giving commands an unmilitary appearance or compelling soldiers to expend large proportions of their personal funds to keep up proper appearance in public.

"This is not the road to efficiency," he declared, adding in the words of former President Harding that "there are limits in reduction beyond which we cannot go, even in the praiseworthy cause of economy, without destroying the excellent foundation now laid for national defense and forfeiting the accrued benefits of World War experience."

Reverting to needs of the Army Air Service, the Secretary declared for "increased production facilities" and an "increase in our Air Service personnel in order to give us a peace force of 2000 officers and 25,000 enlisted men."

In the National Guard and the Organized Reserves increases, Weeks said the growth noted during the last fiscal year had been encouraging.

National Guard Growing.

"At the end of the fiscal year," he said, "the guard was already growing beyond the limits set by current appropriations."

Referring to the Organized Reserve, the Secretary asserted that "an increase in the training over that now available for reserves is absolutely necessary to maintain popular interest and maintain efficiency in the reserve project."

Modification of the system of promotion by seniority also was suggested. In this connection the Secretary said he would alter existing laws to provide concrete rewards by way of advancement for conspicuous service.

The Secretary admitted that the present promotion system provided competent officers but said a more satisfactory scheme would result if special promotions could be handed out, one grade at a time, and not in excess of 2 per cent of those made under the seniority arrangement. A specific recommendation that Congress amend the National Defense Act to make such special promotions possible was included in the Secretary's closing statements.

"The singer (name) is no better."

"We are perfectly delighted."

Are only a few of the praises I receive. My Canaries are strong and healthy, sing and sell in all parts of the United States. Their training is by 43 years of experience with only one aim in mind—to produce high-grade singers.

There are more fine rollers in full song in my house than in all other places combined.

When Mussolini Mistook A Doorman for a Premier

Veteran Servant Tells How the Great and Near-Great Entered British Prime Minister's Residence.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Robert Lloyd, the gray-haired doorman who has ushered the great and the near-great in and out of the door of 10 Downing street for many years, is being retired for old age. He is 67 years old, and his head is full of memories and impressions of most of the figures who got into Europe's spotlight in the days before, during and after the World War. It was in the war days, when the vigorous Lloyd George occupied the Prime Minister's house, that the doorman of No. 10 found the most exciting hours of his life. Of all the Prime Ministers for whom he has opened the door, he liked Bonar Law best.

"I revered him," he said.

"When Mr. Lloyd George was Prime Minister we were on hot cinders all the time. I was constantly lining up Field Marshals, Generals, Admirals, Ambassadors and other distinguished visitors.

"Marshal Joffre was always good humored. Marshal Foch seemed kindly, but was always in a hurry. Gen. Smuts was charming. He always shook hands with me. I recall Signor Mussolini arriving, too. He burst into the vestibule and, shaking me cordially by the hand, expressed his pleasure at meeting 'England's Prime Minister.' I had to tell him he had hold of the wrong man.

"The first time the Prince of Wales came to lunch, he dashed in with: 'Hello, porter! Where do I put my coat? Here, leave it on your chair, will you?' The Duke of York was more serious.

"The way in which De Valera, Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith arrived with guards on their taxicab was quite new."

Amistice day, according to Lloyd, was easily the most exciting he ever experienced. Crowds packed the short narrow street in front of the house, calling for Lloyd George. He came out and spoke to them from the steps, but the growing crowd was not satisfied, and later the little Welshman appeared at a window and talked to them again.

MORE BOYS THAN GIRLS BORN WHEN MOTHERS ARE PAST 25

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

DRESDEN, Germany, Nov. 10.—That the age of the mother has an important relation to the sex of the child is asserted by Dr. Fetscher of this city, who has made this topic the subject of special studies. He found that with mothers up to 25 years there were just as many boys as girls. With the mothers between 25 and 30 years, the ratio of boys to girls was 111 to 100, while in the case of mothers of 35 and more years there were 124 boys and 100 girls.

The exact cause of the phenomeneno of the sudden increase of boys born as compared to girls, in the years after the war, has not yet been ascertained.

Sarrail French Envoy to Syria.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Gen. M. P. Sarrail, former Commander-in-Chief of allied operations in the Balkans, has been appointed French high commissioner to Syria, to succeed Gen. Maxime Weygand, recalled to become head of the Center Military High Schools.

BERLIN ACTS TO CUT LIVING COSTS BY AIDING BUSINESS

Government Lowers Freight Rates 10 Per Cent and Reduces Cost of Coal.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—With the view of reducing the high cost of living in Germany the Government has taken the lead in enacting measures designed to give an impetus to business generally through out the country and to decrease the cost of various every day necessities to the consumers. The first move on the part of the Berlin officials was a decrease of 10 per cent in the freight rates on the State owned railroads. The price of coal has also been reduced from 8 to 10 per cent.

The next reduction scheduled is in the charges made by the post-office Department for the transmission of money. Changes in the banking regulations as contemplated include the cost of reduction of credit facilities extended by the banks, governmental and municipal financial institutions, and the lifting of numerous restrictions in the matter of handling of foreign exchange.

SAYS DRY LAW MAKES FINLAND DRINK MORE

Delegate at Copenhagen Meeting Attacks Activities of Americans.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 10.—Delegates from various Danish, Norwegian, Swedish and Finnish anti-prohibition organizations, mostly scientists and other professional men, met recently in Copenhagen to discuss measures to combat "the pernicious activities of American and native prohibition agents and provocateurs now working busily for foisting upon Europe the humiliating bondage of the hypocritical American prohibition law."

At a public meeting Maj. Hulten of Helsingfors declared that Finland was now the only absolutely dry country in Europe, Norway and Iceland being but semi-dry countries, their Governments having been compelled to allow the importation of certain wines like port and madeira to avoid having their chief article of export, dried codfish, barred from the wine-producing countries of the Mediterranean.

Prior to going dry Finland had, Maj. Hulten asserted, a lower consumption of alcoholic beverages than any other country in Europe. After the introduction of prohibition the picture changed, he declared, adding that "Finland is now steeped in liquors." Enormous amounts of liquor, good and bad, were daily smuggled into the country, it being impossible for the Government to curb the rum traffic owing to Finland's enormous stretches of coast line, he asserted, and declared in conclusion that the Finnish hospitals were crowded with victims of drink.

10-Day Proof Treatment Sent to Any Sufferer ⟶ FREE

Deafness and Catarrh Are Dangerous

While Deafness or Catarrh may not be considered dangerous, when neglected they often lead to all sorts of complications. Authorities claim that nearly 90 per cent of all deafness is caused primarily by Catarrh of the head. Others state that many cases of indigestion, rheumatism and a number of other constitutional troubles are caused by neglecting Catarrhal conditions of the head, nose and throat.

A Trial Will Amaze You

I am so proud of my achievement and so anxious to help other sufferers that I will gladly send a 10-day proof treatment by prepaid parcel post absolutely free to every one who writes me. I want to prove entirely at my own risk and expense that this treatment will give relief to sufferers from Catarrhal deafness, Catarrh and head noises. The results from my treatment are quick and convincing. You can feel the difference in a few days. A trial costs you absolutely nothing. You are under no obligation whatsoever. Simply fill in your name and address on coupon. Cut it out and mail today for a ten-day proof free treatment. This is the best treatment I have ever found in over forty years' practice as an "Eye, Ear, Nose & Throat Specialist." I want you to try it free.

Brings QUICK RELIEF to Many Sufferers Why Not You?

Already thousands of sufferers have taken advantage of my liberal offer. My 10-day free treatment has brought many quick relief. Why not give it an opportunity to do the same for you? I don't ask you to send one penny. The 10-day proof treatment is absolutely free. Just send your name and address and state whether you have Catarrh only or also suffer from Catarrhal deafness and noises. You will be under no obligation whatsoever. I think I treat more cases of Catarrhal deafness, Catarrh and head noises than any oculist in the United States, and I know this treatment is the best I have ever used so I urge you to accept my free offer and send the coupon today.

Read What These People Say:

J. C., Elmer, Mo., says: I am 86 years old. I had suffered with catarrh, partial deafness and head noises for 8 years. I used a short course of Dr. Coffee's treatment and was completely relieved from catarrh deafness and head noises.

Mr. A. G., Princeville, Ill.—70 years old, stated he had been afflicted with catarrh of the nose, head, throat and stomach for 35 years, growing deaf and had head noises for about four years. Dr. Coffee's treatment completely relieved him.

Mrs. A. R. of Davenport, Ia., says she suffered with catarrh of the nose and head and sinuses for 40 years, suffered much pain in the nose and frontal head. Doctors said an operation was necessary. Dr. Coffee's treatment gave her complete relief in a short while.

A. W. S. of Rockford, Ill., says he suffered with catarrh for 15 years, had become an invalid. It went to his bronchial tubes and stomach, finally started to make him deaf. Doctors could not give him relief. Dr. Coffee's treatment stopped this disease and gave him complete relief.

M. S., from St. Louis, Mo., states she suffered with catarrh 48 years, gradually losing her hearing, suffered with terrible head noises, was so deaf she could not hear any conversation and had not heard a telephone in 17 years. Her catarrh was completely relieved and the hearing restored so she could hear a telephone with each ear.

J. H. McM., Birmingham, Ala. Your 10 days' treatment completely relieved all symptoms of catarrh.

J. S., Columbus, Ohio. Your 10-days' treatment relieved my catarrh, stopped the ringing in my ears.

G. L., Milburn, Okla. I could hardly breathe through my nose from catarrh. Your 10-days' treatment relieved me.

J. H. B., Henry, Idaho, suffered terribly with catarrh, head noises, deafness in left ear. Your treatment completely relieved me.

Mrs. L. K., Bomanadale, Pa. Your free treatment relieved me of catarrh, stopped the awful roaring in my ears and restored my hearing.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as Snake Oil
STOPS PAIN

From coast to coast men and women are singing the praise of "Snake Oil," a most powerful, penetrating pain-relieving liniment. It will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes. Mrs. R. Werner, New Orleans, La., writes: "Thanks to your wonderful penetrating oil, it relieved me of Rheumatism and deep-seated chest cold after other remedies failed."

"I had rheumatism so bad I had to walk on crutches for nine years," says H. C. Hendrix, old soldier of Minneapolis, Minn. "After three months' treatment with 'Snake Oil' laid off my crutches and now can walk like a boy."

J. B. Moore, Pittsburg, Pa., railroad man, says: "'Snake Oil' is the only liniment that ever gave me relief from rheumatism. I use it regular after being exposed to bad weather." For rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, stiff joints, pain in back and limbs, corns, bunions, chest colds, sore throat, "Snake Oil" is said to be without an equal. Refuse imitations, nothing like it. Get it from your druggist.

For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercolized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any drugstore, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

Give a Suite of Furniture This Year

WITH the approach of Christmas the interest of people is turned toward the home, and the grand old custom of gift-giving. And since the home plays such an important part in Christmas festivities—a gift of Furniture is the most appreciated of all gifts.

MORE families each year are "going together" in the purchase of gifts for the home, such as a new suite for the living room, or a much-needed dining-room suite—or perhaps new Furniture for mother's bedroom. A visit to our store at this time will be a revelation. There are hundreds of practical inexpensive gifts for everyone on your list. When you buy a gift here there is always the added satisfaction, "it came from Prufrock-Litton's."

=EDITORIAL=
Start the Day Right

A splendid way to be awakened each morning is with music.

Have the maid, or the first one up in your household, start the Phonograph or the Player-Piano each morning at a definite time with some lively tune.

On Sunday morning your favorite sacred hymn or the church choir; on Christmas morning your choice Christmas chant.

You will be surprised how it will help all housewives, business or professional men and women, who have become irritable.

Do your physical exercise with music for three minutes on arising.

Try it! Start the day right!

(Signed)

Harry Prufrock.

This old herbal remedy has been used for 50 years in all parts of the world in bringing blessed relief to sufferers from kidney and liver ills. For your health's sake take care of your kidneys.

HUNDREDS KILLED EVERY YEAR ON HUNTING TRIPS

Two Hundred Dead and Three Times as Many Injured Is Toll So Far This Season.

MOST EXPENSIVE OF ALL SPORTS

Millions of Dollars Spent Annually for Guns and Ammunition—Fires Protect Animals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK.—The eternal quest of "sport" has taken its toll of life and limb among American homes in the past months of the hunting season. Battles, grave and desperate, and disease, fought in organized campaigns, many of them have been no more disastrous in the cost they charged.

Almost 200 killed and three times as many wounded—that is the approximation of the toll the hunting season thus far has taken in this country, as gathered from incomplete statistics in the states. And that is but a small per cent of the usual cost of life and limb—because forest fires have prevented hunting this year on its usual large scale.

Guns accidentally discharged as they leaned against a tree trunk or against a fence, as they were cleaned of dropped by the hunter who was not careful; and guns aimed at "something moving in the trees" which was no beast or bird, but a man shielded from sight by overhanging leaves and boughs—these are the two chief causes of casualties. Men have shot themselves. They have shot their friends and men they never saw before.

One hundred and forty-nine years ago, when the Americans and British opened fire at the battle of Bunker Hill, the first pitched battle of the war which gave us independence, only 450 Americans were killed or wounded. That is hundreds less than the annual cost in human lives and limbs through hunting.

The sinking of the Battleship Maine on Feb. 15, 1898, which plunged this country into the Spanish-American War, took 260 lives.

In 1923 20 hunters were killed and 77 wounded in New York State. In Wisconsin three persons already have been killed this season and many injured. Other casualties so far listed are: Michigan, 28 accidents resulting in 10 deaths and 18 injuries; Minnesota, three killed and many injured. Incomplete reports for Ohio indicate that within the past few days alone, in three counties only, seven persons have been injured.

Hunting casualties have been paraicularly tragic in that hunters are not the only ones to be victimized. Frequent spectators have been peppered with shot.

Aside from the casualties hunting has caused, it is an expensive sport and involves the expenditure of millions of dollars annually. With rifles ranging from $25 to $50 and cartridges about 5 cents a piece, with from 8,000,000 to 12,000,000 annually in the field, hunting causes a tremendous financial output.

Six hundred thousand men and women in New York State have sought to kill the deer, moose, rabbits, squirrels, pheasants, quails and grouse in the open country this year—in the name of sport. While the lure of the hunt keeps some of them at it for weeks, they spend an average of four hours each in the field, it was estimated—which means a loss of 2,400,000 business hours or 300,000 days of business to the state.

Hunting has cost the lives of so many representatives of wild animal life that certain species are fast dying out. New York hunters alone killed 9000 deer in 1922 and 12,000 in 1923. Forest fires raging in the mountain regions and permitting only a day of deer hunting this year, saved the lives of 11,000 to 12,000 animals.

Each year sees the death of 100,000 pheasants at the hands of hunters and that the sport may be perpetuated three game farms are maintained to liberate 12,000 birds annually and distribute 110,000 eggs among farmers and clubs, who will see that they are hatched. The cost, according to Llewellyn Legge of the Forest, Fish and Game Commission, runs in the high thousands of dollars mark.

Similar conditions existing throughout other states combine to make hunting the most costly of all sports—in life and time and money—more costly than the campaigns being waged by many organizations to check the spread of dread diseases that take tolls in human life more costly than pitched battles.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

The Season's Greatest Novel of Morals and Marriage

THE GOLDEN BED

By Wallace Irwin

The story of two women—one a golden tigress tearing out men's hearts for the fascination of the game, the other all sympathy and tenderness—and what they did to a self-made millionaire who was an all too human combination of strength and weakness. The story has been hailed by critics and public alike as one of the most searching and intimate novels of American marriage ever written. It glows and sparkles with life and love. Its characters will linger delightfully in your memory.

Has Hard Time to Feed Wife

Once Stomach Trouble—Now Big Appetite

"My wife was afflicted with stomach trouble for years. She tried everything but got no relief. Adlerika was recommended to me and I want to give my heartfelt thanks. My wife is now in the BEST OF HEALTH and it costs me about all I make to feed her. Have recommended Adlerika to a good many and it has helped every one." (Signed) F. M. Nobel.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspecting quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowl inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 27 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Sgarra.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. G. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

WARMTH OF VARIOUS WEIGHTS OF BLANKETS SHOWN BY TESTS

Those of Moderate Density Best Retain Heat Indoors; Difference Between Wool and Cotton.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Blankets of moderate density were found to be the most effective for retaining heat when not exposed to air currents, in tests conducted by the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce. Heavyweight blankets, however, proved more effective in keeping out the wind. The tests made covered measurements of the heat retaining properties of the blankets, their resistance to the flow of air, and their resistance to the evaporation of water through them.

It was found that increase in thickness led to a proportionate increase in resistance to heat flow, and that of blankets having the same thickness but different densities the greatest resistance to heat flow in still air was given by a blanket having a density of 0.0835 grams per cubic centimeter. Blankets of lesser density seemed to allow too much air to circulate within their structure, while in heavy blankets too much heat escaped by conduction along the fibers. The purpose of these fibers, the bureau explains, is to hold the air still. It is the still air, not the wool or cotton, that keeps the heat in.

Resistance to the passage of air currents was found to increase with the closeness of the weave, and hence with the density. Resistance to the escape of moisture also increased with the density.

In comparing cotton blankets with woolen the bureau found no significant difference in the heat resistance or in the resistance to passage of air or moisture. Cotton blankets, however, are likely to be stiffer than wool and fit less closely around the neck. They also have the undesirable property of absorbing moisture, whereas wool repels it. On the other hand, they are much cheaper. It is believed they could be used to good advantage indoors with sheets, while the advantages of wool are most pronounced for camping.

Plan International Farm Bloc.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BRUGG, Switzerland, Nov. 29.—Politicians the world over will be struggling with an international farm bloc, known as the Green Internationale, if the plans recently worked out here under the leadership of Professor Lauer are carried into execution. Representatives of the United States, England, Germany, France, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Holland and Hungary attended the meeting. It was decided to open a permanent secretarial office immediately, with a view to launching the organization at a convention to be held next year in Warsaw.

CHRISTMAS SEALS ON SALE TOMORROW

Funds Derived Will Be Used in Campaign Against Tuberculosis.

Christmas Health Seals will be on sale, beginning tomorrow, by the Tuberculosis Society.

The annual Christmas Health Seal campaign, which this year is passing its seventeenth milestone, is a national educational movement for better health and prevention of tuberculosis. In the city of St. Louis, the keynote of all branches of this work is education. To reach every age and class group through every avenue of approach and tell them the story of life and health is the aim of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

The "Record Service" for 1924 shows that the home, the school, and the business house, formed a background for the public health activities as carried on by the society. Through health talks before Mothers' Clubs, through the movies and literature, and through the school children themselves, health truths are carried on in the city parochial and all county schools, and is soon to become a part of the curriculum of the city public schools. In the industrial world, health talks have become so important that they have grown into real educational rallies combining other educational features with health.

Report of Service.

The report compiled from the record of service shows that during the past year 373 talks were given to 54,104 persons, and that in this connection there was a distribution of 88,465 pieces of literature and 197 showings of health films. Altogether 400,000 pieces of literature were given out free, including preventive letters which go into the homes where contagious diseases are reported, health tags and school day folders.

The Society has also been active in efforts to obtain adequate municipal appropriations for enlarging and properly equipping Koch Hospital, in adding a physician and several nurses to the staff, and in obtaining appropriations for two more buildings. The Municipal Nurses' staff has been increased by the addition of two supervisors and four clerks. In the county the establishment of a full-time health department has been followed by a plan to enlarge the scope of work. A public health nurse, assigned to schools, has been provided. A traveling dental clinic is another piece of work successfully launched.

To child health work, however, is a great portion of the program devoted. The Modern Health Crusade, a class-room method of teaching health habits, has been carried on as a successful project for several years in city parochial and all county schools. Sixty-seven parochial schools with 21,679 children and 110 county schools with 10,628 pupils are enrolled in this work. In parochial schools three nutrition classes of 20 weeks each were conducted, and 21 milk stations were established. A weighing and measuring service has been supplied to 29 schools through the co-operation of a volunteer committee using the Tuberculosis Society traveling scales. In the county an extensive dental examination was conducted in co-operation with the St. Louis Dental Society. More than 9000 children were examined. Medical and physical examinations are also given to bring out physical defects so they may be corrected while the child is young.

Open Air Schools.

Open air schools maintained by the society in co-operation with the Board of Education last year restored more than 400 children to health. The Residential Open Air School, where little girls who do not gain properly in the day open air schools are taken to be under 24 hours daily supervision, is maintained entirely by the society, the Board of Education providing the teacher and school-room equipment only. The Night and Day Camps, where self-supporting girls and women who are broken down in health are restored to normal, discharged 100 girls last year as physically fit. In connection with these activities is the social service department of the society which takes care of all those applying for open air benefits, and which follows up each case after it is discharged to see that good health is continued.

Since a tuberculosis organization, says the report, is fundamentally an educational enterprise, its system of raising money must necessarily carry with its educational value, to convince the thousands of individuals in the community that fighting the spread of this disease is a community problem. There is no more democratic or comprehensive method of raising money than by the seal. Even the tiniest child can buy one seal.

The Tuberculosis Society is not in the Community Fund. It is indorsed by the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and has been established 28 years.

CHRISTIANIA TO BE NAMED "OSLO" BEGINNING JAN. 1

Mail for Capital of Norway Should Be So Addressed Next Year.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 29.—The Norwegian parliament having voted to change the name of this capital city of Norway to Oslo, all mail and cablegrams from all parts of the world should, beginning Jan. 1, 1925, be addressed to the new name.

The name Oslo is the revival of an old appellation. Christiania used to be called Oslo previous to 1624. The city was founded in 1048.

During the last hundred years Christiania, with a population today of 260,000, has developed into a commercial city on a European scale, and holds a leading position in the industrial life of the country.

"SUPREME COURT" OF BUILDING TRADES WILL MEET HERE

The National Board for Jurisdictional Awards, the "Supreme Court" in the building industry in America, will meet at Hotel Jefferson Dec. 8, the length of the session to be determined by the amount of business to be transacted.

The board was organized in 1919 to settle jurisdictional disputes in the building trades. It consists of eight members—three international officers of building crafts, and a representative each of the American Institute of Architects, Engineering Council, Associated General Contractors of America, National Association of Builders Exchanges, and the National Building Trades' Employment Association. Members serve for two years, and may be reelected. Meetings are held every four months, this being the first time the body has assembled in St. Louis.

The meeting of the Jurisdictional Board here has no particular significance as concerns local building conditions. Several matters dealing with local conditions will be decided. None, however, is of great importance. The authority of the body was questioned by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners when the work of setting hollow metal window frames and hanging hollow metal sash was awarded the Sheet Metal Workers, in a decision rendered Dec. 4, 1920. The carpenters' organization withdrew from the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and their representative on the Jurisdictional Board signed. The carpenters' body is only one of the large building unions in the country that does not accept the decisions of the Jurisdictional Board.

A local Board of Jurisdictional Awards, to act in local disputes between meetings of the National board, is in the process of formation. Meetings have been held, and it is expected that the organization will be completed before January 1. The Carpenters' Union has refused to become a party to the project, and, as a result, the body will work under a similar handicap as the national board in dealing with disputes involving the carpenters' organization.

75% Of All Sickness
caused by clogging

Take constipation seriously; remove it promptly with a stiff dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

AN old-fashioned notion persists that constipation is unavoidable, yet it is easily prevented and may be easily relieved. The fact is that certain foods do not agree with certain people, so avoid those which do not agree with you.

When you feel clogged up take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and relief will come by morning. Many who are habitually constipated take a dose regularly once a week as a precaution.

There are, of course, many other remedies that you can take besides Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Cathartics and physics in the form of pills and powders, however, are harsh and griping; Syrup Pepsin is a liquid, a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant aromatics, and it acts gently and mildly but emphatically. The formula is on the package.

Candy cathartics, which usually contain phenolphtalein, a coal-tar drug, may cause skin eruptions, and salt waters are simply a purge that dries up the saliva. You are therefore best off with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been the standard laxative of thousands of families for more than 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are bought annually.

Every druggist sells it, and at so low a price that an average dose costs less than a cent. Many attribute the unbroken good health of their entire family to the general use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as Mrs. Allie Graham, Hamley, Tex., and Mr. A. F. Schmit, 1517 Detroit Ave., Toledo, Ohio. They use it for constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, torpid liver, heartburn, fevers and colds. It contains no narcotics or opiates and is as safe for an infant as for you.

People who know will tell you that Syrup Pepsin is a truly wonderful internal treatment, which dispels all forms of intestinal poisons resulting from constipation and indigestion, disorders which cause 75 per cent of all the more serious diseases. A teaspoonful when you are feverish or feel a cold coming on may ward off an illness and save you time, money and inconvenience.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, pin their name and address to it, and send it to the Pepsin Syrup Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It is free.

The Magic of the Automobile

In olden days the distance from St. Louis to Chicago looked colossal—a journey to be considered very seriously before being undertaken.

It was a matter of transportation. Distance decreases as motive power increases, and miles have now become a matter of minutes under the magic of the railroad and the motor car.

The railroad gave man speed, but made him move in groups and conform to schedules.

The automobile began a new era for him as an individual. It gave him independence of thought and movement.

Go when you will, where you will, with whom you will, and whenever the opportunity offers—such freedom a man buys with his automobile.

Add to it the convenience of making short business trips in a single day; the comforts of being out of crowds; the fresh air, the interesting places to be seen off the beaten path; the recreation it puts within reach of the whole family; the saving in time, effort and money paid out for other means of transportation——and you have only partially summed up the magic a car has wrought in the lives of those who possess one.

Put this magic into your life. The cost can be regulated to suit your purse. Excellent, service-giving cars are featured daily in the classified "Automobiles" columns of the Post-Dispatch.

The Carpenters' Union has refused to become a party to the project and, as a result, the body will be under a similar handicap as the National board in dealing with disputes involving the carpenters' organization.

ERLIN DISCOVERS REAL ACTING IN 'MADAME BUTTERFLY'

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Two Mme. Butterflys whom the tenor could carry off the stage have been the sensation of the Berlin opera season. Eleanor Painter, the American prima donna, and Teiko Kiva, a real Japanese prima donna, are the two small women who have charmed Berlin opera goers with their interpretation of Puccini's heroine, which was characterized as high dramatic art, as well as excellent singing.

Singers who are vocalists, rather than actors, have heretofore been assigned to the role in Berlin operas; so Miss Painter was much discussed when she gave an intensely dramatic performance, in which Franz Kirchner, the tenor, who was playing Lieut. Pinkerton, U. S. N., picked her up and carried her off the stage. Some of the critics apparently were surprised to see the acting possibilities of Puccini's work, when Miss Painter broke the ice, but they were inclined to believe that her interpretation did not embody the Japanese spirit.

OLD CHRONICLES OF ENGLAND FOR U. S.

University of Chicago to Get 2000 Documents Once Property of Bacon Family.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—New light on social, economic and industrial conditions in England, during a period of over five centuries, is expected to be obtained when careful study is made of nearly 2000 documents, once the property of the famous Bacon family. This collection, which has been in England, has been purchased for the University of Chicago by Martin A. Ryerson of this city.

In the middle of the sixteenth century Sir Nicholas Bacon, afterwards Lord Keeper of the Great Seal under Queen Elizabeth, acquired a large estate surrounding the hunting lodge of the Abbot of Bury St. Edmunds, which had been in the possession of the monastery since before the Conquest.

He received the deeds, charters, manor rolls and other documents connected with the property. His eldest son, Nicholas, who was a half-brother of Lord Francis Bacon, acquired by marriage additional landed property and the documents relating to it.

The collection was further increased until the end of the seventeenth century, when the properties passed into the hands of Sir Thomas Holt, father of Lord Chief Justice Holt.

Few of the libraries of England possess a collection of equal extent and continuity, it is said at the university. There are more than 1050 deeds, of which 400 are on vellum. There also are 741 court and rolls of 19 manors in Norfolk and Suffolk, from the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries, and also 143 family letters of the Bacon family.

Among historical personages who either signed or both wrote and signed some of these letters are Sir Edward Coke, the great lawyer; Lord Chief Justice Holt, Francis Russell, Thomas Sackville and Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state to Queen Elizabeth.

There is a letter of the Privy Council dated at Windsor, Sept. 17, 1604, and signed by Lords Lennox, Suffolk, Northumberland, Cranborne, Balmerino, Stanhope and Sir William Knolles. It is addressed to Sir Nicholas Bacon as high sheriff of Suffolk.

Schools Increase Singing Periods.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Steps to double the time devoted to singing lessons in German schools have been taken by the Ministry of Culture on the theory that music, as a part of a general education, has been neglected of late. It is proposed to devote at least four hours weekly to singing lessons in both the elementary and high schools, instead of one or two hours as at present.

WHITE FLOUR BLAMED FOR POOR TEETH OF CHILDREN

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Modern men have jaws that are too small, and white flour is responsible for this deformity, according to Sir Harry Baldwin who recently addressed the Medical Officers of Schools Associations on the necessity for the more general use of whole-wheat bread among growing children.

The speaker declared that the small jaw was widespread, and of comparatively recent origin. The removal of vitamines from flour, he continued, in order to produce white bread was a vicious practice which must be abolished. Otherwise children, especially the children of poor families which cannot afford a great variety of food, will continue to be underfed.

Dr. G. Friend, medical officer at Christ's Hospital, Horsham, said that in experiments in feeding boys on white bread and stone-milled or whole-wheat bread, he had demonstrated that the use of whole-wheat bread reduced the decay of teeth by 50 per cent.

A baker, M. Carter, addressed the meeting and assured the doctors that bakers "would be very happy to make whole-wheat bread,

Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolene, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuciane, Vilane, Etc.

Dr. Lewis Baker

Science recognizes truly the extreme embarrassment, the constant annoyance and the real danger of becoming too fleshy. It appears to be an established fact that [illegible] is often due to partial failure of the thyroid gland to secrete and discharge through the blood an iodine gland substance which nature intended as a solvent of the fat assertion from the food consumed. Science, through myriads of experiments, discovered that the simple administration of the desiccated thyroid gland substance, supplies to a degree, nature's need for the control of body accumulation.

For many years I have recommended Arbolene tablets as a reliable, non-secret home remedy, as it contains one grain of thyroid gland, with other approved ingredients, that have a tendency to aid in reducing the superfluous fatty tissues and to regulate the perverted craving for wrong foods. Taken as per direction, I have never known them to be harmful; on the contrary, many have gratefully written the facts of their success. Leading pharmacies dispense Arbolene tablets.

H. P. B. asks: "Have tried many cures to help me of kidney and bladder trouble. Have to arise many times each night, losing rest thereby, and on arising I feel stiff and sore with dreadful backache and puffs under my eyes. Have been told there is no organic trouble, so what can I do?"

Answer: A tonic-diuretic, neutralizer and solvent in the form of Balmwort tablets may be taken for the relief you desire.

P. A. R. asks: "I have been in a weak, run-down, nervous condition since undergoing operations which confined me in bed for many weeks. Appetite fickle, weight thin, and circulation not good. What can I use to improve health?"

Answer: I suggest Cadomene tablets for the benefit they afford to the aneamic blood and weakened nervous system.

Mrs. L. B. asks: "I want to reduce my weight and wish to know if the Arbolene tablets you so often recommend are harmful to those who take them."

Answer: In my opinion, backed up by observation and correspondent's statements and the sale of hundreds of thousands of this tablet, they are not harmful when used as directed, but on the contrary they seem to give almost universal satisfaction.

M. C. D. writes: "My blood and skin are in poor condition, because of a constant tendency to be constipated. Also suffer with sour stomach and have headache, besides pimples, itching and occasionally a bad attack of biles."

Answer: I suggest Sulpherb tablets which tend to correct constipation while promoting sulphur, cream of tartar, sarsaparilla as helpful in minor blood and skin disorders manifested by acne, itching, etc.

Mrs. M. A. writes: "I have found the 5-grain Su-thol tablets the most satisfactory in relieving pain, and so I am confidently writing for your advice as to an equally good medicine to use for my children's coughs and colds."

Answer: Obtain [illegible] Laxene. Use it—concentrated or with sugar syrup or honey. Children like it best diluted. Either way the taste is pleasant and the effect unusually quick. Colds, just beginning, may often be checked if used promptly.

Mrs. J. R. asks: "I suffer greatly with neuritis. Is there anything to help relieve the dreadful pain?"

Answer: Neuritis is a condition which your physician should attend to. The analgesic power of triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve may give relief if lightly applied without rubbing. Five-grain Su-thol Tablets are often effective in relieving the pain when of a rheumatic character, or in simple neuralgia.

Answer to Mrs. C.: To improve the quality of your blood, build strength and avoid catching cold so frequently, try using Cadomene tablets for several weeks as a tonic.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

NEW YORK CITY: N. Mc. St. Clair, E. N. 34 W. 126th St., writes: "I have benefited after using for about three months when all other prescriptions did me no good at all. Arbolene certainly has done for me and another member of my family what nothing else could do though I had tried for years, etc."

CLEVELAND, OHIO: Mrs. Geo. Harris, 1022 St. Clair St., writes: "I have followed directions and lost 10 pounds in two weeks thanks to Arbolene tablets, etc."

MONONGAHELA, PA.: Mrs. Tom Wood, Church St., writes: "I have been troubled by a bad condition of the blood for some time. My face would be unsightly, marred by blotches and pimples (acne). I suffered also with severe bilious headaches. On reading your advice in our Pittsburgh papers, I purchased three boxes of three-grain Sulpherb tablets and today I can readily recommend them. They are worth twice the price asked for them. It is my wish that the whole world know of this wonderful remedy, etc."

VALLEY FALLS, RHODE ISLAND: Mary Cummings, 50 High St., writes: "Your Su-thol tablets for relief of pain, and Cadomene tablets as a tonic are wonderful. I never had anything no matter what price I paid for it, that worked so sure, so mild and wonderful. I am glad to write you about them and will always keep a supply in my home, etc."

CLEVELAND, OHIO: Mrs. H. Kohl, 2637 E. 130th St., writes: "I read your health helps in the paper. I had suffered with nasal and throat catarrh. After using two tubes of Mentho-Laxene Salve and two boxes of Vilane Powder, I am almost entirely well. They are both wonderful remedies, etc."

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO: Marie Ellis, 625 Fairmont Av., writes: "Our family has used Casca Royal Pills for many years and that's always found them to be an ideal physic. Have experimented with other pills at times but always go back to Casca Royal. Sincerely, etc."

HANOVER, KANSAS: Mrs. Mina Jaedicke writes: "Last winter I used essence Mentho-Laxene with excellent results. I had a stubborn cough from which I could not get relief until I used it. The cough yielded almost instantly, and I was well pleased. With my best wishes, etc."

EAST LYNN, MASS.: Mrs. F. G. Billings, 26 Williams Av., writes: "In the past two years I had two operations. They both left me with a weakened and nervous condition. I saw your advice about Cadomene tablets. Have taken 3 boxes and weakness has left me and my nerves are improving every day. I cannot speak too highly of them, etc."

MUSCATINE, IOWA: Harold Kopf, 106 E. Second St., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys and bladder so bad I could only work a few hours a day. At night was up and down 3 to 4 times and in the morning could hardly bend over to dress myself. I took one box of Balmwort tablets and never have been troubled since. Also have recommended to others and they have found relief, etc."

LYONS, N. Y.: L. H. Gutschow, 38 Spencer St., writes: "Some two months ago I had a very stubborn case of dandruff. I purchased two jars of plain yellow Minyol, used them both. It is without doubt the finest scalp treatment on the market today, because it not only stops the dandruff but stimulates new hair growth and restores life and luster to the hair. I heartily recommend it to the public, etc."

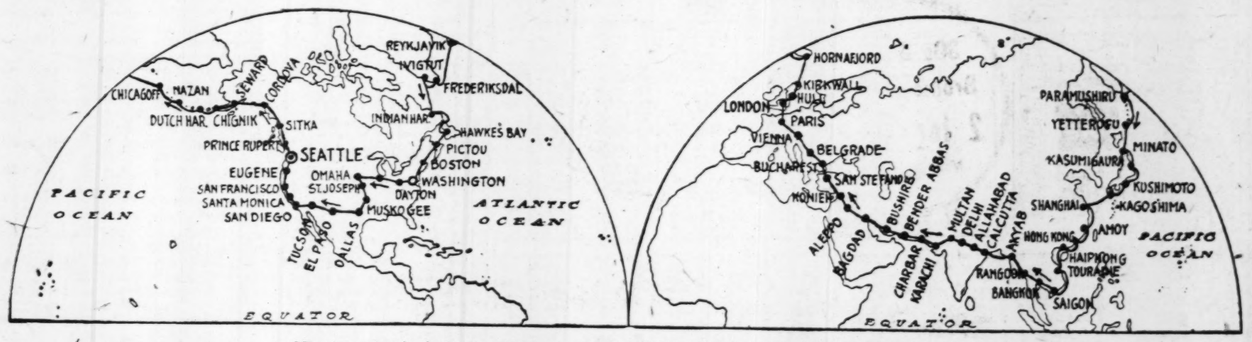
ADVENTURES OF THE AMERICAN ROUND-THE-WORLD FLYERS

LIEUT. SMITH STARTS THE STORY AS HE DID THE FLIGHT; UP FROM SAN DIEGO, THROUGH TEHACHAPI PASS IN THE FOG

Man Who Later Was to Take Command Was Given Place of Honor at the Take-off Because He Had Blown the Length of California So Many Times—Preparations for Cruise—Men Who Did the Preliminary Work—Originator of the Scheme.



Northern half of the world shown in two hemispheres, giving route airmen took.

By LOWELL THOMAS

(Copyright, 1924, by the Chicago Tribune and McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

FIRST who originated the idea of American airmen setting forth on the hazardous adventure of flying around the world, has not been disclosed. But Gen. Patrick, chief of the air service; Gen. William Mitchell, his chief of staff, and Lieuts. Erik Nelson and R. J. Brown were among the first to become enthusiastic about it and to translate their enthusiasm into action.

It had long been the ambition of aviators of all lands to be the first to circumnavigate the world by air. This had been especially so ever since the world war because of the great advances made in aviation during that period. As a matter of fact, British, French, Italian and Portuguese airmen had already either crashed in trying to fly around the world, or were actually engaged in the attempt at the moment when America announced her intention of entering the race.

While there was a vast difference between the way America and all others set about it. To insure success the Americans believed that there were three essential factors to be taken into consideration: First, not only to have an aerial machine capable of making the flight, but to have a fleet of them, so that at least one would sand a reasonable chance of completing the circuit of the globe. Second, to have supply bases wherever there might be the greatest chance of their being needed, and also to get the co-operation of all branches of the service, including the army, diplomatic corps, bureau of fisheries, revenue cutter and coast guard services, and with the help of American private concerns engaged in business in foreign lands, thus eliminating just as many elements of risk as possible from an undertaking that was sure to be fraught with constant danger no matter how many precautions might be taken. For instance, the complete destruction of one of the flying planes in Oregon, Maj. Martin's crash into a mountain in the Fiji Islands, and the sinking of the cruiser's cruiser, "Boston," in the Mid-Atlantic, only give us a hint of the hazards of the entire journey.

LIEUT. SMITH.

Third, and of equal importance, was the task of picking the ablest men in the country, men who combined the three essential qualities of skill, grit and stamina.

Clear the Way for Flyers.

A group of officers at headquarters in Washington quietly set about gathering together all of the information that might be of any use, data regarding landing fields throughout the whole world, full information as to climatic conditions from the Arctic circle to the equator and from Greenland to Japan, as well as every other odd piece of information that might be of the slightest value in attempting the most ambitious aviation adventure.

Among other things, the air service had to get the consent of the foreign Governments over which the American air cruisers hoped to be flying their way. Nor was this consent to be gotten with a mere wave of the hand. For instance, the Bolshevists said "Nothing doing" so far as landing in their territory was concerned. And it took months to convince the Japanese that it would be safe to allow certain military aviators to fly over their land. There seemed to be some quarters a notion that the whole affair might be a Yankee way of finding out just how good a hand of Nippon could best be played by air.

The original World Flight Committee in Washington was made up of Capts. Lorenzo Snow and W. D. Smith, and Lieuts. R. J. Brown, Clair Streett, Erik Nelson and Clarence S. Crumrine. Brown was chairman, and all agree who have had anything to do with the world flight that no one is more entitled to credit for the success of the great adventure than he.

A careful study of world-wide climatic conditions convinced Brown and Streett that the sanest way would be for the American airmen to fly around the world in exactly the opposite direction to that which had been taken by the aviators of all other countries. That is, to fly west instead of east, in order to be able to tackle the Atlantic hop via Iceland, Greenland, and Labrador during the summer.

Then the next problem was to find a suitable plane—a ship really capable of doing far more than anything that might be required of it.

Out in Santa Monica, in California, there was a persistent young Scotsman named Donald Douglas, who had designed a special torpedo seaplane for the navy several years before, a plane that had proved successful both for land and sea flying. It had so impressed Lieut. Erik Nelson that he urged Douglas to submit a design for the world flight. In fact, Nelson went out to Santa Monica himself and actually helped Douglas to develop his cruiser, a ship that could be used either with pontoons at sea, or with wheels for flying over land. Douglas provided the theory and Nelson the practical ideas. The two fought long and often. It was the old, old fight between the man who designs things on paper and the stubborn, practical engineer who knows what he knows solely from experience.

After the model was finished Nelson demonstrated his own confidence in it by hopping into the cockpit and "giving her the gun." She mounted into the sky with the ease and grace of the bird she was supposed to imitate—the American eagle. Nelson took this first experimental ship and risked his own neck by flying her across America from Pacific to Atlantic.

In Dayton the General looked the great Douglas biplane over and finally he said, in his slow decisive way:

"Well, Erik, if you are satisfied that she is all right, I guess she will do."

Picking the Right Airmen.

Up to this time Nelson had no idea that he was going to be selected to take part in the flight. In fact, he was quite sure that he would not be, because he had already taken part in more than his share of the other great flights and it was the policy of the air service to divide up the honor of taking part in major flights between as many of the hundred or more ablest pilots in the service as possible. Nevertheless, Erik was the first man chosen.

Five Lieutenants were selected, three to pilot world cruisers, the other two to stand by as alternates, ready to step in if for any reason one of the first three happened to fall ill before the expedition left American soil. In addition to these five, it was thought advisable to select some distinguished officer of higher rank to take command and to pilot the flagship. The men chosen, as all the world knows, were Maj. Frederick L. Martin, flight commander, and Lieuts. Lowell Smith, Leigh Wade and Erik Nelson as the pilots of the other three cruisers. Lieuts. Leslie Arnold and Le Claire Schultze were to be the alternates. Each pilot was to have the privilege of choosing his own mechanician.

Maj. Martin and his five fellow pilots were officially notified shortly before Christmas, 1923. At Langley Field, Newport News, Va., they were put through a six weeks' intensive course in the subjects that Gen. Patrick and his associates thought would be most useful to men setting out on an undertaking of this kind, subjects such as the study of wind velocity, storms, world-wide climatic problems, aerial navigation, and what medical and surgical knowledge might be valuable in case anything happened when the flyers were out of reach of a doctor.

Trained by Specialists.

The leading meterological expert of the American Army, Maj. Blair, gave them a special course of lectures on the subject to which he had devoted his entire life. He showed them how they could tell by the direction and velocity of the wind and the nature of cloud formations just what weather could be expected on the morrow, and whether or not they might expect to encounter cyclones, thunderstorms, fog, or any other troublesome climatic obstacles.

Bradley Jones, one of the world's foremost authorities on aerial navigation, boiled down the gist of a lifetime of experimentation and also gave them a special course in marine law. Maj. Neblett of the Air Service medical staff lectured to the flyers regarding the qualities and uses of the various drugs which he had placed in their first aid kits, and advised the aviators as to the kinds of food they should avoid in the tropics, how to make a splint in case of a fracture, how to resuscitate a drowning man, and a host of other things.

Maj. Martin chose Sergeant Alva Harvey as his companion, Lowell Smith picked out Sergeant Turner, Leigh Wade decided on Henry Ogden, and Erik Nelson selected "Smiling Jack" Harding, who had worked under him for years.

The last week in February both pilots and mechanics were ordered to the Douglas plant in Santa Monica to watch the building of the planes, so that each man would be thoroughly familiar with every detail of construction.

Clover Field, Santa Monica, 15 miles from Los Angeles, had been selected as the official starting point for the flight. Seven a. m., March 17, 1924, was settled upon as the zero hour when the four American world cruisers were to hop off on the first leg of the flight that was to add one of the most thrilling and inspiring pages to the history of man's conquest over Nature.

Lieut. Smith's Story of Hop.

Lieut. Lowell Smith, who finally became the leader of the round the world flight, had flown up and down the Pacific Coast many times before. In fact, he had made 30 or 40 trips from Southern California to Puget Sound during recent years, and not a single one of them by train. So "Silent" Smith is the man who can best tell the story of the first leg of the round the world journey.

"Although we had planned to hop off around dawn in the morning of the 17th of March, we were held up by the weather, and it was 9:30 before we finally got away. Many people had been there since before daylight waiting in the cold to see us off.

"Col. H. H. Arnold, air officer of the Ninth Corps Area, and Maj. Martin sent Capt. Herold from Crissy Field out over the mountains in a De Haviland to see if we could get through. He came back and reported that it was impossible. Then Col. Arnold suggested that Maj. Martin ask my advice, because I had flown up and down the coast for many years. I told him that I could get them through. So the Major said all right, and instructed me to take the lead as soon as we got in the air.

"Nelson's plane had just been completed the day before and he had flown it down to San Diego to get the compass adjusted and have a new motor installed. So only three of us started for Seattle together. Erik was to come along as soon as possible and join us in Seattle.

Planes Crowd Narrow Pass.

"Six escort planes, carrying photographers and newspaper men, took off from Clover Field with us. As a result of having flown up and down this coast so often in all sorts of weather, I knew every pass and could sort of feel my way through without endangering any of the others. Getting through any mountains when there is a heavy fog hanging over them is a rather ticklish job. And on this occasion in some places the fog was so dense and so low that it forced us right down between the narrow walls of the canyons.

"The worst stretch was through the Tehachapi pass, a little over half way from Santa Monica to Bakersfield. The only real danger here was the possibility of having a forced landing in that gorge, or of some plane attempting to turn back. There were so many of us going through Tehachapi pass together that it would have been almost impossible for a plane to have turned around between the two walls without colliding with one of the others.

"Coming out of the northern end of the pass, we left the fog behind and plunged into the bright sunshine of the San Joaquin Valley. A moment later and we were looking down on the thousands of black oil derricks that surround Bakersfield. Farther off to our right, disappearing behind us to the southeast, were the yellow sands of the inhospitable Mojave Desert, where I had worked many years before.

"The rest of the flight, over the richly cultivated lands of the San Joaquin Valley to Sacramento, was made in gorgeous weather, and uneventful, except that Maj. Martin had a forced landing which delayed him for 30 minutes.

Superstitions of Aviators.

"An enthusiastic crowd gave us a noisy welcome when we landed at Mather Field, outside Sacramento. Sacramento was where I had once made my headquarters and all of my old friends were out to welcome us. And that night the present-day descendants of the old forty-niners who discovered gold in California gave a banquet for us and presented us with good luck charms to protect us from evil spirits on our flight. Some of us were given horseshoes and the others rabbits' feet.

"As a matter of fact, the members of the flight proved to be rather sharply divided regarding superstitions. Leigh Wade, for instance, knocks on wood half a dozen times a day, gets into a cold sweat if anyone lights three cigarettes off the same match, and had a row with Hank Ogden on one occasion when the latter walked under a ladder on a ship in the North Atlantic. Erik, on the other hand, scoffs at all superstitions but one, the one that seems to be universal among airmen, the superstition that a tragedy is almost sure to occur if you carry flowers in your plane.

"The next morning we flew over the orchards and placer gold fields of Central California, and headed up the Sacramento River towards Eugene. Evidently the rabbits' feet and horseshoes that had been presented to Ogden and Wade were something of a jinx, because they were forced down near the little town of Cottonwood in Northern California at the head waters of the Sacramento River, just west of Mount Lassen. The trouble was due to loss of water resulting from a broken connection. The escort planes landed beside them, so Martin kept straight on toward Oregon.

"In landing, Wade tore off his tail skid, but with the help of the boys in the escort planes, he and Ogden got fixed up in a hurry, filled the radiator with water and took off again. They arrived in Eugene only 40 minutes behind us.

Oregon Bids Them God-Speed.

"The landing at Eugene was like coming home for me, because I had made my headquarters there for several years while in command of the squadron that patrolled the forests of Oregon and Washington on the lookout for fires. It seemed as though everybody in town had turned out to meet us and we had another big banquet that night with a lot more speeches. Because Salem, the capital, had no landing field the Governor had come to Eugene to wish us God-speed on behalf of the people of Oregon.

"The next morning we got away from Eugene and pushed on to Portland, landing just across the river at Vancouver, Wash., where all planes are obliged to descend simply because the metropolis of Oregon has been too backward in aviation to establish a landing field of its own. At 50 miles an hour we motored into Portland for another official luncheon, which was made memorable by the presentation of bathing suits. The people of Portland recommended that we should wear these instead of underclothing, so we would be ready for any emergency. We didn't do that, but we did carry them all the way around the world, and we put them to very good use, as you will see later on.

"Rushing back to Vancouver by motor car and losing another hour because of the necessity of going so far, we jumped into our cruisers and took off for Seattle. For an hour we flew above the Columbia and its tributaries, looking down on great log jams, lumber mills, and the forests that I had patroled so often in the days when we scanned the country for forest fires.

"About 100 miles from Portland we ran head on into a heavy rain and then encountered a dense fog, which forced us down into a canyon. Finally we were almost among the treetops, groping about like owls, so we turned around, flew back, and spent the night in Portland.

AUTHENTIC STORY OF FLYERS APPEARS IN POST-DISPATCH

THE account of the greatest American achievement in aerial navigation, the flight around the world, is appearing in the Daily and Sunday Post-Dispatch.

It was told by the flyers to Lowell Thomas, who has been with them constantly since their return to America.

In the territory served by the Post-Dispatch it will appear in no other paper.

SWEDEN-FINLAND AIRPLANES CARRY FREIGHT REGULARLY

Half-a-Ton of Medical Supplies Among Recent Shipments, Extension Planned.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 10.—A regular commercial express and freight service by air to neighboring countries is the latest development in the use of airplanes here. The freight service has actually started over the line between Stockholm and Helsingfors, Finland, and thus augments the air traffic between those two countries, which has hitherto been limited to passengers and mails. The distance to Helsingfors is about 240 miles across the Baltic Sea, a good day's run for a small steamer. The peculiar utility of air shipping was demonstrated by the fact that the first cargo carried half a ton of medical supplies which were delivered in Helsingfors three hours after being taken on board here.

It has been announced that next spring express and freight shipments will be carried to Copenhagen and Hamburg direct, with air connections for Berlin, Paris and London.

Restoration of Navigation on Inland Streams Reviewed by Secretary Weeks

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The annual report of Secretary of War Weeks, made public today, discusses the question of inland waterways as follows:

"The Inland Waterways Corporation was created as a result of the operation and experience of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service, a service operated by the Secretary of War from March 1, 1920, until the passage of the act of June 3, 1924.

"The conclusions reached by the War Department after three years of experience with this service were:

"1. The utilization of our great streams of common carriers is the only fair means of distributing the benefits of cheap water transportation to the very people who have been taxed to create navigable streams and canals.

"2. The rehabilitation of common carriers upon our navigable interior waterways can only be accomplished by governmental pioneering.

"3. There were various handicaps to the restoration of water transportation in full vigor, by governmental operation, that delayed, restricted, and hampered the accomplishment of the object sought, and such handicaps were avoidable.

"Based upon these conclusions, several bills were introduced into Congress and referred to the War Department, which caused Congress to be fully informed upon the following points:

"(a) The inherent difficulties of governmental operation.

"(b) The necessity of governmental operation as a pioneer demonstrator.

"(c) The necessity of Congress providing some means which will allow the Secretary of War its mandatory to do the things he would ordinarily do as the head of a great private transportation agency.

"(d) The necessity of providing the Secretary of War with sufficient capital to overcome the conditions which militate against the success of the governmental demonstration.

"The most serious and earnest consideration of these problems was given by Congress and resulted in the enactment of public law 185, creating an Inland Waterways Corporation with a capital of $5,000,000 for the purpose of carrying on the operations of the Government-owned inland canal and coastwise waterways system to the point where the system can be transferred to private operation to the best advantage of the Government. The operating policy as announced by Congress is as follows:

"'It is hereby declared ot be the policy of Congress to promote, encourage and develop water transportation and to foster and maintain in full vigor both rail and water transportation.'

"The new corporation is now functioning, and the moot questions it is gradually deciding are these:

"1. Is it possible for joint rail and water carriers co-operating to furnish cheaper transportation than all rail with a division of earnings affording each a living revenue?

"2. Does the inauguration of water transportation on rivers and canals offer sufficient inducement for private enterprise to undertake it?"

HOUSE FACES FIGHT OVER HOWELL-BARKLEY BILL

Measure to Abolish Railroad Labor Board Was Bone of Contention Last Session.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Disposal of the much debated Howell-Barkley bill is one of the first tasks that will confront the House when it convenes Monday.

This measure, which would abolish the Railroad Labor Board and set up a series of regional adjustment boards, was one of the most controversial pieces of legislation taken up by the House last session, and it is indicated that the fight will be continued with renewed vigor this winter.

When Representative Barkley of Kentucky, ranking Democrat on the House Commerce Committee, introduced the bill it was referred to that committee. Later its friends charged that an attempt was being made to kill it in committee, and circulated a petition to bring it before the House by discharge of the committee, which was done.

HERE ARE THE WINNERS IN THIRD "TANGLED COMIC" COMPETITION

List of Successful Solvers in the Fourth of Series Will Be Printed Next Sunday

THE army of "Tangled Comic" solvers had something to test their wits when they tackled No. 3 of the series now appearing in the comic section of the Sunday Post-Dispatch. As a matter of fact, there were only 36 answers which were absolutely and strictly correct in every detail.

After prizes had been awarded, in order of merit, from among the three dozen perfect solutions, it became necessary to choose the 295 prize winners from the array of solutions with fewest errors, taking into account also the neatness and cleverness of assembling the tangled characters and balloon lines.

There were five clearly misspelled words in "Tangled Comic" No. 3, as follows:

"Wonderfull for wonderful; "destinguished" for distinguished; "cheif" for chief; Wendesday" for Wednesday, and "substatuting" substituting.

In answer to many inquiries, the announcement is now made that prize winning solutions cannot be exhibited until the end of the contest, when all first prize winners will be put on view—including those awarded grand prizes. The winner of any weekly prize already awarded is potentially a candidate for a grand prize, and if such solutions were shown now it would be, in the opinion of the judges, giving aid to later contestants because of displaying to them a standard of excellence to be surpassed if one of the grand prizes is to be won.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

GRANDMOTHER kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

As Well Try to Rationalize Nec
enness or the Use of Hasheesh—
of Miss Lowell's Verse L

By HENRY L. MENCKEN, Co-Editor With George Jean Nathan of the American Mercury and Noted Literary Critic.

I.

THE new poetry movement in America, so full of life, and even of malicious animal magnetism, six or eight years ago, is now obviously down with cholelithiasis, and no literary pathologist of genuine gifts would be surprised to hear at any moment of its death. Most of its former ornaments, indeed, begin to flee its bedside. Miss Lowell, one hears, is laboring day and night upon a work in prose—worse, a work of criticism—post eat poetry! Vachel Lindsay and Robert Frost take to college professing. Carl Sandburg has joined the minstrels. All the Greenwich village poets, harassed by the morals squad, fled along ago to Paris, where landlords are less prying and even artists may lead their own lives.

The slackening of effort is visible in all the little poetry magazines. Most of them continue to come out, and in the backwaters of the republic, where all varieties of human progress are behind schedule, there are even occasional appearances of new ones, but there is little in any of them that is worth reading and almost no actual poetry. What they print, in the main, is simply a series of exercises in the new prosody. It turns out, on examination, to be quite as tight and arbitrary as the old kind. For one thing that a poet of 1885 could not do there are ten things that a poet of 1924 cannot do. Thus the revolt against form expires in a new and worse formalism.

The fact is most visible, of course, on the edges of the movement—that is, among the tonty poets of Greenwich village. With one observes in the Little Review and other such advanced sheets is simply a sort of organized imbecility. The poet is strictly forbidden to make use of any of the traditional materials of his craft, or to concede anything to its traditional idioms. He must eschew rhyme, he must eschew all regular rhythms, and he must eschew all direct attack upon the emotions. In other words, he must eschew poetry. What he writes, it must be confessed, is sometimes very interesting in its bizarre, unearthly way—just as a college yell, say, is interesting for an act of congress. But it is no more poetry than the college yell is music or the act of Congress wisdom.

II.

THE trouble with most of the new poets, whether in or out of Greenwich village, is that they are too cerebral—that they attack the problems of art with the methods of science. That error runs through all their public discussions of the business. Those discussions are full of theorism, by the new psychology out of the cant of the studios, that do not work and are not true. The old time poet did not bother with theories. When the urge to write was upon him, he simply got himself into a lather of emotion and then tried to reduce his feelings to paper. If he had any skill, the result was poetry; if he lacked skill, it was nonsense. But even his worst failure still had something natural and excusable about it—it was the failure of a man admittedly somewhat feverish, with purple paint on his nose and vine leaves in his hair. The failure of the new poet is the far more grotesque failure of a scientist who turns out to be a quack—of a mathematician who divide 20 by 4 and gets 6, of a chiropractor who looks in the vertebrae for the cause of cross eyes, of a cook who tries to make an omelette of china door knobs.

Poetry can never be concocted by a purely intellectual process. It has nothing to do with the intellect; it is, in fact, a violent and irreconcilable enemy to the intellect. Its purpose is not to establish facts but to evade and deny them. What it essays to do, in brief, is to make life more bearable in an intolerable world by concealing and obliterating all the

The old time poet did not bother with theories. When the urge to write was upon him, he simply got himself into a lather of emotion and then tried to reduce his feelings to paper. Poetry can never be concocted by a purely intellectual process. It has nothing to do with the intellect; it is, in fact, a violent and irreconcilable enemy to the intellect. Its purpose is not to establish facts but to evade and deny them. What it essays to do, in brief, is to make life more bearable in an intolerable world by concealing and obliterating all the harsher realities. Its message is that all will be well next Tuesday a week, that the grave is not cold and damp but steam heated and lined with roses, that serving in the trenches is far more amusing and comfortable than serving in the United States Senate, that the girl is not a viviparous mammal, full of pathogenic organisms and elightened self-interest but an angel with bobbed wings and a heart of gold.

Take this denial of the bald and dreadful facts out of poetry—make it scientific and sensible—and it simply ceases to be what it pretends to be. It may remain good prose; it may even remain beautiful prose. But it cannot stir the blood as true poetry does; it cannot offer that soothing consolation, that escape from reality, that sovereign balm for every spiritual itch and twinge which is the great gift of poetry to man. The best poetry is always palpably untrue; it is its eloquent untruth that makes it so lovely. The other day I read of a gentleman, condemned to death in one of the Southern States, who went to the electric chair reciting the twenty-third Psalm. It is a pity he had to die; he would have made an excellent critic, for he understood perfectly the nature and purpose of poetry.

III.

THE new poets, now passing into the shadows, not only made the mistake of trying to rationalize poetry, an enterprise comparable to trying to rationalize necking, drunkenness, or the use of hasheesh; they also tried to detach themselves from the ordinary flow of American ideas and to convert themselves into an intellectual aristocracy. Some of them, true enough, found the thing impossible, notably Sandburg and Lindsay, but nearly all made the attempt. Miss Lowell, perhaps, went furthest; there was a time when even Boston felt bucolic and loutish in her presence. The result was that nine-tenths of the compositions the fraternity produced simply shot into space. The great heart of the folk reacted to them as feebly as it might have reacted to a quarrel between astronomers.

When poetry fails in this way, it fails all over. I do not argue here that it ought to reach and soothe the nether herd, though some of the best poetry ever written actually does—for example, the poetry in the Bible. All I contend is it ought to reach the generality of the literate. If literary pastors are not moved by it, if it fails to supply phrases for editorial writers, if it is not quoted by stewed Congressmen at the endless memorial services on Capitol Hill, then it has obviously missed fire. Of all the stuff produced by the new poets, precious little has ever gone that far. I can recall a few poems by Sandburg and Lindsay, perhaps one or two by Frost, and none other. The whole body of verse of Miss Lowell is as dead as if it had been written in Choctaw. Meanwhile, certain old-fashioned poets, notably Miss Reese and Miss Teasdale, have written things that will probably live. They will live because they are alive.

I sometimes think, indeed, that the real poetry of our era has been written, not by poets at all but by men who would be as indignant if you called them poets as if you called them kidnapers, violoncellists, or Socialists. I allude to the earnest rhetoricians who roam the chautauquas and the Kiwanis clubs, waving the banner of idealism. What these fellews say is almost always nonsense, but it is at least the sort of nonsense that the American people yearn to cherish and believe in—it somehow fills their need. I point, for example, to their gabble about service—already the source of phrases that congressmen, clergymen, editorial writers, and so on mouth every day. Here is the essential poetry of the Americano: his life is sordid, but he tries to escape from the fact by thinking

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly, and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

INSTITUTE ON SOCIAL HYGIENE OPENS TODAY

Child Psychology in Relation to Sex Education Among Topics of Discussion.

The Missouri Social Hygiene Association is conducting in St. Louis this week a social hygiene institute planned to give parents, teachers and social workers a working knowledge of child psychology particularly in its relation to sex education.

The institute will open at 8 o'clock tonight with a meeting at the Church of the Unity, 5015 Waterman avenue. Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. a dinner will be given at Gatesworth Hotel when Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, New York City, will speak. Thursday noon, at a luncheon at the Claridge Hotel, Miss Harriet Vittum of Northwestern University Settlement, Chicago, will speak on "Recreation."

A special course for parents will be given at 10 a. m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday at the Association's headquarters, 2221 Locust street, with Dr. M. J. Exner, director of the department of educational measures of the American Social Hygiene Association, in charge. Special courses for social workers, teachers and church workers will be held at other hours.

LAYS 809 BRICKS IN AN HOUR

Foreman Bricklayer Exceeds Average Workman's Total for Entire Day.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The latest world record claimed here is the laying of 809 bricks in an hour, or more than 13 a minute. The feat was performed by Christopher Hull, a foreman bricklayer of Sheffield, for a wager of £10. Hull was allowed four laborers to wait upon him, but nevertheless the performance was regarded as a remarkable display of strength and skill. His achievement meets with no admiration among the trade unionists, however, and one of the union officials is quoted as saying: "The man's crazy and ought to be made to eat his bricks. A fair average is 40 an hour." The builders on the other hand say many men could lay 800 daily if they chose but that the average is around 500. They have long complained of deliberate slowness since the war, which they claim is largely responsible for the housing shortage.

TO ADDRESS JEWISH WOMEN

Rabbi James G. Heller will address an open meeting of the St. Louis section of the Council of Jewish Women at the Temple Israel, of 3:30 p. m. Monday, Dec. 8. A business meeting will be held at 2 p. m.

Rabbi Heller, a chaplain with the American forces in France during the war and vice president of the Cincinnati Peace League, will discuss Gandhi, whom he considers to be "the greatest man in the world today."

POETRY TODAY IS STRING-HALTERED, SAYS H. L. MENCKEN

of it as altruistic. It is a comprehensible desire and even worthy. The poets of his country have not helped him to attain it. He has had to turn to traveling go-getters and forward-lookers.

IV.

WHENEVER one discusses the nature and function of poetry realistically, one is sure to be accused of being an enemy to the art itself. But this does not necessarily follow. The social value of poetry is not diminished in the slightest by looking at it without illusion. It still offers its old escape from reality; it still offers consolation to homo sapiens in his woeful journey through this inclement vale. To denounce it out of hand would be as absurd as to denounce religion or anesthetics. The purpose of anesthetics is to get rid of the harsh torture of pain and substitute the sweet peace of sleep. The purpose of even the highest poetry is almost precisely the same. Chloroform tells a man that he is not having his leg cut off, but lying drunk on a feather bed, with fireworks to entertain him. Poetry tells him that his girl is as beautiful as Venus and is marrying him without a single thought of his tenements and hereditaments, that his country is a Galahad among the nations and wholly devoid of the rascality prevailing everywhere else, that he himself is a noble fellow and will go to heaven when he dies. All these things, I suspect, are false. But all of them make life more bearable. Poets are simply men who devote themselves to that benign enterprise, often at great sacrifice of income. They are liars, but their lies, I believe, will be viewed very generously on the resurrection morn.

What a WONDERFUL HEAD this DOLLY has!

Eyes that roll gaily, wink mischievously and "close" in "sleep," washable face, natural hair that may be combed, brushed and kept beautiful. A pretty head is Dolly Olive's, with features that doll craftsmen have made natural and lifelike.

You may have Dolly Olive and her Dainty Bed Free of all cost.

This Walking, Talking, Rolling-Eye Beauty—"The Doll Supreme"—and Her Dainty Bed are Offered

FREE

To Girls Who Get

2 New Subscriptions to the Daily Post-Dispatch

Dolly Olive is attractively dressed. Her dainty costume is made of fine quality, sheer organdie, with bonnet to match. Both bonnet and dress are tastefully trimmed with ribbon and lace. The undergarments are of dimity, and neatly sewed. She has mercerized stockings and real patent leather slippers. She closes both her eyes when put to sleep, and wakes up calling MAMA, as a real baby does. She can be made to wink and blink and roll her eyes from side to side, in the gayest, coyest, most delightful baby manner. Her natural, laughing blue eyes are inserted in drilled sockets by a patented process and cannot get out of order. They are a marvel of doll craftsmanship that puts Dolly Olive in a class by herself.

Dolly Olive is of just the right height and proportions to fit snugly into the 20-inch Bed that the Post-Dispatch offers with her in the FREE combination offer of a Doll and Doll Bed for only two new six-months' subscriptions to the Daily Post-Dispatch.

Important: This new Dolly Olive and Her Dainty Bed offer is entirely apart from the Janesville Wagon-Sherwood Racer offer for four subscriptions. While both offers are exceptional in terms of generous value, they must not be confused in the minds of our boy and girl friends, and we cannot consent to transfer of credits based upon subscription orders from one plan to the other.

Subscriptions received here under the terms of the Janesville Wagon-Sherwood Racer offer will not be credited toward a Dolly Olive-Dainty Bed award, nor vice versa.

Dolly Olive's Bed is unusual, too. It's a real Bed, with real springs and mattress—an exact duplicate, in miniature, of the full-size famous Smith and Davis Beds. 20 inches long, 15 inches high at the head and 12 inches at the foot. Enameled in white, blue or pink, it is at once a dainty and durable Bed worthy in every way of the exceptional Dolly that will grace it.

BONES FOUND IN OLD INN'S SECRET ROOM

Closets in Haunt of Queen Elizabeth Give Up Early English History.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—An old posting inn of the ancient village, Much Wadham, in Hertfordshire, once a favorite resort of Queen Elizabeth, has been declared to be the oldest hostelry in England. It was recently ascertained that the old building, venerated because of its royal associations, had been a landmark for several hundred years when the Tudor Queen visited it. In the time of William the Rufus, the eleventh century, parts of the old inn were then outposts of a neighboring castle and used to house travelers who passed through the district.

When a new proprietor came to the inn a short time ago, in making repairs to the walls, they were found to be covered with canvas which hid a wealth of rich old panelling and carved work.

"Behind a section of papered canvas in the dining room a secret staircase was found which led to an apparently secret room. A collection of bones lay in a dusty heap at the foot of the stairs. In this room, in peeling off the 30 layers of paper and canvas which covered the wall, several old cupboards and small closets were found in which old records and papers were piled. It was in deciphering these that the early history of the place became known.

The papers made frequent references to Queen Elizabeth, sometimes recording her arrival there with a party of friends, sometimes with her court and occasionally with only one or two companions. As Sir Walter Raleigh also is known to have frequented the place, it is supposed that the Queen's companion on some occasions was her sailor favorite.

Opposite the inn is an old palace of the Bishops of London, which was also visited by Queen Elizabeth, and the village is surrounded by a grove of lime trees, some planted by the Queen.

The inn is being restored as nearly as possible to its Elizabethan condition, and many of the rooms will be used as museums.

ILLINOIS MINERS URGE 'HOME TRADING' POLICY IN STATE

Plan to Get General Use of Illinois-Mined Coal to Check Unemployment.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 29.—Declaring that thousands of Illinois coal miners are still unemployed, officials of the Illinois Mine Workers have issued an appeal to miners and other unionists to join in a state-wide movement for the use of Illinois coal.

The State Executive Board, President Farrington announced, instructed Angus Kerr, the miners' chief counsel, to draw up a bill for introduction in the next General Assembly, providing for exclusive use of Illinois coal in State-owned institutions.

Every trade union in the State, he further announced, has been mailed a copy of a resolution, embodying a statement of the attitude of union labor. The solution alleges that "in some instances, municipally and State owned institutions of Illinois are being furnished with coal mined outside the State of Illinois," and adds that "we believe it is wrong for the taxpayers' money to be sent outside the State of Illinois to purchase any product which can be furnished in abundance in the State, and we believe that the policy of trading at home should be practiced by the people of Illinois, especially within the State, and produced by Illinois labor."

AKRON TO TRY RUBBER BRICKS IN CROSSWALKS AND FOR ITS STOP SIGNS

THE experiment with rubber paving on a bridge in Boston is being followed with trial of rubber bricks for crosswalks and pavement stop signs at Goodyear avenue and East Market street in Akron, O. The bricks are to be of regular size, the top layer being composed of white rubber. Several other cities are reported to be planning tests of various kinds of rubber or rubber composition paving.

AUTO CLUB GOVERNORS OPPOSE PARKING PLAN

Object to Extension of One-Hour District—Discuss Placing of 'Silent Cops.'

Decision to oppose extension of the one-hour parking district in St. Louis until the present law is properly enforced, and to suggest that the Traffic Council cause adequate traffic check to be made before installing silent policemen, was made at a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of Missouri. This meeting was the first of the board in the club's new headquarters on Lindell boulevard.

During the discussion of the stop and go signals it was the concensus of the governors that in certain instances installation of the signals and prohibition of left turns were not justified, and that a more thorough census of traffic conditions should be made before placing any more of the signals. The Traffic Council, it was stated at the meeting, always has contended that such a check was made, but opinion at the meeting was that while the downtown signals were essential and were working well, other signals were not justifying themselves.

There was special criticism of that at Kingshighway and Cote Brilliante avenue, which drivers declare is not readily visible, and at Clara and Page avenues.

35-MILE AN HOUR SPEED LIMIT FOR NATION ADVOCATED

Hoover Committee Also Advises Prohibiting Fixing Limits Lower Than 15 Miles an Hour.

Standard rules governing the conduct of travelers on the highway; uniform speed regulation aimed primarily at reckless driving; and examination and licensing of all motor vehicle operators, with a ban on the mentally or physically unfit as well as on persons under 16 years of age or who cannot read English, are among the recommendations made by the Committee on Traffic Control of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety to Secretary Hoover, which will be presented at sessions of the conference in Washington on Dec. 15, 16 and 17.

"Traffic control and traffic law enforcement have been added to the duties of police forces that in some cases are little if any larger than before the advent of the motor car, and the traffic has outgrown the organization to control it," says the committee.

More Police Not Remedy.

"Uniform, impartial enforcement of reasonable requirements by adequate and properly organized police is a primary necessity in reducing street and highway accidents. The mere addition of numbers of traffic officers untrained in the special problems will not insure the desired results.

"The most abundant provision of streets and highways, the most careful working out of traffic regulations, and the most vigorous enforcement of traffic laws, to be 100-per-cent effective in the reduction of accidents, must be supplemented by a sense of personal responsibility instilled in every motorist and every pedestrian."

Other recommendations include: That speed regulation should be

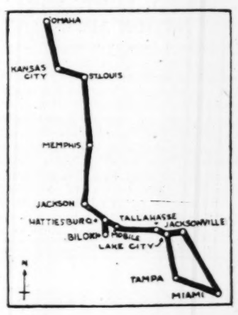
Automobile Route to Gulf Coast

Biloxi, Gulfport and Other Mississippi Cities Attracting Motorists via Memphis, Jackson and Hattiesburg.

AN increasing proportion of the thousands who go from the Middle West to Biloxi, Gulfport, Pass Christian and other resort cities on the Mississippi Gulf Coast are making the trip by motor car. Thousands of persons are coming to spend part or all of the winter on the Gulf Coast as other thousands are in Florida.

The automobile route from St. Louis to Biloxi is the same as the Florida Midwest Highway, which is being promoted by Chambers of Commerce in Mississippi and Southern Alabama cities. From St. Louis, it goes to Memphis, either down the Missouri side of the river through Festus and Cape Girardeau, or via Belleville, Ashley, Cairo and the ferry to Bird's Point.



Traveling down the Illinois route, the motorist has concrete road to Cairo and then good travel to Sikeston and Portageville. Then there is seven miles of dirt in the road to the Arkansas line, whence there is an all-weather road to Blytheville, Ark. South of Blytheville there is seven miles of dirt and there is 15 miles of dirt south of Osceola. The rest of the road between Blytheville and Memphis is gravel, asphalt and concrete.

There is gravel road from Memphis south to Jackson, Miss., where the highway to Biloxi turns off through Florence, Mendenhall, Collins, Hattiesburg, Wiggins, McHenry and Lyman to Gulfport, then along the beach to Biloxi and past Beauvoir, Jefferson Davis' home, to Biloxi.

Biloxi is one of this country's oldest cities. Its site was discovered by the French in 1690, and it became the capital of the Louisiana Province. Its name is Indian, signifying "The First People." It is

HUNDREDS OF MILES OF TOURING TRIPS OPENED TO ST. LOUIS MOTORISTS

Numerous Stretches of New Hard-Surfaced Roads in Central and Southern Illinois Just Opened to Trafifc.

A number of new hard surfaced roads, and consequently many motoring trip combinations, have just been made available to motorists of St. Louis and Southern Illinois by completion of stretches of highway.

Highway No. 2 is now completed and open from Cairo all the way through Vandalia, Pana and Decatur to Clinton. Only a little more work remains to be done between Clinton and Bloomington and then Marion, Jefferson, Franklin and Williamson counties and the territory south of Cairo will have a direct high-speed route to Chicago.

Of principal interest to motorists of St. Louis and the East St. Louis district is the opening to traffic of No. 12 through O'Fallon, Lebanon, Summerfield, Trenton, Breeze, Carlyle and Sandoval as far as Salem. At Sandoval, this highway intersects No. 25 north to Vandalia, Pana and Decatur and south to Ashley and Cairo. No. 12 is now hard surfaced to Salem, except for a 2½-mile detour between Breeze and Carlyle. The detour is good in any weather around a long fill that will be cindered within two weeks and should be in good shape for the winter.

Big Help to Southern Illinois.

No. 25 is reported by the State Highway Department as open now from Effingham north clear through to Chicago. This highway runs from Effingham through Mattoon, Tuscola, Urbana, Paxton and Gilman to Kankakee, whence one can go north on No. 44 to Joliet and thence into Chicago or eastward on No. 17 to Momence and thence on No. 1 to Chicago. Opening of this highway gives another route to Chicago from St. Louis and all Southwestern Illinois. Reports from motorists are that while this road is officially open, yet there is still a short detour north of Effingham because of a bridge.

No. 1, the main highway that skirts the eastern border of Illinois all the way from Chicago to Mt. Carmel and then swings southwestward to Harrisburg and Metropolis at the extreme southern end of the State, with a spur from Harrisburg into Pope and Hardin counties, is reported hard surfaced and open to traffic all the way from Chicago to Carmi, southwest of Mt. Carmel. Until about a year ago No. 1 was part of the main route from St. Louis to Chicago via Marshall, but now the bulk of this traffic goes via Springfield and Bloomington. The stretch of No. 1 just opened runs from Marshall south through Hatton, Hutsonville, Robinson, Lawrenceville, Allendale, Mt. Carmel, Albion, Grayville and Crossville as far as Carmi.

New Touring Possibilities.

Addition of all this hard-surfaced highway in Illinois will of great benefit all winter to Southern Illinois and next spring it will open up hundreds of miles of new Sunday week-end touring possibilities. For instance, there will be a circle trip from St. Louis through Lebanon and Trenton to Sandoval, south to Ashley and come back on No. 13. This trip can be made in reverse order.

Another longer trip, will be from St. Louis through Belleville, then on No. 15 through Ashley and Mt. Vernon and Albion to Mt. Carmel, north on No. 1 to Marshall and back home on No. 11 through Effingham, Vandalia and Collinsville. This, of course, can be made the other way.

Another trip will be No. 11 to Collinsville and Vandalia, then North on No. 2 to Decatur, West on No. 10 to Springfield and back home on No. 4, the main route from Chicago. There are numerous variations that can be made

CONCRETE ROAD FROM ST. LOUIS TO PEVELY NOW OPEN

12-Mile Stretch Toward Festus From Lemay Ferry Road Completed—Bids for 40 Miles More.

Twelve miles of concrete on State Highway No. 9, also known as the Lone Star Trail, has just been thrown open to traffic from the point where it leaves the Lemay Ferry road, about a mile beyond the Meramec River bridge, through Barnhart and Kimmswick to Pevely. The Lemay Ferry road is still a one-way thoroughfare from the bridge to where No. 9 turns south and beyond, but the concrete on this stretch is expected to be completed by Dec. 16.

Beyond Pevely, there is five miles of road to Festus, in which is a mile-long stretch badly torn up for grading. The State highway engineers are covering this with slag from Herculaneum, and say that within 10 days it will be possible to motor through to Festus all winter, without difficulty in any weather.

Bids were received last Tuesday for concreting the 40 miles of No. 9 from the end of the new pavement at Pevely through Festus to Flat River.

When the slag is laid on the new grade beyond Pevely, it will be possible to motor to Festus, then to a point north of Hillsboro and come back into St. Louis over the Lemay Ferry road, or the trip can be reversed.

Two and a half miles of concrete, from Foristell to Wright City, have just been opened to traffic on the St. Louis-Kansas City Highway No. 2. It is now possible to motor on concrete all the way from St. Louis through St. Charles and Wentzville to Wright City.

Bids were received Monday, and contracts will be let soon, for 12 miles more of concrete on No. 2, from Wright City to the Montgomery County line.

Attractive Tour on Concrete to Chester, Ill.

New Hard-Surfaced Highway Open to Traffic for Nearly 70 Miles South From East St. Louis.

Opening to traffic of the new concrete highway from East St. Louis south to Chester, Ill., a distance of about 68 miles, offers to motorists of St. Louis and the East Side a Sunday tour that, everything considered, is about the most attractive in Southern Illinois. The only break in the concrete ribbon that amounts to anything is at Evansville where the old road through the town is followed for three quarters of a mile. As shown by the dotted line on the map above, this highway, which is part of Illinois Route No. 3, is to be extended through Murphysboro to Carbondale where it will intersect the concrete highway from East St. Louis, through Belleville, Massoutah, Okawville, Ashley, Duquoin, and Carbondale, to Cairo.

A party which made the trip to Chester the past week in one of the new Rickenbacker vertical eights was surprised by the charm of the country traversed. The road is a splendid example of intelligent road engineering and construction.

From East St. Louis the concrete road passes along the bluffs, where Falling Spring is a center of attraction for picnickers, through Dupo, and then through a rolling countryside, with many pleasant views, to Columbia and Waterloo. There is comparatively little of the typical flat Illinois country, and beyond Waterloo the country is broken enough to be decidedly picturesque.

Most of the towns on the route are quaint, with a number of old buildings worth a second look. Chester is beautifully situated on the bluffs of the Mississippi River and offers sweeping vistas across the lowlands to the Missouri hills.

Returning, the Rickenbacker party drove down the bluff road and took the old highway past the penitentiary under the bluffs—a charming ride of 10 miles, the road—which is macadam part of the way and then dirt that would be bad immediately after rain—finally winding up the face of the bluffs and across a pretty, rolling country to Ellis Grove and the concrete. In dry weather, this variation of the trip should surely be taken.

There is nothing on the highway to Chester to bother any driver. The grades are easily taken on high and there are no danger spots.

Not Sectional But Permanent Bldgs.

STOCK SPECIALS BEAT RACING CARS IN PERILOUS RACE

fourth mile began with a 2 per cent incline and the rest of the five miles was level. The race consisted of 50 circuits of this series of grades and bad curves, and was as severe a test of the stamina of both cars and drivers as ever has been contested.

Lockhart finished the 250 miles in 2 hours 21 minutes and 42 seconds, his average being 75 miles an hour. He took the lead from Baker at the half-way mark and never lost it thereafter. Baker, who drove a more careful race, had to go to the pits for two minutes on one occasion, thus losing the lead he had gained in the first 150 miles. He was almost nosed out of second money as his right rear tire went flat and he limped to the finish.

All Cautious on Curves.

Baker, at the wheel of his Jewett, got into the lead. On the second lap Lee Ormsby was only a few feet behind Baker as they came onto the main track and the Midwest star passed Cannonball on the second turn, going into the lead.

Al Cotey and Percy Green stopped momentarily on the third lap. Lockhart and George Beck were showing tremendous speed on the main track, with all of the drivers slowing up considerably on the turns, both on the track itself and out in the hills. Ormsby was still leading on the third lap, Baker holding second place, with Fletcher in third position. E. Bermuda was the first to go out of the race, having trouble negotiating one of the especially steep hills. Ormsby was driving carefully as was Baker, and the two rivals continued to hold their first and second positions at the sixth lap. Fletcher dropped back, being passed by Al Watters and others. Third position was held by Curley Young in his Frontenac. Les Allen, driving a Lexington, was fourth, with Watters fifth.

On the eighth lap Curley Young, who had been driving like a fiend, passed Baker and went into second place. Beck passed Lockhart on the second lap, and both of these drivers had nosed ahead of Fletcher, who started in second position. Lockhart had worked his way to fourth position on the ninth lap.

Cars Pushed to Limit.

After the 50-mile point had been reached Ormsby was still out in front. Young was in second place, and Baker third, with Beck, at the wheel of a Miller special, in fourth position. Lockhart was in fifth place. The time for the 50 miles was announced at 46m. 30s. Al Watters, who was in fifth position at the end of the first five laps, lost out because of a trip to the pits. He was back in the race after a minute. On the twelfth lap Beck stopped for 25 seconds to take on a bit of water, the heat and dust causing the drivers much discomfort.

On the thirteenth lap Longhart gave the grand-stand fans a thrill when he skidded just before coming down the straightaway. Without blinking he nodded to his pit men that all was well and continued. Young went into the lead on the fourteenth lap, passing Ormsby on the main track.

On the seventeenth lap Ormsby had to go to the pits. He came around the last turn with too much speed and crashed into the fence, fortunately without serious injury to the car or any of the mechanics. He broke a front spring bolt in the crash and was in the pits for more than 10 minutes. Ormsby's misfortune was Baker's gain and "Cannonball" took the lead. At the end of the twentieth lap he was holding his own, with Lockhart in second place and Cliff Bergere, the Frenchman, coming up to third position.

Art Witherell, driving a Rajo Special, skidded up the bank into the crowd. Witherell immediately backed onto the track and continued in the race, while an ambulance rushed to the scene.

Leo Nomis, piloting a Duesenberg, skidded off the course twice in less than 100 yards, the second putting him out of the race. E. H. Piper, in a Frontenac, also went off the course.

Lockhart was driving furiously and seemed to be gaining on Baker, being only 30 seconds behind him.

The time for 125 miles, the half-way mark of the race, was 1 hour and 42 minutes.

On the twenty-seventh lap De Bona, driving a Packard, lost his emergency gasoline tank. The container came off just as he was passing the grand stand. It rolled down the track, a torch of flame. De Bona continued in the race, the Packard doing well thereafter on merely its reputation.

Lockhart's terrific driving was the feature of the next 25 miles. Frank drove like a fool, cutting Baker's lead to 30 seconds by the time the thirtieth lap was reached. Simpson was third, Young fourth and Fletcher fifth—the time being 2 hours and 2 minutes. Baker was forced to the pits on his thirty-first lap, changing his left rear tire. He was in just long enough for Lockhart to pass him, getting out again before Simpson, driving third, could pass him.

At 150 miles there were 23 cars left in the race, four of these being in the pits for various reasons.

Lockhart maintained his lead at the end of the thirty-fifth lap, doing the 175 miles in 2 hours 24 minutes and 30 seconds. Baker was still second, but was two minutes behind Lockhart. Simpson clung to third place. Though Baker began to speed up as the end of the race neared, he was unable to gain much on Lockhart, who stayed out in front.

Bergere went out on the forty-first lap with a broken radiator, but got back in after two minutes. On the forty-fifth lap Lockhart stopped long enough to allow his mechanic, Ernest Stone, to dismount. This was to save tires, Frank having driven the 225 miles without a stop. Baker was still running second, with Simpson third. The time was 3 hours 4 minutes.

C. A. Chamberlain, driving his Chrysler, had moved into fourth position. He was very popular with the crowd, the fans cheering him every time he passed the grand stand.

up around these circle trips, and most of them are as available to Southern Illinoisans as to St. Louis motorists.

It will not be many months before completion of two more routes will open up another series of interesting touring variations to St. Louis and the East side. One of these roads is No. 3 from Alton North through Godfrey, with spur to Chautauqua; Delhi, Jerseyville, Carrollton, Whitehall and Murrayville to Jacksonville, whence No. 10 is hard-surfaced to Springfield. The other is No. 16 from Staunton (on the main road to Chicago through Edwardsville and Springfield) northeastward through Mt. Olive, Litchfield, Hillsboro, Witt, Nokomis and Pana to Shelbyville, Windsor and Mattoon. This road will intersect No. 2 to Decatur, No. 32 to Cerro Gordo and No. 25 to Urbana and Kankakee, and at Paris will strike No. 1 from Marshall to Chicago.

situated on a peninsula facing the Gulf of Mexico and extends back from the beach along the beautiful Back Bay, which is the estuary of the Tchouticabouffa River. 35-MILE AN HOUR SPEED LIMIT FOR NATION ADVOCATED directed primarily at reckless driving and should be uniform throughout the country. That communities should be empowered to fix speed limit zones, but should be required to mark the boundaries of such zones plainly; and should be prohibited from establishing a speed limit lower than 15 miles per hour. Speed in an excess of 35 miles per hour in rural areas should be considered prima facie, reckless, and the burden of proof of its reasonableness should rest upon the operator.

Some Recommendations.

That overtaking moving vehicles on sharp curves, approaching hill-crests, at intersections, or at railroad crossings be prohibited.

That parking be not permitted where it will endanger or seriously impede moving traffic or prevent reasonable access to the sidewalk for loading or unloading of vehicles. This will prohibit the parking or stopping of cars on any part of the traveled portion of a rural highway.

That a single cautionary signal made by extending the arm well outside the vehicle is recommended as preferable to a more complex code.

That vehicles should not be permitted to exceed a speed of 15 miles per hour when approaching within 100 feet of a railroad crossing.

That in cities pedestrians should be required to keep within the boundaries of designated safety zones and crossing places. That motorists should be required to accord pedestrians safe and dignified use of such safety zones and crossing places.

That reckless driving and other flagrant disregard of the rights of others by any user of the streets or highways should be prosecuted vigorously and unceasingly. Legislation should provide adequate penalties, including mandatory revocation of licenses for cumulative evidence of carelessness or irresponsibility, for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs, and severe penalties for driving after revocation. There should be a sufficient number of organized traffic officers to detect and prosecute such infractions.

That all persons operating motor vehicles be properly licensed. "Such licenses should be issued by a State department or division having entire administration of the motor vehicle law as its exclusive duty; with full authority to refuse a license, to suspend or revoke a license already issued for any reason deemed sufficient," the committee says. Before granting such license the applicant's ability to operate a motor vehicle safely should be determined by ascertaining his physical and mental fitness, knowledge of the law, and by requiring an actual demonstration. Persons under 16 years of age or who cannot read English should not be permitted to operate a motor vehicle.

GOOD DRIVER SHOULD BE GOOD WALKER TOO

Otherwise He Cannot Realize Attitude in Street of Pedestrian.

"If you can't learn to be a good driver, at least try to be a good traffic citizen when you walk," a traffic policeman suggests. "One of the most illogical situations in motordom is to find a motorist getting run down. He should know enough about the driver's problems not to act like the sort of pedestrian who knows nothing about the control of a car and who, accordingly, misjudges stopping distances, speed, direction of travel, street conditions and so forth.

"When you walk try to think of yourself as a driver of the car that is nearest you. Recall the things you thought of when the last pedestrian suddenly stepped into your way. Remember the difficulty you had in stopping and how you deliberated as to whether you could sound your horn and scare him out of his wits and take your chances on the possibility of his getting out of your way in time. It may be that as you are stepping across the street there is a driver in just such a dilemma.

"When you walk past blind driveways stop, look and be sure there's nothing coming your way in the shape of a truck or delivery wagon. You remember how, as a driver, you are frequently cautioned against coming out of a driveway without coming to a dead stop and sounding your horn, but you should also remember that sometimes you fail to take this precaution. You don't think, that's about the size of it. Well, then, what's going to be the result if you, as a walker, also fail to think? Two error do not make a right.

"By all rules of logic the good driver ought to be the good walker in traffic, for he alone knows the great disadvantage to which the driver is so frequently put when he is endeavoring to compensate for the carelessness of pedestrians and unfavorable street, weather or traffic conditions."

On Auto Row

Novel Questionnaire Contest.

An unusual contest, with five turkeys as prizes, was held Wednesday evening by Dan Hyland, head of the Stewart-Warner Service Station, 3206-10 Locust boulevard, for the station employes. It was a written examination based on 11 questions. As 10 points were awarded for each perfect answer, a perfect score would have been 110 points. The judges decided that the winners were Lee R. Jones, shop foreman, with 97 points; Jack Cashel, shipping clerk, who also got 97 points; E. A. Lohman, bookkeeper, 91 points; E. L. Harrison, repair man, 90 points, and Edward Niemeier, shop boy, 82 points. The questions were as follows:

1. What is the first duty of a man who works for another man?

2. How would you treat and answer a lady who said this to you: "You are the man who fixed my speedometer last Thursday and I was hardly out of here when it stopped working. If that's the kind of people you are, etc., etc."

3. Which of these greetings would you use to a customer entering the service station and why? "Well, what is it?" or "There's nothing you want, is there?" or "What can I do for you this morning, sir?"

4. In what way do you think you would be benefited by continued loyalty to this business and to its management?

5. What time is it when the clock hands point to 5:30 p. m. when the customer is waiting for his car and you have 20 minutes more work to do on it?

6. In case of a minor dispute between a customer and the firm, involving some unimportant adjustment, which would you favor, the customer or the firm?

7. What is your idea of a good maxium or slogan for a man working for wages in a job he likes and wants to continue in?

8. What is the very last thing to do to a car, when the job is finished, just before you say, "Your car is ready, madam?"

9. How old does a man have to be before he has learned all about adjusting or installing a speedometer or vacuum tank?

10. Is it un-American, in your opinion, to say, "Sir" or "Ma'am," in addressing a customer? If so, why?

11. What would you say to a customer who said to you, "That's a good job you did for me. It works perfectly?"

Establishes Used Car Branch.

The Willys-Overland factory branch is just opening a used car department at 3120 Locust boulevard to handle certified exchanged cars. The new department will be under the supervision of John Nolan, retail sales manager. "Merchandising of used cars must be given much more thought," says Nolan. "In the past automobile merchants have tried to merchandise used cars from all sorts of unattractive places, ranging from basements to second floors. The day is past when that can be done. The used car buyer today must be treated just as the new car buyer. We must bring buyers into clean used-car showrooms, on ground floors, that will create the same atmosphere as in the new-car display quarters. There also must be large stocks of reconditioned cars to be sold as certified."

Coach Prices Slashed Again.

Coach prices are definitely fixed at less than those of open cars in further reductions on all enclosed cars just announced by the Hudson Motor Car Co. The stage for this move was set months ago when the Hudson Coach was offered at exactly the same cost as the Hudson open cars. This move was a sensation in the industry. The proportion of enclosed cars in the Hudson business, already high, reached new marks. As the volume of coach business increased further, a reduction was possible which brought the Hudson coach actually below open cars in cost. Now has come the move which brings the price of both Hudson and Essex cars below those of open ones. "This surprising price move," says R. C. Frampton, head of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Co., Hudson and Essex distributor, "bears out the prediction that enclosed cars are to be the standard style and that touring cars are luxuries. Naturally the coach and the coach buyer are entitled to the volume price. Fully as sensational as the drop in coach prices is the very large reduction on Hudson sedans."

Take Dealership in City.

The Roberts Motor Co., 5156 Delmar boulevard, has taken a Maxwell and Chrysler dealership with the Ward Motor Co., Inc., the local distributer. W. S. Roberts is president of the firm, V. E. Soehnlen vice president and sales manager and Harry Gluck service manager. The three men have been together for 10 years. Roberts at one time was Case branch manager in St. Louis and has been associated with other automobile firms.

Tire Price Prospect.

So rapidly have balloon tires grown in favor that 95 per cent of next year's automobile production (Fords not considered) probably will be equipped with them, say members of the Associated Tire Dealers who attended the national tire dealers' convention at Akron and won the next convention for St. Louis, despite a hard fight for Buffalo. The next price revision on tires probably will be upward because of the great increase in price of crude rubber, it was said. They said also that there was evident at the convention a very real desire to make the tire service of members such as to cause the public to identify them with the thought of clean methods and progressive service. The St. Louis delegates, all of whom paid their own expense, were: A. P. Woehrle, president of the St. Louis association; Sam Chorlins, vice president; Clarence V. Quinn, treasurer; Alfred D. Reid, Arthur S. Fishel, Roger Davison, L. B. Wyner, W. L. Bowcott, J. Z. Cohen and J. G. Johnston.

Tells of Industry's Growth.

"The Automobile Business and Its Growth in Twenty Years" was the subject of an address delivered Friday night by Capt. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, to the fourth degree assembly of the Knights of Columbus at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Lee said the automobile business had grown from a few thousand cars in the entire United States in 1904 to 15,237,000 in 1924, and that registration for the city of St. Louis was now about 120,230, of which 19,078 were trucks.

Beats Time of Fastest Trains.

A notable speed and endurance record has just been made by a stock Essex touring car, which beat by 26 minutes the time of the fastest train between El Paso and San Antonio, Tex. The car made 680 miles in 16 hours and 53 minutes elapsed time. The run was made partly to show the good condition of the Glacier-to-Gulf highway, and was officially checked from midnight through the night and part of the day while it averaged 40.2 miles an hour, without faltering.

Leases New Quarters.

John C. Auffenberg, president of the Monarch Motor Car Co., has leased the building at 3137-39 Locust boulevard. Increase of business and need for storage room necessitates a larger building than the one the firm now occupies at 3118 Locust.

Breaks Record on Mountain.

A stock Cleveland six has just broken the record for climbing Mt. Wilson, Cal., one of the most widely known test grades in this country. Driven by Ralph Mulford, the Cleveland broke the old record of 25 minutes 48 seconds by a minute and 81-100 second, winning a cup that Mulford will retain for six months and thereafter until a new record is made. Less than two weeks before, Mulford, with a Cleveland broke the record for climbing Mt. Diablo, Cal.

Fast Run by Car With Top Up.

A new stock Franklin touring car, with top and curtains up, has just run the 305 miles from Dallas to Houston, Tex., in 8 hours and 2 minutes elapsed time, 3 minutes faster than the time of the speediest train between the two cities. The actual running time was 7 hours and 45 minutes, so the average speed was over 39 miles an hour. The car encountered much muddy road and other hard going, but the motor never heated and the car performed in flawless style.

600 Car-a-Day Schedule.

The Willys-Overland factories have increased their schedule from 550 to 600 cars a day, and present plans are to run them at 1000 cars a day by Feb. 1. Officials say production has been considerably below sales for several months and that factory and dealer stocks are at a minimum.

Huge Lumber Cargo.

Laden with more than 5,000,000 board feet of high-grade lumber, the largest single shipment ever carried on the Great Lakes, the motorship Henry Ford II of the Ford Motor Co. flee, on her last trip of the season, docked at the River Rouge plant Nov. 13, to tie up for the winter. The cargo, taken on at the Ford docks at L'Anse, in Upper Michigan, is a product of the Ford sawmills there. In addition to the lumber carried in her hold, the freighter carried a deck load 10 feet high.

John Smith and His Car

by FREDERICK RUSSELL

SMILES PER GALLON.

SMITH was filling up with gasoline as I drove in to the garage one evening and it occurred to me to ask him what sort of gas mileage he was getting.

"Haven't any idea," was the reply. "Don't keep track of it. What's the use?"

I produced a little red memo. book and, opening it, pointed to an item at the end of expenses for the previous month. The item read: "Average miles per gallon, 10." Smith's eyes followed my finger to the corresponding item for the month previous to that. The figures hardly corresponded; the car had shown 14 miles per gallon then.

"That's one way in which my accounts are useful," I said. "When my gasoline mileage drops off four points there is something wrong. Either I am getting cheated at the gasoline station or the gas is poor or the carburetor needs readjustment. In this case it happened to be the quality of the gas. I am trying another brand now and the mileage is getting back to normal."

"Is there such a difference in gas?" Smith asked.

"The difference, in my opinion," I said, "is in the proportion of air necessary to produce the best possible mixture. I can get just the same performance with one kind of gas as with another, providing I change the carburetor adjustment to suit conditions. But when it's a question of changing the carburetor adjustment or of changing gas stations I prefer the latter. The carburetor is the last thing to meddle with."

"That's why I never touch it," Smith replied.

"Aren't you rather going to extremes?" I asked. "In your carburetor lies the greater part of the secret of gas economy. If you're getting good mileage it's wisdom to let it alone, but if the mileage is low you can't do much harm by experimenting a little."

"I think I'll try keeping tabs on expenses," Smith decided. "I'll start now with this tankful of gas."

"You'll find that by checking the cost of operating the car there will be much more satisfaction in driving it. When someone comes along with the yarn that he can't afford to own a car you'll have your memo book to prove that he can."

So Smith kept his mind on the speedometer and the gas tank for a few days—and then made a report. It was not an encouraging one. He was surprised to learn that he was only getting about twelve miles per gallon whereas with his type of car he should have been realizing about seventeen.

"I'll try making the mixture leaner," he said. "The instruction book tells how and it looks simple enough."

So he tried that too. This time he reported that he ran 75 miles on five gallons. The mileage was still below par. He was puzzled. To explain to him why the mileage was not as it should be I rode along home with him that afternoon. As I expected I found that he drove nearly half way up the main street before recombering to push his choker all the way in. He was wasting gas and blaming it on the carburetor. For another thing, he kept the gas lever on kept the gas lever in its closed position, and would have had less difficulty shifting gears. When he pulled up to the curb to let me off he allowed the engine to run a while instead of shutting it off and coasting to a stop.

"You are wasting gas continually," I said. "You'll never reach par until you learn to drive more economically."

"All right," he boasted. "I'll take your advice, but I'll go you one better. I'll make the mixture as lean as possible and hang up a record for gas mileage."

So he tried this, too. But several days later he admitted that he had made a mistake. "I seem to be getting eighteen or nineteen on long rides," he said, "but the car won't climb hills on high and in the city I have to choke the carburetor half the time and that wastes more gas than I save."

EDSEL FORD SAYS 1925 MAY EQUAL MARK SET IN 1923

Is Quoted as Certain It Will Be Better Than 1924—Record Year in 1926 Predicted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 29.—Predictions as to the 1925 production of automobiles are at variance. Whereas there is considerable talk in the factories of a 5,000,000- car year, Edsel Ford and Benjamin H. Cram, economist and statistician, are not so optimistic, although indicating that the 1923 record may be equaled.

Edsel Ford is quoted as saying that the Ford production this year will be about 8 per cent less than in 1923, or about 1,890,000 units. "The year 1925 looks very good," he is quoted as saying. "It will be better than 1924, and may equal 1923." He also was quoted as denying that the Ford Motor Co. would bring out a new engine next year, remarking that while it was continually testing new ideas, it had no plans "up its sleeve."

Foresees Record Year in 1926.

Cram says the industry will have a very favorable year in 1925, with production about equal to that in 1923. But in 1926, he predicts, the industry "will have a banner year and will break the production record established in 1923."

"The industry is adding about 1,000,000 new owners a year," says Cram. "The rest is replacement business. There are approximately 17,000,000 licensed motors in the United States. Of these, 12,000,000 have been manufactured since 1919. Surveys and tests reveal the age of a motor car to be five to six years. Therefore, there are 4,000,000 replacements to be made.

"But not all of these will come in 1925. Probably one-fourth of these cars have found their way to the junk heap. One-quarter more will remain in the hands of used car dealers, stored in the rear of repair shops or in the yards of their owners.

Tells of Truck Changes Coming.

"We can figure on at least 2,000,000 replacements in 1925. This, with a conservative estimate of 300,000 exports, will bring our total up to 2,300,000.

"Why will 1926 be a banner year? Because general business and prosperity will gain momentum in 1925 and reach the peak in 1926.

"The motor industry will follow general business in 1925 and lead it in 1926. There will be a great increase in the motor truck industry, a far larger percentage of increase than in passenger cars. This will result from several startling mechanical advancements which large makers are prepared to place on the market in 1925.

"Truck makers will reap a harvest from popularization of the bus business. For short rides the traction and steam roads will turn to the motor bus and use the gasoline-driven machines on a large scale."

ENGINE WITH BY-PASS VALVES IN ITS PISTONS TRIED ON PACIFIC COAST

A NEW principle in gasoline engines is being tested at Tacoma, Wash. The engine, which has been invented by three Spokane men, operates with by-pass valves in the pistons. It is said to do away with the need of valve gear and to run very cool and with marked flexibility. It was built on specifications laid down by a group of engineers after tests at the University of Michigan.

ST. LOUIS-CHICAGO HARD ROAD HELPS TOWNS EN ROUTE

Pessimists in Smaller Places Confuted by Benefits From Increasing Automobile Traffic.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 29.—With completion this year of another 1000 miles of concrete highway in Illinois, there is additional proof that the new hard roads, instead of being a curse to the villages and smaller towns along their routes, are a blessing.

The pessimists in the hamlets have argued ever since these improvements were first projected that they would sound the death knell of the rural settlements and that trade would center in the larger places at the expense of the smaller. It was maintained that farmers who were formerly forced to trade at the village store by the embargo of mud would patronize only the more pretentious stores of the cities.

Not a Town Has Suffered.

This gloomy condition has not been realized. The "Illini boulevard," which passes through this city and connects St. Louis and Chicago with a band of concrete 200 miles in length, has not a town that has deteriorated since the new road was completed a year ago. Investigation has revealed that in every instance the population has held steady and, in most instances, increased, while there has been no loss, either in the number of inhabitants or in business. In the great majority there has been an increase in both.

With thousands of tourists passing through daily in automobiles, each town has become more careful of its appearance. A more attractive front has been displayed. There has been a universal clean-up. Attractive filling stations line the new highway, surrounded by shrubs and flowers and with well-kept lawns and driveways. They replaced dilapidated buildings or other eyesores. Rubbish has been removed. Stores and residence premises, visible from the hard road, are well maintained. There is an air of neatness and orderliness never before as pronounced. It is an ever visible invitation to halt and patronize the "gas" stations or other places of business.

Villages Benefit.

A count, maintained for several days during the tourist season, led to the estimate that during the year now waning 1000 cars from other states passed over the new boulevard every day on the average en route either to Chicago or St. Louis. This means more than $50,000 for the year.

Probably the occupants of every car spent from $5 to $10 on the trip for supplies or food. The villages received their share of this sum, large in the aggregate, perhaps $2,000,000. Roadside stands, where farm products, fruits, vegetables, eggs and butter are on sale, have been opened at many places between the villages and have been profitable.

The more attractive villages have been selected as homes by business men in Chicago.

TIRES RUINED BY DRIVING CARS IN STREET CAR TRACKS

A volume could be written about tires that have been ruined by driving in car tracks. Nevertheless there are many motorists who still cling to this unnecessary and wasteful habit. If tires were intended for running in street car tracks they would be made of something besides rubber—steel, most likely. Running in car tracks is a sure way of wearing both the rubber and fabric completely through. Most of the wear, of course,

MANY NOVELTIES SEEN AT ANNUAL AUTO SALON

Costly Car Has Transmission Like That on a Ford—Another Is Suspended on Coil Springs—Fine Coach Work.

Features of the annual automobile salon in New York, just closed, were the splendid examples of American coach builders' art on American-built chassis and mechanical novelties on several foreign cars.

A German car shown was the Maybach, built by the firm which built the engines for the Zeppelin which recently crossed the Atlantic and now is the Los Angeles. The Maybach, a six-cylinder car, rated at 15 horsepower, has a two-speede planetary transmission like that of the Ford car. Another peculiarity of this car is that, except for seven grease cups, there are no lubricating points on the chassis. The spring hangers, for instance, have ball bearings packed in grease and the company says the grease will last for two years without renewal.

Quick Increase in Power.

The other German exhibit, the Mercedes, has a supercharger attachment connected to the carburetor whereby the power, nominally 40 and by brake test 100, can be instantly increased to 140. The Mercedes has underslung cantilever rear springs and is lubricated by oil. There is a combination lock on the gear shift lever and a ring on the steering wheel for dimming the lights. An ingenious arrangement lights a blue lamp in the dash as a warning if the oiling system is not working, while a red light reveals the fact that the battery is discharging.

The Excelsior, from Belgium, is a six-cylinder car with three carburetors and a device of steel rods above the rear axle which, it is said, absolutely prevents sidesway at any speed. The chassis is lubricated all over by oil, no grease being employed, even on the springs.

Another interesting car is a little Lancia from Italy, weighing less than 2000 pounds and rated at 13.9 horsepower. It has a four-cylinder long-stroke motor of V-type, the cylinders being set at 14 degrees and all being bored in one casting. The car is suspended on coil springs and the body and chassis frame are integral.

Smaller Rolls Royce Shown.

Rolls Royce made the first display in this country of the new 20-horsepower English made model with an English fully collapsible body. This car has a six-cylinder motor with overhead valves, semi-elliptic springs all around and in numerous other details differs from the larger model. Three of the larger Rolls Royces from the American factory at Springfield, Mass., were shown, including a beautiful sedan in two tones of gray and black stripe, and with broadcloth upholstery to match; a roadster in biege and a Salamanca cabriolet in gun metal.

Renault was represented by its 40-60-horsepower and its 12-18-horsepower models, both with Paris-made enclosed drive bodies. The larger car, with body by Bellvallette, has six seats in the rear compartment and two in front, being rated as an eight-passenger car.

New American Models.

Two American car manufacturers, the Marmon and the Cunningham, revealed new models at the Salon. The Marmon featured its new line of enclosed bodies which include numerous refinements. The new Cunningham has a different style radiator, hood and cowl and a number of changes has been made in the engine.

There were nearly a score of Lincolns in different exhibits. LeBaron showed four in one group, including a so-called semi-collapsible sport cabriolet, done in two tones of gray, a club roadster, town car and inside drive limousine. Brunn also showed on Lincoln chassis, a brougham, cabriolet, semi-collapsible sedan and sport phaeton. Fleetwood exhibited a brougham-landaulet on a Lincoln chassis and Locke showed a Lincoln with a cabriolet top. Hume's exhibit was featured by a handsome sedan limousine on a Lincoln chassis.

Several Packards were displayed by body builders. Fleetwood, three; Holbrook three, Derham and Judkins one, Le Baron, Pi... and Brunn showed Cadillacs. ... of the Brunn cars was a coll... four-passenger sport sedan, ... the body in pearl gray, black ... and fenders, natural wood w... and windows offsets in gray, ... of the most striking cars in ... show.

OIL RECTIFIER PROVES WORTH

In Road Test From St. Louis It Purifies Lubricant in Car Engine.

One of the significant developments in motor car engineering in recent years is the effort to combat gasoline dilution of oil in the engine. Assertions have been made that at last this problem has been solved by the oil rectifier installed on Rickenbacker eights and sixes. This rectifier takes the oil, distills it to purity again and returns it to the crankcase.

Dilution Remedied.

Two interesting tests have just been made of this rectifier by the Diesing Motor Sales Co., local Rickenbacker distributer. In the first, the crankcase of a Rickenbacker car was thoroughly drained of oil, then refilled with a mixture of seven quarts of oil, a quart of gasoline and a quart of water. Thus the mixture was 25 per cent diluted. The rear end of the car was jacked up on the showroom floor, and the engine started.

After the engine had run the equivalent of 200 miles on the road, the crankcase was drained and the oil analyzed. It was found that the rectifier had done its work so well that the oil was virtually pure, only 2 per cent of dilution and impurities being discernible.

Result of Test on Road.

Monday morning, the crankcase of a Rickenbacker eight was drained and refilled with the same mixture—seven quarts of oil, a quart of gasoline and a quart of water. Then a party consisting of L. R. Short, of the Roxanna Petroleum Co.; Maj. A. J. Wicks, service manager of the Diesing company; J. J. Butler, in charge of sales promotion for the Diesing company, and a newspaper man, drove the car 145 miles from the Diesing company showroom on Delmar boulevard to Chester, Ill., and return.

After the trip, the crankcase was drained and the oil sent to the Roxanna plant at Wood River where it was analyzed by chemists and found to be only 3 per cent diluted. The verdict was that the rectifier certainly did prevent and remedy oil dilution and contamination.

Report of Chemist.

Here is the report of P. A. Crosby, chief chemist at the Roxanna plant at Wood River on the condition of the oil which was Shell medium, after the run to Chester:

	Medium oil	Dilution to 25 per cent	Oil in crankcase after run with rectifier
Quality deg. A.	20.5	57.2	23.0
Carbon Viscosity deg. F.	580	192	540
Saybolt Viscosity at 210 deg. F.	92	41	91
Flash (Cleveland open cup)	430 deg. F.	Room temp.	415 deg. F.
Fire (Cleveland open cup)	480 deg. F.	Room temp.	460 deg. F.
Carbon (Conradson method)	0.13 per cent.		0.19 per cent.
Ash	None.		0.05 per cent.
Distillation	10 per cent.		10 per cent.

"With an initial dilution of 25 per cent of gasoline and water, the figure was reduced to 3 per cent after approximately 150 miles, and no doubt would have been reduced to a lower figure had the run been continued. The viscosity at 210 degrees fahrenheit was almost restored to the original figure, thus proving its excellent lubricating value."

How the Rectifier Works.

The rectifier works simply, yet its action is difficult to describe. It utilizes the vacuum of the intake manifold to suck from the lower ring grooves in the pistons all surplus oil, gasoline, sulphuric acid compounds formed by the action of heat on the gasoline, and the water that always accumulates through condensation from air and gasoline. This oil, gasoline, acid and water is deposited in a retort in the rectifier that is heated to a high degree by heat from the exhaust and is redistilled. The gasoline, water and sulphur compounds are turned into gas and steam and in that form are returned through the manifold to the combustion chamber, where they are consumed. The purified oil is returned to the crankcase.

The Rickenbacker factory reports that it has put in a car crankcase a mixture of six quarts of oil, a gallon of gasoline and a quart of water, operated engine and rectifier for half an hour and found that the oil was completely purified.

67 STAR OWNERS AVERAGED 11,273 MILES ON A SET OF TIRES

THE small gasoline consumption of the Star Car and its freedom from expensive repair bills are supplemented by unusually low tire replacement costs. Sixty-seven Star owners drove 755,300 miles on 67 sets of tires, an average of 11,273 miles per set of tires.

One owner replaced his first tire after driving 21,000 miles, and after driving 31,000 miles, is still using the two original front tires. Many others drove upwards of 15,000 miles before replacing tires.

Ask the nearest Star dealer to show you why the Star is reliable and more economical.

A lead-in insulator can be made by nailing a tin can to the side of the house and placing an empty glass bottle in it, fitting the bottle snugly in the can by driving wooden wedges between the tin and bottle.

FOR THE NOTEBOOK

Never overload the "A" battery.

Static is sometimes reduced by using only the ground.

A signal must be strong to operate a loud speaker.

The leads of a "B" battery when short are less liable to short circuit.

Always "ground" the cores of audio transformers to a ground other than that which the receiver uses.

Recent inventions are claimed to have made possible the discarding of radio "A," "B" and "C" batteries. Use is made of the house electric light current instead.

A great deal of microphonic noise in a set can be stopped by placing soft rubber sponges under the cabinet or else using non-microphonic sockets.

A bit of solder and touch of flux makes the best connection.

For best results, an indoor antenna should be as long and as high as possible.

SOME CAUSES FOR MYSTERIOUS NOISES

How Passing Street Cars and Household Appliances May Cause Trouble.

Many of the noises heard in the loud speaker or telephones of a radio set are due not only to the defects in the receiver and its auxiliary apparatus, but also to electrical disturbances coming from sources outside the receiver. A good test for the location of these disturbances is to disconnect the antenna entirely from the receiver. If the noises of disturbances diminish in intensity or disappear entirely, you may be sure that their source is external to the receiver.

Power circuits, through their distributing power lines and auxiliary apparatus, such as lightning arrestors, tranformers, insulators, are one of the great sources of radio receiver interference. These disturbances are generally due to a faulty piece of apparatus or a poor connection and can be remedied such by the power companies. The power companies themselves are much interested when disturbances from these sources are experienced, for it means to them a defect in their system with its attendant losses in power. They are therefore, at all times willing to remedy the trouble. As a matter of fact, some of the larger power companies employ radio trbuole shooting crews, who, with the aid of small portable loop receiving sets, continously inspect the companies' property to locate and remedy such troubles.

Industrial applications of electrical power, such as arc lights, telephone and telegraph lines, street cars and electric railway motors and generators, are another source of trouble. The trouble from these sources are somewhat difficult to remedy, for they are so varied in nature and not controllable. Their functioning requires that they become the source of disturbance. In some cases, however, in sparking apparatus, such as sparking commutators, the shunting of a large condenser, with a capacity of from one to ten microfarads and able to carry the current across the breaking point in circuit, will remedy the trouble.

A third large class of disturbing apparatus can be found in the various household appliances, such as doorbells, the electric light switching systems, sewing machine motors, vacuum cleaners, flatirons, electric washing machines and other motor-driven apparatus, violet ray outfits, electric irons and heating apparatus. The commutators and brushes of all motors and generators should be kept in perfect condition, so that there is no sparking. The brushes should be replaced from time to time and the commutators of the machine brightened up by means of a little sand paper until the sparking is eliminated. Placing a condenser of about one or two microfarads across the terminals of the machine and sometimes in addition a small choke coil, such as a small honeycomb coil, in each wire leading to the apparatus will assist in eliminating interference from these sources. Electrical heating apparatus should be examined from time to time to see that perfect contact exists between all parts within the apparatus. Alternate heating and cooling of the various parts of the apparatus result in the expansion and contraction of these parts, soon loosen the connections and cause sparking which ofttimes gives rise to considerable trouble. This can be remedied by opening up the apparatus and tightening down all connections.

Among the miscellaneous other devices which contribute to the general discomfort of the radiocast line leading to X-ray machines storage battery chargers, electric elevators, and the ignition system of automobile and stationary gas engines. Inserting small choke coils in each wire of the current supply line leadin gto X-ray machines remedies this trouble. Cleaning up the contacts of mechanical storage battery chargers will remedy that source of trouble. Trouble from ignition systems can best be remedied by completely shielding all parts of the system and in addition, inserting small choke coils in each line of the system.

PLANS FLIGHT FROM U. S. TO AUSTRALIA

Pan-Pacific Union at Honolulu Sponsors Proposed Round-the-Pacific Journey.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Nov. 10.—The visit of the United States fleet to Hawaiian and Australian waters will be made the occasion for the first round-the-Pacific flight under plans which are being supported by the Pan-Pacific Union here.

The idea was conceived by David Stead, Australian delegate to the recent Pan-Pacific Food Conservation Conference, who has made a study of aviation, and has been given the unofficial approval of the ranking army and navy officials here.

A flight in four sections is contemplated: San Francisco to Honolulu, Honolulu to Manila, Manila to Australia and Australia to Honolulu. All will follow commercial steamship routes.

Commander John Rodgers, U. S. N., commander of the naval air forces here, said that while he considered the hop from San Francisco to Honolulu as a "stunt" he hoped it could be made. He regarded the route from Honolulu to Australia as practicable and estimated that it could be covered with one of the navy's new type planes in six days, as compared with the present steamer time of 14 days.

German Try Wired Radio.

German Government radio experts in Altenburg, Saxony, have recently conducted experiments on broadcasting over common electric lighting wires, and have succeeded in receiving messages without difficulty. Using a special sending apparatus, these messages can be put on the wire and received anywhere within a certain radius by connecting the receiving set with a simple electric contact with the lighting current in a house.

NEW AUTO-BROADCAST SYSTEM

The first types of the newly invented British auto-broadcast system, with multiple aerial and multiple receiving set, are meeting with great success. The invention carries the American idea of only a single aerial for a number of sets. This system allows any room of a large house or building to be wired for radio, the same as electric light. In each room a socket is provided wherein a plug is connected to the loud speaker or a pair of telephones may be inserted. When none of these sockets is properly plugged the receivers are not working. As soon as anyone plugs in the loud speaker of the receiving set it begins to operate on the wave length which it was previously tuned, also operating any other loud speaker or telephones which are plugged into this system. When the last plug is extracted from its socket the distant receiving tubes are automatically extinguished.

How Greeks Use Radio.

Because the Greek law allows radio telephony only for private communications, several important Greek business houses have installed radio equipment for their own use, especially between Athens and Piraeus. Four firms are using Marconi radio telephone sets, and other firms are inquiring for the same apparatus. This type of set is for use by people with no technical knowledge and can be operated as easily as a house telephone.

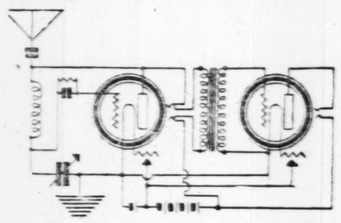
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

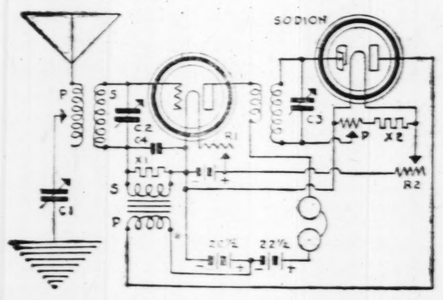
Q. Inclosed you will find a copy of the circuit which I received some time ago. I am pleased with the selectivity of the set, being able to tune in or out most any of the local stations. I would like to know if I could add a stage of audio frequency amplification in order to get the signals just a little louder? I want to use telephone jacks in the set. Can you show this diagram for my present set? I am using WD-12 tubes.



A. This can be done very easily and at a minimum of expense. The diagram is shown herewith.

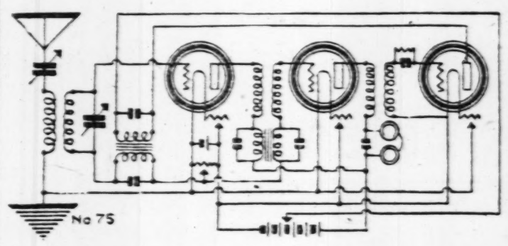
Q. The diagram of my single tube sodion set is inclosed herewith. I would now like to enlarge the set, using a stage of audio frequency amplification. If possible, would like to use a reflex circuit. Can the sodion tube be used in reflex circuits? If so, kindly publish a schematic diagram of same in the Question and Answers department. S. W.

A. Yes, the sodion tube can be used in reflex circuits, for the detector tube only. The diagram of a two-tube reflex receiver employing the sodion in this position is shown here.



J. Curtiss Jr.: I have constructed the four-tube Acme reflex circuit, which I am operating from a small loop. The set is a good one, very sharp, good quality and fine volume. I am using a fixed crystal for the detector. What I would like to know is this: If I were to use a tube for a detector will I get the same good quality? Will a tube for the detector increase my volume to such an extent that I could eliminate the last stage of audio? In any event, I would like to have a circuit covering a three-tube reflex set, with but two stages of radio, tube detector and two stages of audio.

Answer: When you use a vacuum tube for detection you will improve somewhat in sensitiveness, also volume, but you are very apt to have some distortion, through overloading of the detector. Then, too, you must remember you are losing one stage of reflexed radio frequency, which is a decrease in your sensitiveness. The diagram of such an arrangement is shown here. Figure 75.



Perplexed: I am inviting your help with me on my getting my two-tube Harkness circuit to operate. I have inclosed a copy of the circuit just as I have my set wired up and I can hear absolutely nothing with it. I have spent considerable time and money in the building of this set and am discouraged with the result. The circuit was taken from the radio section of another paper and presume it is O. K.

Q. I am a reader of your paper and have been for over a year. I could not get along without it, and I certainly thank you for the many questions you have answered for me. I have a few problems that I am submitting to you. 1. I have built a four-tube set as given in "100 Radio Hook Ups," page 30, figure 55. When I put more than 45 volts "B" battery on it, it won't work the loud speaker, but works fine on headset. I have tried using "C" battery on 67½ and 90 volts, but that doesn't make any difference. Chicago stations come in loud on speaker with 45 volts. Please explain. 2. I have an aerial about 60 feet long and 30 feet high at one end, and 15 feet at the other end, and I had a plain 43-plate condenser on the above and could get Pittsburg, Hastings and other stations. I took off the plain and put on a vernier condenser, 43 plates, and now I cannot get any of these places even when it was cool in April. I think it is the condenser. Please explain. R. M.

A. In this case there are two logical explanations, either or neither of which may be correct. It is possible that you have a weak soft tube among the four which will not stand the higher voltage. This would, of course, wreck the output when the higher voltage "B" battery was put on, while giving perfect results at 45 volts. The second thought is that the loud speaker may be "freezing" up on the higher voltage, since you state results are O K on phones. If you have tubes of the 199 or 299 type the soft tube explanation is the more probable, as this is a common fault. 2. While variable condensers vary as to their efficiency, some having greater energy losses than others, it is not logical that the change in condensers could bring about such a great change in results. I would say that some other condition within your equipment changed about the same time you switched condensers. It may be that you will trace this difficulty also to that soft tube.

The first time signals were sent out by radio was in 1904 during tests between two observatories in Paris.

The Chamber of Commerce of Buffalo has named a special committee to study methods of improving all forms of radio communication in the district.

Pennsylvania State College is offering courses by correspondence in radio reception and transmission, one for the ordinary pupil and one for advanced work.

Express trains in Germany are to be equipped with radio receiving sets. Train conductors will sell radio tickets which will give the purchaser the privilege to use a receiving set for a certain length of time.

Chicago is the first city in the United States to have a radio commission. The commission is planning, first, to improve radio reception for the people of Chicago, and second, to prevent hostile and oppressive regulation of broadcasting and reception.

Little Things That Help.

One of the most useful pliers for building receiving sets are of the small, round-nose type, with cutting jaws.

The proper way to use solder is to first make the joint as tight as possible, and then use a minimum of solder to hold the joint together.

When building a receiving set, it is best to first obtain the necessary parts and from the dimensions of these units lay out the panel and baseboard.

For the loud speaker a horn made of wood or papier mache gives purer tone than a metal one, which is liable to produce metallic overtone or vibrations.

In arranging the aerial and ground binding posts on the panel of a set do not place them too close together. Get them at least three inches apart if possible.

A vernier condenser is necessary for sharp tuning.

Radio sets now range in price from $14 to $5000.

When a storage battery fails to take a charge, it is an indication that it needs to be overhauled at a battery station.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

QRX

L. MENARS, SFJ, who has been forging ahead steadily with record after record for distance reception, announces an achievement which may well prove historic for French radio. He has heard, he tells us, seven radio stations from New Zealand—a total distance of over 12,200 miles. He gives the stations logged as follows:

Oct. 10, 6 p. m.: z2AC, z4AG, z2BQ.

Oct. 12: z4AA, z1AC, z4AG, z2AC, a3BM, a3BQ.

Oct. 14: z4SQ.

This remarkable reception was obtained in his usual three-tube set, after having made a few minor adjustments and modifications. It is, according to M. Menars' claims, the longest distance ever recorded between amateur stations.

He also announces that he is now transmitting, using only 10 watts input; and that so far he has had reports from Finland (OZNCA) of successful reception. He hopes to have some reports also from England on these transmissions. He is working on 100 meters or near it most of the time, as he says this is "the only interesting wave length left." M. Menars can be reached by mail at Le Blancat, Ariens (Basses-Pyrenees), France.

In the morning of Nov. 13, 9CJC (Webster Groves, Mo., owned by C. Mosby, worked New Zealand and Australian amateurs. Z-4AK was worked at 4:15 a. m., Z-4AA at 5:40 a. m., Z-4AG at 5:40 a. m., 2AC at 6:30 a. m. and A-2CM at 7:30 a. m. All of these stations are within a radius of five meters on either side of 85 meters. 9CJC is a member of the Radio Transmitters' Association.

M. Pierre Louis (8BF) working on 44 meters has been received in both Philadelphia, Pa., and in Fall River, Mass., "phones on the table" with one detector tube and one stage of audio-frequency amplification. He was using an untuned antenna about 570 feet long.

HARTFORD, Conn.—Back from the Arctic only two months, Capt. Donald B. MacMillan is already planning for another trip north, according to an announcement made during his recent visit to the American Radio Relay League headquarters in this city.

Next summer the little schooner Bowdoin" will again head into the Arctic. This time for the purpose of locating a site for a permanent magnetic station in order that observations made by Richard Goddard of the Carnegie Institute on the last expedition may be continued over a period of two years. The following summer Capt. MacMillan will install the station permanently.

This observatory will be situated in the vicinity of 54 degrees north latitude, he said, and would undoubtedly be equipped with apparatus for measuring on photographic paper variations in the magnetic needle, which is believed to be swinging westward.

He explained that the advantage of having this station located in the proximity of the magnetic North Pole was due to the fact that at the nearer one goes to the pole the more pronounced are the deflections of the needle as determined by recording apparatus. Variations of only one or two degrees at the equator show a swing of from 15 to 20 points in the magnetic.

The study of the compass needle, he said, would be accompanied by further investigation of the aurora, and might even lead to an attempt to measure the height of the aurora with the assistance of radio and motion picture cameras.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—A box of oranges, direct from the Florida groves, arrived here today for R. S. Morris, operator of amateur radio station 410, as a reward for being the first amateur in the fourth radio district to communicate with an English operator. Morris has "worked" three British stations on seven different occasions. The oranges were offered by W. J. Lee of Winter Park, Fla.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 29.—There is a new amateur station on the air, 1MK, American Radio Relay League Headquarters. The station was installed by F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the A. R. R. L., following the urgent request of amateurs in various parts of the country. 1MK is equipped with four 5-watt tubes. The farthest two-way communication was with an amateur in Texas.

FOREIGN RADIO NEWS

ON NOV. 6 Edouard Branly, inventor of the famous Branly coherer, that all-important instrument in the early transchannel wireless experiments of Senator Marconi, was tendered a banquet at the Hotel Lutetia, Paris, by the Radio Club of France in honor of his eightieth birthday on Oct. 22.

From morning till night, practically all his life, M. Branly has combined his work of instructor in physics at the Catholic Institute of Paris with a deep research and investigation, which was crowned with its greatest success when in 1890 he produced the famous "Branly tube"—an instrument for the reception of Hertzian waves at a greater distance than had theretofore been possible. Practically the only aid that Mr. Branly has had financially has been a Government subsidy of 20,000 francs voted in 1921 for the furtherance of his work.

In Sweden the "Radiotjanst" has been given a concession by the Government for radio broadcasting during the next two years. Radio receiving sets will be taxed 12 crowns, the amount being split between the Telegraph Co. and the broadcasting organization. Loud speakers are taxed extra when used in public places or for advertising. Present plans provide for stations in Stockholm, Gothenburg, Malme, Sundsval and Boden, the first and last of which will be ready for the first of the year.

The Norwegian Telegraph Co. is also planning to broadcast, starting in December. A company capitalized at 150,000 crowns will handle the broadcasting with 1½ KW sets. Receiving will be taxed at 10 crowns per set, and, as there are supposed to be 10,000 amateurs in the country, the income is practically assured.

German exports of radio apparatus have grown considerably during the past three years and for the first half of 1924 totaled 520 metric tons, nine tons of which came to the United States. On the other hand the United States exported 496 tons in the same period and sent only one ton to Germany, where there is an embargo on radio imports, Germany appears to be our strongest competitor in radio apparatus, and as her exports in the past three years have more than quadrupled, American manufacturers may have to speed up.

The Breslau broadcasting station has established a loud-ticking metronome in its station. This is operated for some time before the regular program is sent. This enables listeners to distinguish clearly the loudness of the signals and permits a sharp tuning-in, after which news or concerts are broadcast.

WALL STREET SEES BIG FUTURE IN RADIO

Capitalists Are Rushing to Invest in Business Promotion of New Science.

The interest of Wall street and some of its most conservative houses in the rapidly growing radio industry is taken by those engaged in the industry as a most favorable indication of its future.

Capital has ceased to consider radio as a toy that is having its popular day. It is now being taken seriously in even the most conservative and exclusive financial circles as the most remarkable development of an industry since the advent of the automobile and as such is attracting real sound capital that can have but one effect on radio in general—stability, quantity production of quality apparatus at lower prices and the interest of those whose financial support is responsible for the development of every industry of the world.

The head of one of New York's most conservative banking houses, in a statement issued to the press, is enthusiastic in his belief that the present era of the industry is only the foundation of a far greater future.

"Less than three years ago," he said "radio," was considered by many to be at the cross roads. One led to the future that comes to a toy which has its popular day and then passes on into oblivion to make way for a new novelty. The other road presented a picture of remarkable development and the creation of a stabilized nation-wide industry.

The prospective finances of the new industry was in doubt as to which road it was destined to take. The conservatives of the country just marked time waiting for a more positive indication.

That indication has come, according to the interviewed, who said "The future of radio is bounded by possibilities that for the present can be only dreamed. It is now playing a most important part in the education, entertainment, commerce and industry of the world. And even now in its great development this is only the beginning.

"In its earliest days the manufacture of radio equipment had to a large degree been in the hands of mushroom groups; no standardization, few scruples about producing worthy apparatus and haphazard distribution by manufacturers with little knowledge of the requirements of the industry or the ability to fill them. The market was glutted with clap-trap apparatus, manufactured by fly by nights under impossible promises of performance and in most cases incapable of rendering any other, result than that of dissatisfying some one with the whole business who in turn dissatisfied many others, all of which greatly retarded the advance of radio's popularity with the public.

"That period is past now. Very few of the irresponsible manufacturers have been able to stand up solvently before the growth and methods of the responsible manufacturers and the path of radio's advance is well strewn with many well-deserved failures.

"The stabilization of radio has made it a most attractive field for the investment of large capital. Hard-headed capitalists see in it attractive returns in the future, with manufacturing on the large scale that is now possible and the ready absorption of all reliable apparatus by an ever-growing market. Under up-to-date factory methods, economies make it possible to turn out goods better in quality and at more attractive prices to the buyer. This in turn naturally stimulates consumption of radio apparatus and parts, resulting in benefit to both the manufacturers, the dealer and the buyer.

"Another important result of the stabilization of radio is the entry into the radio manufacturing field of men best qualified to produce on a large scale. Men who held aloof while shoddy equipment was the rule now see a field for their best endeavor. The midnight lamp is burning in the laboratory at many a point where experts are giving the best that is in them for the advancement of radio art."

"One interesting case of this kind is that of Joseph W. Jones, known throughout the world for his successful inventions and manufacturing methods. Mr. Jones patented the first speedometer, taximeter, the method now used for making all disc phonograph records and more than 300 other inventions. The radio industry has reached a point that has made it attractive to him just as it will attract many others who have successfully built other industries.

Mr. Jones as head of the Joseph W. Jones Radio Co., has come into the radio industry with all of the impetus of a man well convinced. His plans have already materialized into a large manufacturing plant and world-wide organization for the distribution of his products.

"There are many other Jones' that will come into the radio industry. Sound capital will get behind them, their proven ability in other industries will be applied to that of radio, all of which will tend to bring the great new industry to even a greater degree of stability and use to the great radio public.

LIFE OF VACUUM TUBES DEPENDS ON CARE IN USE

The life of any radio tube is governed by the use it receives in the hands of the operator. In the old type tubes the life of a tube was ended when the filament burned out, but with present day tubes the life may be terminated either by the filament burning out or a decrease in the electronic life of the tube. Now the burning out of a tube may be caused by excessive filament current or by a short circuit with the B battery, or it may naturally burn out of its own accord.

The decrease in electronic emission in a tube is caused by excessive filament voltage, or excessive B battery voltage. The majority of operators of receiving sets can prolong the life of their tubes by burning the filaments low as possible and by keeping the B battery to 90 volts or less.

Tubes of the 200 type do not have any decrease in electronic emission. The 201A and 301A type tubes are constructed with filaments coated with thorium. This is a substance which is an aid to the electron emission in the tube. This thorium coating can be destroyed by too much filament voltage or excessive B battery voltage. By all means burn the filaments of these tubes as dimly as possible without impairing the reception.

A neat piece of apparatus designed for those who like the three-circuit regenerative hook-up is the Coast coil manufactured by the Foote Radio Corporation, and now for the first time entering the St. Louis market. Primary, secondary and tickler are combined in a very compact unit to produce the effect of a fixed primary coil with two rotors inside of it. The difference between this and other two-rotor units is that in the Coast coil the rotors work inside of each other, both being inside the primary coil. The secondary is wrapped on a small rotor ball and the tickler is on a cylindrical form. There are convenient mountings with small binding posts.

The Foote Corporation also is putting out a "fixable" crystal detector in which pressure on the crystal is regulated by a small button screw. It also has crystal mountings in which crystals of three different kinds are set in one cup so that they may be used interchangeably.

Another new offering is the Pratt tube, one distinguishing feature of which is that it has two plates and two grids. The manufacturers say this makes for quieter operation and allround efficiency. This tube fits in an ordinary socket with connections made in the usual way. It sells at a higher price than the Radio Corporation tubes. This tube requires a six-volt filament battery.

Loud Speakers and Hecklers.

In the course of the recent electoral campaign in England organized bands of Communists appeared at most of the Conservative and Liberal meetings, and interfered with the speaking by counting in unison from 1 to 10 at different times, with loud voices, thus drowning out the voices of the candidates. The candidates did not give up the fight, but resorted to the use of microphones and loud speakers. When the heckling began the loud speakers were turned on, and the booming voices of the speakers drowned out all the noise the Communists could make.

For Low Voltage.

All circuit connections should be soldered. Terminal connections should be tight and free from corrosion. A worn-out socket or switch, producing dim and flickering lights, should be replaced by material of ample capacity and rugged construction. If a cartridge fuse is used, avoid a poor contact by keeping clips and ferrules free from corrosion.

Radiograms.

The National Museum in Washington is engaged in assembling a historical collection of radio devices which will place on permanent record a vivid exhibition of this rapidly expanding art of communication.

It is estimated that there are now in use in the United States between 3,500,000 and 5,000,000 tube this country.

Amplification and Regeneration.

It is much better to add a stage of audio-frequency amplification to a set than to have to use regeneration to the extent that the set howls. Such high regeneration not only makes the program unpleasant to hear, but also causes considerable radiation, which interferes with other sets in the neighborhood.

Battery Briefs.

Just a few precautions must be taken in order to prevent trouble. Here are some of them:

Never add sulphuric acid to a battery above the tops of the plates.

Place a glass tray under the battery to catch bubbling electrolyte.

Charge the battery to its capacity before putting it away for any time.

See that the voltage of the charging device is higher than that of the battery.

The charging rate in amperes is indicated on the battery plate. Never exceed this rate.

Always keep the battery solution, as this does not evaporate and need not be replenished.

Never allow any kind of water other than the chemically pure variety to be put in the battery.

Place the battery on frequent charge, rather than allowing it to go near the danger point of discharge.

Never draw excessive current or charge at too high a rate, as this will cause the plates to become distorted and will ruin the battery.

For the Notebook.

Aerials do not attract lightning.

Test all connections regularly for looseness or breaks.

A scratchy noise is sometimes due to corrosion in the joints.

An indoor aerial and a crystal detector do not go well together.

When Using Loop Antenna.

To get good results out of a loop antenna, a set should be used that is designed especially for this purpose. Such a receiver contains from one to three or more stages of radio frequency amplification. For loud-speaker operation, then, at least four or five tubes should be used, unless the receiver is of the reflex variety in which the tubes do double duty.

WOULD STANDARDIZE RADIO EQUIPMENT

Important Practical Suggestions on Dials, Verniers and Rheostats at New York Meeting.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Radio problems affecting the public as well as radio manufacturers and distributers formed the basis of the discussions at the semiannual meeting of the Radio Section of the A. M. E. S. (Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies), held at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York. The leading scientific, manufacturing and electrical interests of the country were represented at the gathering. Important questions involving standardization of radio apparatus, and the problem of interference between broadcast stations were among the subjects considered, according to a report issued by E. B. Mallory, chairman of the Radio Section. Mallory's address dwelt upon the phenomenal growth of the radio industry, which, he declared, already had surpassed the mark of every prediction.

Important recommendations were made at the meeting for standardization, both in nomenclature and apparatus. The general use of frequency rather than wave length to describe the assignments of broadcasting stations was urged by the Transmitting and Receiving Set Committee. Where tuning-dial markings involved frequency or wave-length values, the committee held, frequency markings only should be used. Other recommendations by this committee were:

"That the controls on receiving sets shall be so arranged that clockwise rotation of rheostat controls shall give increase of voltage on tubes or increase of volume on volume control.

"That scale markings for filament control be divided 0 to 10, with the word OFF shown separately.

"That the standard for tuning controls shall be that dial markings shall increase with clockwise rotation and that in the case of vernier controls the actuating knob shall turn in the same direction as the index."

Steps to be taken towards the elimination of fraudulent or misleading advertising of radio apparatus and supplies were discussed at the meeting and reports were read from the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World outlining the character of campaign necessary to accomplish these ends.

Radio No Longer Seasonal.

As a result of the informative campaign conducted by the radio section of the A. M. E. S. and the splendid educational work by the many newspapers and other publications familiarizing the general public with technical as well as industrial developments, both in the radio industry and in the broadcasting art, radio had become an all-year-round industry, it was generally conceded at the meeting. Measures were taken to continue this work by the radio section, with publications to be issued from time to time reflecting the scientific, technical and industrial progress of the art.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, reporting for the Ship and Shore Committee of the radio section of the A. M. E. S., declared that efforts to reduce the interference with broadcast reception arising from code stations afloat and ashore had been measurably successful. During 1924, he pointed out, there had been an increased use of continuous wave transmitters and vacuum receiving apparatus on ships

In the RADIO TESTING LABORATORY

The testing this week has been confined to the five-tube Melco Supreme set. The hook-up is two stages of radio frequency, detector and two stages of audio. Specially constructed coupler and radio transformer coils are used. It is a remarkably smooth-working receiver wit hgreat range and volume. In fact, when worked on only one stage of audio it is loud enough for all home requirements, even on distant stations. The second stage audio tube is on a filament control jack and works only when the plug is inserted.

The best indication of performance is that the writer, after having had only two evenings' practice at tuning this set, brought in Aberdeen, Scotland, and Newcastle, England. This was on Tuesday night, the second night of the international tests, and the first night in international radio week that British stations were on the air. But for fear of disturbing the adjustment it would have been possible, at least in the case of the Newcastle reception to have brought up the amplification to loud-speaker volume. One more accustomed to the operation of the set could have done this easily.

On Thursday night, again using the Melco Supreme, the writer heard speech and music from 2LO, London, 5WA, Cardiff, Wales and 5SC Glasgow.

As to the general results with this set, it may be said that it is very smooth in operation, as easy to tune as any three-control set can be, extremely selective and a good distance getter.

The replacement of the older spark equipment not only lessened interference, but increased the capability of the ships for handling ship-to-shore wireless traffic.

"The trend towards continuous wave operation," his report continued, "is also evidenced in the marine service shore station. This has been particularly stimulated by the interference caused by such stations with broadcast reception and the resulting dissatisfaction to large groups of broadcast listeners. Congestion of marine traffic has been considerably relieved by the use of the longer wave lengths (1578 to 2499 meters, with continuous wave operation from tube or arc transmitters. Not only is traffic thus taken off the crowded shorter wave lengths, but the mode of transmission is such as to induce interference in the marine service and neighboring broadcast stations.

"The exact ship and short station wave lengths on the East and West coasts of the United States are still under consideration, it being planned to work out a system of staggered wave lengths for the short stations such that interference between them and the ships will be largely avoided, and also to establish wave-length bands for ship spark operation, and other bands for ship continuous wave operation exclusively."

The Transportation Committee of the radio section made a series of recommendations covering standardized terminology and classifications for radio products at present unclassified for rail transportation.

HOW WAVES START ON AIR JOURNEY

Operator Behind the Scenes and What He Does to Relay and Speed the Mysterious Force.

When you sit back in your chair and listen to Fort Wood, Troy, N. Y.; Honolulu, or Auckland, New Zealand, according to the range of your set, you never give a thought to what is going on behind the scenes in the far-away broadcast station. Whether it be in St. Louis, Chicago or Tokio the operating technique is much the same the world over.

The operator enters the operating room. He had 15 minutes before the station is scheduled to go on the air. He carefully inspects the apparatus and the aerial and ground connections. Going to the power panel, he throws in the starter switch, which automatically starts the motor generator. A low purr is heard from the generator as the meters on the power panel indicate that the power is on.

As the moment to start broadcasting draws near, the operator sits down at his desk and presses a button on the switch input amplifier panel, which flashes a light on the studio signal telephone, indicating to the announcer in the studio that everything is set to go.

The operator throws the switch on the amplifier panel and the radio transmitter is in operation.

Another button on the amplifier panel is pushed and the big red "bull's-eye" on the studio signal telephone lights up to indicate that the microphone is connected and the station is on the air.

Making the Voice Louder.

The announcer's voice is broadcast and is conveyed by the microphone into the speech input amplifier, where it is greatly amplified, and passed on to the transmitter. Here the modulator tubes pass on the radio voice impulse to the transmitting tubes, where the radio current is made, and from there it goes to the transmitting antenna and then out into the air.

The loud speaker on the operator's desk enables him to listen in to the music in the studio or the radio voice in the transmitter. Connected to the receiving antenna, the receiving set enables the operator to listen in for messages coming from the outside.

When programs are to be broadcast from distant studios or from theaters, churches, etc., wire connections with those points are effected by means of a switchboard in the operating room. Ordinary telephone wires are employed to bring the broadcasting voices and music into the transmitter, the process in the operating room in this case being practically the same as when the broadcasting is being done from the adjoining studio. The only difference is that the sounds to be broadcast have to travel over a greater length of wire when coming from an outside source.

Finnish Expert Killed.

A noted Finnish scientist, Sumelo, was killed in Helsingfors a few days ago by an electrical current he was using on a new radio apparatus of his own construction. His sister was assisting him at the time and was also killed by the high voltage used. Death was instantaneous in both cases.

Longevity of Tubes.

To prolong the life of a tube turn them as dimly as possible. Excessive filament current or high plate voltage has the property of destroying the coating of the filament.

ST. LOUISANS PICK UP BRITISH BROADCASTING

Wide Range in Character of Sets Which Deliver the Goods in International Tests.

That this year's international broadcasting tests will be more successful than last year's would seem to be assured in view of the reports that have already been received by the Post-Dispatch on the reception of voice and music from the British and Continental stations.

International radio week began last Monday night and will end tonight. Starting with the Continental stations Monday night, those stations and the British stations have attempted to reach America on alternate nights.

From reports received thus far it would seem that the British stations have been more successful in getting their broadcasting over, though a few persons have written that they heard a German station Monday night.

The experiences of St. Louisans who heard the foreign broadcasts have angles of considerable interest to radio fans. Some of the finely balanced ready-made sets are remarkable results and it is equally true that some smaller homemade sets rose to the occasion in wonderful style.

On Tuesday night Edgar M. Jennings, of 4492 Westminster place, working a Garod special neutrodyne, picked up 5NO, Newcastle, England, and put it on the loud speaker. He reported that the volume was so great that several persons in the room sang "Donna e Mobile" in unison with the speaker without drowning out the music.

W. H. James of 4270A Lee avenue, operating a five-tube Melco Supreme, heard piano music from 2BD Aberdeen, Scotland, and 5NO, Newcastle, with orchestra playing "Eighteenth" music. This was picked up with the headphones on the second audio stage. The volume no doubt could have been greatly increased but for fear of disturbing the adjustments. This reception was remarkably clear and strong. It was only the third time James had operated this set on Thursday night with the 5SC he heard London, Cardiff and Glasgow.

Frank G. Goodall of 68 Marshall place, Webster Groves, heard piano music from Aberdeen on an eight-tube home-made superheterodyne. He reports that with the set and loudspeaker on the first floor the music could be heard clearly all over the second floor.

W. J. Johns, of 6185 Simpson avenue, on a two-tube Harkness Reflex set and even more remarkable performance was reported by A. J. Smith, of 1926A Gravois avenue, who picked up piano music from Aberdeen on two-tube regenerative set using a Peerless coil for tuning inductance.

Arthur J. Burton, of Sedalia, Mo., reported that on Tuesday night he heard Aberdeen on a home-made two-tube set.

From other large cities and from towns in the St. Louis territory came reports of the reception of Newcastle and Aberdeen broadcasting on the first night of the [illegible] broadcasting.

ST. LOUISANS PICK UP BRITISH BROADCASTING

Wide Range in Character of Stations Which Deliver the Goods in International Tests.

SIXTY-FOUR B STATIONS NOW IN OPERATION

Fourteen Cities Are to Have an Added Number of Broadcasters in Near Future.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Although the general plan of alloting new Class B wave lengths is progressing favorably, and supervisors in Seattle and Baltimore have reported the allocations made as satisfactory, radio attaches of the Department of Commerce are still perplexed by the growing number of Class B applications and the available channels for this type of broadcasting station.

The licensing of station WREO of the Reo Motor Car Co. at Lansing, Mich., last week brings the total B stations operating to 64. Sixteen existing stations in Classes A and C are excepting to transfer to Class B, and 17 other new stations are under construction or their erection is proposed. This would make 97 Class B stations, for which there are now available less than 60 channels, including the duplication of 10 channels on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is seen that although the conference laid out a program of wave-length allocation, the application of it is difficult indeed.

Progress and co-operation, however, are reported from the Seventh District, which includes the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, where Supervisor O. R. Redfern, at Seattle, indicates an amicable acceptance of the three major wave lengths assigned tentatively. Seattle will have the 405-meter channel, Portland 508 meters and Pullman, Wash., 349. The allocation provides a separate channel for each of the three Class B stations in that district. In some of the districts where there is congestion, negotiations with the station owners is less promising. In the first, or New England area, for example, Boston is appealing for two exclusive channels, and about 3000 telegrams have been received by Secretary Hoover, claiming that Boston needs two separate wave lengths. The two Boston stations cannot be considered alone by the Radio Supervisor, simply because there are Class B stations in South Dartmouth, Springfield, Hartford and two in Providence, a total of seven B stations in the district, whereas, he has a maximum number of separate wave lengths of four. Before the conference this district had but two B channels, and if four are assigned, as is now planned, it is difficult to see how Boston could justly claim two of them.

Another district difficult to satisfy is the Second, which includes New York City and its environs, where 11 B stations are situated. Two more are proposed in New York, one for the Freed Eisemann Co., the other a prominent hotel. Today the Second District has five wave lengths, and may get as many as six, but the distribution on a basis of equality and efficient service is a problem which is stumping the supervisor as well as the department. Chicago has nearly as many Class B stations as New York, and a satisfactory distribution there, with the necessary time splitting, is causing delays.

On the Pacific Coast fewer difficulties are arising. The Northwest is satisfied and reports of co-operation from broadcasters in the Southwest are expected very soon at radio headquarters in Washington.

Of the 14 cities planning or constructing new Class B stations, there are informal bids from New York and Chicago for two such stations; also two from Nashville, Tenn., and one each from Hartford, Tucson, Hot Springs, Denver, Atlantic City, Houston, New Orleans, Beaumont, Bay City, Mich.; Bristow, Ok., and Fayetteville, Ark., a total of 17. Rumors indicate still other stations are contemplated.

Eight Class A stations operating in East Lansing, Pittsburg, Boston, Providence, Beloit, Wis.; Auburn, Ala.; Elgin, Ill., and Mooseheart, Ill., are planning to request transfers to a Class B status. Eight of the Class C stations will probably apply for transfers to Class B wave lengths as follows: Providence, Houston, Madison, Columbus, South Bend, South Dartmouth, Northfield, Minn., and Norman, Ok.

Under the old plan, which, of course, is still in operation, out of 60 Class B stations, 36 had to divide time on wave lengths, and it is now believed that about 60 of the present and proposed stations will have to divide time or share wave lengths when the new distribution becomes effective. This, however, will be arranged so as to give each station its proportionate share of time and the fans the best possible service and programs.

DRILLING GLASS PANELS SAFELY AND EASILY

A piece of drill rod about 3-32 inch square is sharpened with a file to form a pyramid, like the end of a crowbar, and then it is hardened by means of heating to redness and plunging into water. This is used exactly as a drill, and the only reason that I specify 3-32 inch is that if larger size is used it may develop that a smaller diameter hole is required, and difficulties will arise. However, different sizes of the rod would come in handy, but are not essential.

A center punch is required to allow the drill to get a start. A sharp rap will make a small nick at the point where drilling is required, and with the aid of turpentine as a lubricant, a clean hole should result, using a moderate pressure. The panel should never be drilled other than in a horizontal position, and a piece of straight wood should be placed under the panel.

The using of the turpentine is more important than may be supposed. After the hole is finished it may be enlarged by hardening ordinary twist drills and using. A good method of preventing possible cracking in enlarging would be to use the larger drill half-way, turning the panel on the other side and starting from there until the centers meet.

To Compute Antenna Wave Length.

The natural wave length of an antenna can be calculated to an approximate degree by adding the length of the antenna, length of the lead-in and length of the ground wire, then multiplying the total length of all by 1½. For example, the antenna is 100 feet long, lead-in 30 feet and ground wire 20 feet, making a total of 150 feet. Multiplying the 150 feet by 1½, the result is 225, the approximate natural period or fundamental wave length of the antenna.

Poland to Broadcast.

A company with French backing is being organized in Poland to install at least one broadcasting station and possibly more. It is hoped to interest the Poles in local broadcasting, besides giving market and foreign exchange news. From present reports, it seems that the European banks find these foreign exchange bulletins and financial news the most valuable work the radio companies are doing.

DE FOREST RADIO COMPANY
Jersey City, N. J.

Women find it so simple
The De Forest D-12 is so easy to work that women like to listen in while they do their sewing or housework. Just get the program from your newspaper and find on the dials the station you want to hear. You don't have to get up to change a record after each selection. It plays right along without attention after one setting.

A clear, natural tone beyond belief
The thing most frequently commented upon by those familiar with the customary characteristics of other radio sets, when they first hear the De Forest, is its unmatched purity of tone and the absence of roaring or grating noises to mar one's enjoyment after the novelty has worn off. There is an almost unbelievable fidelity of reproduction of the actual original when once the instrument has been properly tuned in.

Four tubes give seven-tube power and efficiency
When we show you this set we will explain to you how its four tubes do the work of seven at the cost of only four. It doesn't use up battery money, and it saves in the replacement expense for tubes.

Move it where you will without any bother
You can easily take the De Forest D-12 from room to room. No straggling wires to disconnect and reconnect.

No aerial—no ground wire
De Forest Radiophones have no cumbersome outside batteries—no outside aerials or ground wires. The loud speaker is built into the instrument cabinet, which looks as neat as a fine phonograph. The simple loop aerial the size of a picture frame gives remarkable station-to-station selectivity.

You can have complete confidence in it
The dealers who sell De Forest Radiophones are confident of their ability to give constant satisfactory service. They know what it has done, and can do.

The greatest name in radio
Dr. Lee De Forest himself, whose inventions make modern radio possible, is an important factor in the De Forest Radio Company. The D-12 reflects his inspired yet intensely practical scientific genius.

Wealthy Widow Convicted on Weird Evidence of Having Plotted Two Murders

MEETING BETWEEN MRS. MARY EGGLESTON AND POLICE INFORMERS IN CELLAR AT NIGHT PROOF WHICH CONVINCED JURY

W. C. POOL

The second Mrs. Eggleston's home at Larned where she is alleged to have plotted two murders.

Kansas Woman Found Guilty on Their Story That She Hired Them for $200 to Poison or Shoot David Ely, Her 69-Year-Old Lover and Mrs. Laura Eggleston, Her Deceased Husband's Divorced Wife — But She Claims She Was Victim of a Blackmail Plot and That County Authorities Went Beyond Law in Order to Make a Case Against Her.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LARNED, Kan., Nov. 29.

"GENTLEMEN of the jury," said the County Prosecutor, "this was a cold-blooded, fiendish attempt to murder innocent persons, conceived by the defendant and thwarted only by prompt interference of the law when one of her intended accomplices gave the plot away."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said counsel for the defense, "the poor widow you see before you is the victim of an outrageous conspiracy on the part of the County Attorney and the chief witnesses for the State. It is impossible that this defendant could or would have planned the crimes as charged."

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

"Mary K. Eggleston," said the Judge, "you are to serve not less than five and not more than 25 years at the Women's State Reformatory."

* * * * * *

As the prosecution presented it:

There were several reasons why Mary K. Eggleston wanted to kill the two intended victims—Mrs. Laura Eggleston and David A. Ely.

Mary K. is the second Mrs. Eggleston. She married old Edwin T. Eggleston after Laura Eggleston divorced him. Larned people had sympathized with the first Mrs. Eggleston during the years of her married life with Ed, who was not much of a man and a drunkard. When she sued for divorce folks took her side. Everybody who amounted to anything in Larned said that she ought to have received more than a house in town and $40 a month alimony.

"Ed will take up with some no-account woman," predicted the townspeople, "and she will get the most of his money, while poor Laura, who had to put up with him for years and years only has the house and $100 a month."

When Eggleston went to Fort Smith, Ark., and returned with a new wife, Larned turned its thumbs down on the bride without giving her a chance. All the gossips knew of her was that she had been Mary K. Starne, a widow, and that she had two sons. They did not bother to learn much else. There were sniffs when Ed established her in a better house than Laura Eggleston occupied, and the best people decided to leave the second Mrs. Eggleston severely alone.

Then He Died, Leaving $100,000

Ed Eggleston died, leaving his estate, estimated by town gossip at more than $100,000, to his widow. Under the terms of the divorce agreement, the first Mrs. Eggleston's alimony was secured by a lien on two business buildings belonging to the Eggleston estate. Consequently, the second Mrs. Eggleston was left with the responsibility upon her to pay the first Mrs. Eggleston the $100 a month.

Town sentiment made her feel that her debt was more than that. The first Mrs. Eggleston lived on one street and the second Mrs. Eggleston on another, about three blocks apart. Their years in this little town never permitted them to get away from the story, and its staleness only made it uglier. Friends and enemies carried tales from one woman to the other. If the second Mrs. Eggleston bought a new hat, the first Mrs. Eggleston's friends told her what a shame it was that this interloper had come into Ed's money. "You know, dear, by rights it is yours," they told her.

The first Mrs. Eggleston's home at Larned to which women gossips brought many tales of the second Mrs. Eggleston.

Thus the first Mrs. Eggleston was a continual reproach to the second. Reason enough for hatred! Moreover, there was the alimony and the house. Would not a mercenary woman weigh desperate chances to be rid of one who was worse than an enemy and to gain $1200 a year?

Mark, now, the motive for doing away with David Ely. He was her suitor. Although he is 69 years old now and was not much younger when he first began "sparking" the widow Eggleston, she accepted his attentions gladly. Living alone in the house that was a little better than the first Mrs. Eggleston's house; doing without the friends who cheered Laura Eggleston's loneliness, Mary K. Eggleston was even anxious for company.

Ely sympathized with her. He carried tales of the first Mrs. Eggleston to her, kept her posted on the odd battle between them, took her part vehemently. She was 55 years old, but their comradeship developed into what Larned called a love affair. It even gave rise to a certain scandal-mongering—it at least supplied the first Mrs. Eggleston's friends with ammunition. Had they realized how much Mrs. Mary K. Eggleston trusted Dave Ely, they would have been more scandalized. She loaned him $6000 on no apparent security.

The second Mrs. Eggleston grew a little proud and boastful of her lover. She showed him off at church. No man had come to call on the first Mrs. Eggleston. Her friends said, though, that if Laura had the money which was hers by right it would be she and not Mary K. who could show off a man at church. Nevertheless, Mary K.'s capture of a suitor was a distinct victory, and she gloried in it.

Her glee was, alas, short-lived. Into Larned one day came a Mrs. Emma Bolen, who filed suit for breach of promise against Dave Ely. She alleged that Ely had made love to her back in Missouri, and she asked $10,000 damages.

Word of the suit was only six minutes traveling from the courthouse to the first Mrs. Eggleston, and the second Mrs. Eggleston was not much longer in learning of her lover's past. It was a disgrace, Mrs. Mary K. felt, and it would be so construed by her enemies. They would gloat. They did gloat. Mrs. Bolen produced letter after letter in court, describing Ely's emotions. The jury gave her $4000 damages.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Mary Eggleston had been pressing him for payment of the $6000 he owed her. He put her off with the word that he had made a will in her favor, leaving her all his property.

Was this not sufficient motive? She could take revenge for his making her ridiculous and she could collect at least part of her $6000 in one stroke.

Here, then, was a woman with sufficient motives for murder. How was she to plan the crimes? Being of a timid, retiring sort, she naturally would seek an agent, rather than execute her designs herself.

Plans to Do Away With Rival

Will Pool was the agent she selected. He was her yard man. She believed that he would do almost anything for money. She possessed no very high opinion of his mentality, and her judgment of him made him all the more logical as a tool. But she must play her hand carefully.

"Will," she said, one day when he was raking leaves, "I'm going off for a visit. I've hired a foreigner from Kansas City to come down here and kill Dave and Laura."

"You're jokin', ain't you, Miz Eggleston? Aw"——

"No, I'm not, either, Will."

It took some time for this to sink into Pool's mind. He was still thinking about his employer's words when she returned. Laura and Dave had not been killed.

"I'm glad I didn't have them killed," said Mrs. Eggleston. "Dave has made a will leaving me all his property."

A few days later she spoke to Pool on the front porch.

"How would you like to do the work for me, Will?"

"What work?"

"Killing Laura and Dave."

"Aw—w—you're just talkin'. You don't want to kill nobody."

"I'll pay you $300 and make you a present of $200 and besides I'll buy you a Ford worth $200. I know where I can get a good Ford for $200. Wouldn't you like a car to run around in?"

"Yes. But I wouldn't kill nobody."

"Well—you just think it over."

Pool looked at the woman and did not like the expression in her eyes. They sort of glittered at him from behind her spectacles, he said, later.

"I reckon," he reflected, "I ought to tell Mrs. Laura."

So Pool trotted over to the first Mrs. Eggleston's house with a story on the second Mrs. Eggleston that he knew for a pippin, the best story anyone had ever carried to the first Mrs. Eggleston.

"Mary K. is talking about killin' you and Mr. Dave," said Pool. "She offered me $500 and a Ford to do it."

The first Mrs. Eggleston advised him to take his story to County Attorney Blaine Roberts. And thus it came about that Pool shuffled into the courthouse with the report.

Roberts took the matter seriously. After consulting with Sheriff Zook he decided to employ a detective to work with Pool as an investigator. R. C. Burgess of Hutchinson was detailed to the case, and instructed to carry out a carefully arranged plan to trap Mrs. Eggleston.

The Alleged Murder Contract

Pool went back to Mrs. Eggleston with a contract. It read:

"I, W. C. Pool, party of the first part, agree to do a certain job of work for Mrs. Mary K. Eggleston, party of the second part, who agrees to pay the sum of $200. Signed, W. C. Pool."

Mrs. Eggleston, however, was too canny to be caught so easily. She said she preferred to sign a fictitious name, and affixed the signature, "J. W. Jones," to the contract. This did not satisfy the County Attorney, who sent Pool back the same day, April 7, with a second contract.

Under instructions, Pool told her: "I've got a helper now and I want to sign a different contract. I want to use a fictitious name, too. I'll be known as John Kelly, my helper as Bud Brown and you as J. W. Jones." Mrs. Eggleston replied that was agreeable, and she signed the contract, but once more used the name J. W. Jones.

The authorities then decided it was about time to spring the trap. Although they did not know it then, Mrs. Eggleston had sent Dave Ely to a drug store for a quantity of strychnine, saying that she wished to kill an old dog on the place.

"Where is your partner?" she queried, impatiently, when Pool came the next day.

"He had to go out West, but he'll be back tomorrow."

"Well, bring him out tomorrow night."

So the meeting was arranged. Pool and Burgess, the detective, who acted the part of Bud Brown, a gunman, went out to Mrs. Eggleston's home about 8:30 o'clock the evening of April 9. They carried with them two empty bottles, Mrs. Eggleston having hinted to Pool that she intended them to use poisoned wine.

She would not admit them at the back door, telling Pool to take his friend around to the basement door. She went down, candle in hand, to open this door, and the two informers entered.

"My friend here says you've got a job for me," said Burgess, using gruff tones, "but, hell, this job is worth $1000 if it's worth a cent."

The widow came quite close to him and looked into his face, long and searchingly.

"Well," she said, with finality, "$200 is all I can afford to pay."

Burgess turned as if to go.

"Wait," she called out. "I want to talk to you."

She led them into the room and up to a table. On the table were a jug of wine and a bottle of strychnine.

"You know," she said, $200 is more in Larned than a thousand would be in Kansas City. Besides, I only have $280 in the bank, and I owe Mr. Roberts $50 of it. I'll pay you $200, and that is all I have."

Mixing Strychnine With Wine

Burgess produced the empty bottle and Mrs. Eggleston filled it with wine. She then handed the strychnine bottle to Burgess, but he refused to pour in the poison. She took it back, remarking: "You know, Mr. Ely bought this strychnine for me." She did not at once pour the poison into the wine, but walked into another room. As she did so Pool and Burgess shifted position to watch her, but could see only her shadow against the wall, with arms raised and the bottle in silhouette.

When she returned, Burgess asked: "How much did you pour in?"

"About a fourth of it."

"Damn it all, Ely will never drink the wine. That's way too much strychnine. You'll have to get another bottle."

She went upstairs to do this and when she returned the new bottle was partly filled and some poison sifted into it. Burgess then handed the bottle to Pool, who wiped it off and slipped it into his pocket.

"I don't like poison much," Burgess said. "I've always bumped 'em off with a gat."

"I don't want Mr. Ely shot," she protested.

"Well, maybe he won't take the wine."

"He will if you approach him in the right way."

"How?"

"Talk to him about land."

"And oil?"

"Yes! Yes! He's crazy about oil."

"But if he won't drink it I'll have to croak him some other way."

Mrs. Eggleston at this point led "Brown" and "Kelly" upstairs. She left them for a moment and returned with a revolver which had belonged to her late husband. This weapon she handed to Burgess, who placed it

PARIS, Nov. 18.

HOW joyously they will return to prisons in France—those miserable exiles of French Guiana! To have stout, cool walls about them after years of sweltering jungle nights, when they were obliged to choose between suffocation and swarms of insects. To drink good water again instead of spoiled milk and vinegarish wine. To eat prison fare once more and forget the stuff prepared by dirty Arab jailers. To sleep in cells safe from each other!

The Herriot Government has ordered the penal colonies of Guiana abolished. No longer will traitors burst their temples screaming on Ile Diable (The Devil's Island). No more will cutthroats and burglars fight madness in the solitary huts on Ile St. Joseph. To the hundreds who have been driven against the brush on Ile Royale, flailing with machetes to clear endless roads until they staggered and fainted and died the word has come too late. But the living—9700 of them—will leave that hell for the kindlier drudgery of prison shops in France.

The release of these prisoners to penitentiaries where they will sing in happiness that Guiana is safely of the past, is not all the Government will accomplish by its order. Hundreds of liberes (what mockery in that name!) may leave Guiana. Liberes are the wretched men who, having served their terms on the Three Sad Isles, were set free to do as they pleased so long as they did not leave Guiana. Their fate as freemen has been worse than their lot as felons.

At liberty in a tropic pest-hole, without strength to work the grants of land provided by a blindly philanthropic Government, sick and in many cases dying, they joined the rabble on the streets of Cayenne and St. Laurent and St. Jean. Here they were driven to begging and scavenging—a horde so repulsive that world travelers have shunned French Guiana as a plague-spot, and even the French administrators drove their carriages only in the streets from which beggars are barred. Their wailing and whimpering rose with the stench from leprous and vermin-infested bodies in one hideous protest.

A Cursed Spot for Its Victims

In the past liberes have tried to make their way to Paramariboo in Dutch Guiana, or to Trinidad or to Venezuela. Those who did not leave their bones on jungle trails, or who were not eaten by sharks when their boats capsized in the lagoons found no refuge when they staggered into foreign settlements. The black soldiers of Trinidad gathered them up and returned them to Cayenne for the reward of $3 a head. Venezuelans shot them down like curs on the slightest pretext and the Dutch were more humane, but firm. Back to Cayenne they must go to serve more years on Devil's Island for having broken their parole. And so the word libere was a curse word in French Guiana.

Few men have returned from French Guiana to tell of the horrors there. Those who escaped, or who miraculously lived through their term of servitude, have come back with something in them dead. Pity had left them and they long ago had forgotten how to weep.

"No, no, you would not believe," has been their protest when urged for a tale. Fear made them evade and slink away, fear that another Judge would say the dooming word, "Cayenne," as punishment for bitter speech against the Government. French Judges have used "Cayenne" as a threat worse than the threat of death, a threat to make villains blanch. Indeed, the story is told that one prisoner given his choice of the guillotine or Guiana chose the knife.

There had been many protests in former years against the French penal colony system. The famous Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, when he was imprisoned on Ile Diable wrote enough in his journal to indicate some of its atrocities.

The Dreyfus case was the first to draw the attention of the world to the unspeakable cruelties of the French penal colony system. Dreyfus, an officer of Jewish extraction, had been convicted of selling military secrets, but his sympathizers declared he was courtmartialed for political reasons and because he was a Jew, an anto-Semitic wave having struck France about this time.

While the exile was waiting his end on Ile Diable, Emile Zola, renowned novelist, entered the fight to obtain his liberty. In 1898 Zola indited his famous letter, "J'accuse," ("I accuse") to President Faure of France. In this philippic Zola accused the military authorities of unjustly imprisoning Dreyfus and shielding the real culprits. He denounced Dreyfus' incarceration on Ile Diable as an outrage and dared the Government to prosecute him for such bold speech.

He was indicted, twice tried and convicted each time, but between the first and second convictions fled to England. The Dreyfus case shook the Government to its foundations and in 1899 the Waldeck-Rousseau Cabinet passed a bill extending amnesty to all connected with the affair and calling its principal back to France. Dreyfus was permitted to live in retirement, but has never won back to full grace with the military element in France.

Itinerant globe-trotters looking in for a week or so at Cayenne have carried back to England or America enough for a thrilling article in some magazine. The exiles had more than their brutal guards to fear. Desperadoes, petty thieves, political prisoners and maniacs were herded together in one perpetual wretchedness. Tales were told of shambles in the prisoners' barracks, when one faction set upon another with knives; stories were related of murders done under the callous eyes of guards; stories of men turned into beasts by pain flying at each others' throat like human bats in the gloom of the prison houses.

France Aghast at Truth

However, few of these descriptions reached the French public. It was not until Albert Londres, a journalist on the staff of the Petit Parisien, made a trip to Guiana a short while back that the truth came out in France. He traced the whole disgraceful story through its 62 years. Popular indignation aroused, friends brought pressure on Premier Herriot, who promised forthwith that Guiana's penal colonies would be called home.

In the beginning the Guiana venture was regarded as a humanitarian project. The originators of the plan believed that they might give convicts a chance to make men of themselves and colonize a rich possession at the same time. The idea was foredoomed to failure. Convicts do not make good pioneers. Frenchmen cannot acclimate themselves to Guiana. In the first year 1400 convicts perished of disease and cruelty. Since then 42,000 white Frenchmen have been deported to Guiana, and but a few thousand ever returned to France.

At its worst, the deportation was described by a writer as follows:

"Off the western seaboard of France lies the Ile de Re, with its quaint little fishing village, San Martin de Re, at whose water's edge stands a weather-beaten old citadel, now a convict station. In January and July its ponderous iron gates open and emit some half-thousand wretched men. Each has heard the Court of Assizes pronounce sentence that has made the blood chill, the brain whirl, the heart-throb almost stop—'Cayenne!'

"Clad in coarse woolen garb and chained in pairs, like a monster brown snake, this string of humanity creeps between the glistening bayonets of double-ranked soldiers down the long wharf. In lighters, they board the prison ship, and practically all know that the closing of the great gates of the citadel's iron maw has shut them from France forever.

The Horrors of Transportation

"The prisoners are locked in suffocating cells in the hold of the ship. In each cell is a steam pipe which can be turned on if there is undue disturbance below. Live steam from the ship's engines would quickly tame the most obstreperous prisoner.

"On arrival at Cayenne the condemned are classified, and distributed throughout French Guiana. Prisoners in general are spoken of as deportes. Those sentenced to hard labor are called transportes; those sentenced for life are relegues and those on parole are known as liberes.

"If the deporte has been sentenced to a term of less than eight years, he is exiled in Guiana for eight years after he has served his sentence. If he has been sentenced for more than eight years he is exiled for life and becomes a libere after serving his time. Transportes serve a minimum of five years at hard labor and a maximum of twenty. This class of criminals is sent mainly to Kourou, Cayenne and to St. Laurent on the Maroni River. Relegues go mostly to St. Jean and desperate criminals to solitary confinement on the Iles de Salut—Ile Diable, Ile St. Joseph and Ile Royale off the mainland of Guiana proper."

The writer, an Englishman, visited the islands and saw conditions at their worst. He describes:

"Deportes begin in the third and lowest class, mostly at arduous labor; some quarry and break stones, others carry loads, fell trees and construct roads at the different camps; the strongest break and the weakest die. Clearing the bush back of St. Laurent killed off European deportes like flies, so the work had to be given to Madagascan blacks. On promotion to second and first class deportes may become rowers, masons, locksmiths, mechanics, painters, carpenters and gardeners.

Food Insufficient and Poor

"Reveille arouses the sleeping camps each day at five and coffee is served; at 6:30 the deportes form squads and work is assigned each for eight hours of labor. The daily ration consists only of a plate of thin soup, one vegetable, a kilogram of bread and 150 grams of meat.

"The bread is illy cooked, like putty. The soup often is odorous with decay and the meat is condemned bully beef."

In the infirmary the visitor saw: "A large, gray, solemn room lined with tiers of beds. Many were occupied and on one was an invalid suffering apparently from abdominal dropsy. On the floor stood a dirty, dark-green wine bottle containing a repulsive mixture which he told me was milk. . . . This room led to a surgical laboratory where a wretch lay groaning on a crude operating table, while, without anesthetics, a surgeon's assistant carelessly probed an abscess, apparently the result of mastoiditis. . . . It being siesta time the men were confined in a near-by prison, which I entered despite the guard's warning of probable insults.

"Some fifteen men lounged on a low broad bench, some sleeping, others eating, a few working. They were a degenerate lot—derelicts of humanity. . . . . Some boasted of exploits inconceivably repugnant, and one when asked his offense, said laconically, 'I only killed my mother.' One was reading a book. I asked him the title. . . . . It was 'The Stranglers,' setting forth the exploits of famous garroters.

"The quarters of the relegues are distributed over a little plateau. Groups of convicts lounged about or lay sick and incapacitated on the verandas. At night the barred door of each dormitory is locked, and outside paces a guard, revolver in hand. Sometimes under the cover of darkness the inmates settle feuds. Occasionally, to establish leaders, rival gangs fight with cudgels, knives and even paving stones. Some disabled, others dead, the most indomitable are reconciled and form a tyrannical secret society. . . . . Many a poor wretch dreads the night hours, and one suspected of informing may be set upon by an enraged pack. Occasionally murder is committed, in profound silence, and daylight finds a dead or dying convict in the passage-way. Questioning is useless, and few guards will risk life in entering the barracks when smothered cries and cursings warn them of these bloody affrays."

The writer goes on to say that capital punishment is the price of murder if the culprit is caught.

The Tyranny of Negro Guards

"The murderer's comrades must assist at the execution. They are placed near the guillotine, behind them stand the soldiers of the Colonial infantry, ready to fire, a voice cries out: 'All convicts on your knees! Heads bare!' All kneel and take off their caps. A convict must be the executioner, and as a distinctive mark of office has a right to wear a beard and don a black frock coat and receive a reward for each execution; at New Caledonia, sixteen francs and a box of sardines; at Guiana, where the tariff is very high, one hundred francs and a pot of jam."

In addition to the cruelty of the French jailers the deportes of Guiana suffered from having Arab and Madagascan convicts set over them in authority, a practice condemned by all penologists as giving rise to grievous abuses. One visitor to a prison camp wrote:

"The lot of the Arabs was most enviable; they monopolized all situations of trust. One was quartermaster, another chief cook; others worked as carpenters, bootmakers and blacksmiths. They were all fierce, untamed ruffians. One was an Algerian savage six feet high, who went about picking quarrels and striking his fellow convicts on the smallest excuse. This man was considered an artist with the martinet, or French cat-o-nine-tails, and was reputed able to draw blood at the first stroke."

Over the island of St. Joseph are the solitary huts, in which desperate criminals were confined. George Griffiths, an English penologist, who visited one of these "black cells," describes the plight of one hapless inmate:

"Out of the corner of the cell came something in human shape, crouching forward and rubbing its eyes at the unaccustomed light. It had been three years and a half in that horrible hole about three yards long and half as wide.

A Darkness That Is Felt

"I gave him a feast of sunshine and outer air by taking his place for a few minutes. After the first two or three the minutes lengthened into hours. I had absolutely no sense of light. The blackness seemed to come down on me like some solid thing and drive my straining eyes back into my head. It was darkness that could be felt, for I felt it, and the silence was like the silence upper space. When the double doors op again the rays of light seemed to strike eyes like daggers. The criminal whose I had taken had a record of infamy w no printable words could express, and confess I pitied him as he went back that living death of darkness and silence.

THE COME-BACK OF JOHN BURKE—Wilson's Former U. S. Treasurer Whose Partner Broke Him in High Finance in Wall Street Elected to North Dakota Supreme Court

WHEN John Burke was a boy and his father hitched up and drove to town, over in Iowa, and John went along, he was pretty sure to turn up missing when it came time to go home. But his father knew where to look for him. If court was in session at Sigourney he would be in court, listening to the wrangling of the lawyers, looking with awe upon the great man who sat on the bench.

If anybody asked him what he was going to be when he grew up there was no hesitation in his answer. He was going to be a lawyer. He was sure about that. And maybe some day he would be a Judge. He was not certain that he could make it, but he meant to try.

John Burke went far. He won a unique place in the affections of the people of North Dakota. He became a lawyer among them and they sent him to the Legislature and, Democrat though he was, in a rock-ribbed Republican State, they three times elected him Governor and wanted him nominated for President and he did come near being nominated for Vice President.

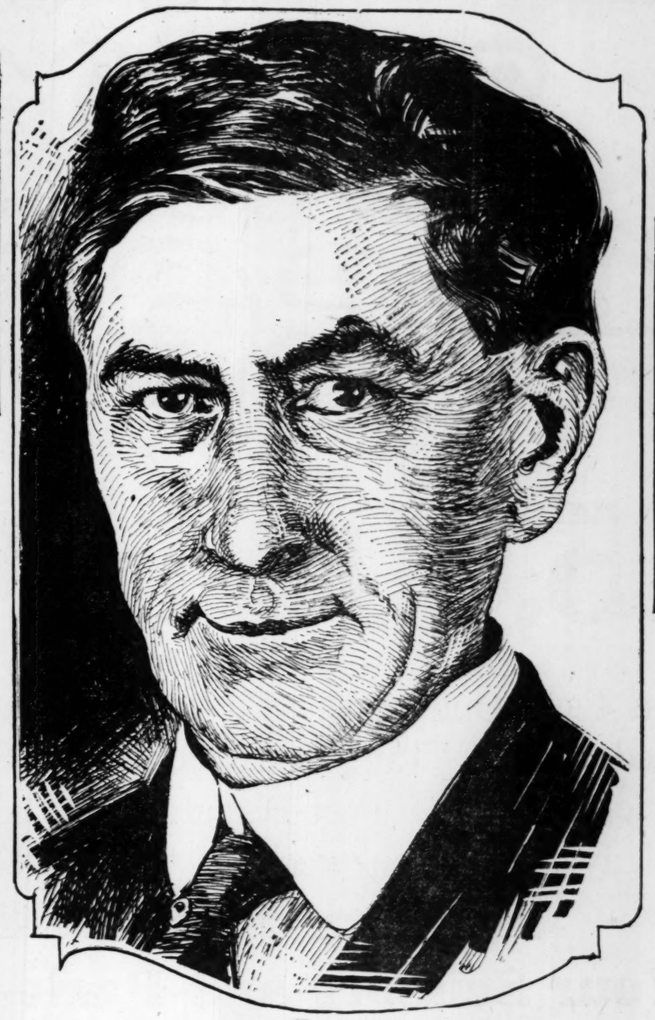
He was Treasurer of the United States and wrote his name on the nation's currency. Lured by the promise of gain he strayed into the New York financial jungle, and, when the financiers were through with him, he was as poor as in the days when he sat by the stove in court at Sigourney, Ia., and listened to the lawyers.

Through it all, through success and disaster, John Burke clung to his ambition to be a Judge. Success stood in his way, but disaster was more friendly. It opened the way for him to attain the coveted goal. And now John Burke, broken at an age when most men are ready to refire, has not only come back, but has achieved the hope of his boyhood and the purpose of his manhood. At the age of 65 the people of North Dakota have elected him Chief Justice. His career has been crowned with the honor he most desired.

They call him Honest John Burke out here on the Dakota plains. They mean not so much that he is meticulous in money matters, although he is that. It is the word that suits them best to describe the rugged character of the man, the qualities of his mind and heart.

Known as Dakota's Lincoln

Gaunt and gangling, with towsled hair and ill-fitting clothing and necktie perpetually awry, he is Dakota's Lincoln, ready with anecdote, irrisistible as a stump speaker, the idol of the immigrant farmers as well as the native pioneers. To the former he is Yon Bjorke, but the Scandinavian twist is not an instance of political opportunism. It is as near as the Norskes can come to John Burke.



Little Johnny Burke used to haunt courtrooms, fascinated by the judges and lawyers. He vowed that when he grew up he would be a judge himself. Later, as a young attorney, he was called "Dakota's Lincoln" because of his rugged honesty and power as an orator.

It was in Iowa that Burke made his start, getting his law at the State University and beginning his practice at Des Moines with his brother, Thomas. But the farther West was calling and after a year's practice he cut loose and struck out for himself. He found lodgment at Rolla, in Rolette County, close up to the Manitoba border, and hung out a shingle announcing that he was prepared to practice staple and fancy law for the sparse citizenship. That was in 1888.

It is just as well, perhaps, not to inquire about his earnings those days. Or about his collections rather. There never was any trouble about his earnings. He always earned more than he was paid. There never was such a good lawyer who was such a poor collector.

Anybody could get a curbstone opinion for the asking and neighbors who came to his office to consult him were treated as guests, entitled to the best that he had. Some, punctilious in such matters, asked how much they owed and, deprecatingly, John Burke mentioned a nominal fee and the client, more often than not, said he was broke just then, but as soon as he got some money he would come around. Which maybe he did and maybe he didn't. If the case went to court and John Burke tried and won it, the paying procedure was a good deal the same.

In spite of all that, or, perhaps, partly on account of it, Burke's fame as a lawyer spread through the northern counties and percolated down toward the growing midstate towns. Truth to tell, it was more as an orator than as a lawyer that he was famed, but it amounted to the same thing, for in those days in those parts it was oratory that won cases.

John Burke could talk, and he liked to talk. He never missed a chance to talk. And nobody up there was ever known to miss a chance to hear him. He had a marvelous sway over masses of men and masses of men had a marvelous liking to be swayed by him.

Entered Politics Through Legislature

If, as has been gently intimated herein, it didn't get him much money, it soon made him too big for Rolla, Rolette County, so he moved down to Devils Lake. The pickings were better there, but if it had been left to Burke there is no reason to doubt that he would have continued getting less than his share. But he formed a partnership with Henry G. Middaugh, and Middaugh, it seems, was a good collector, and so for the business transacted during business hours suitable charge was made, although nothing could stop Burke from giving away advice when he was out from under Middaugh's eye.

Then he married Mary Kane of Waukesha, Wis., and she undertook to keep his necktie straight and to instill in him a sense of the sartorial in keeping with his status as a rising young lawyer of the rising young State of North Dakota. She has been at it ever since and she hasn't given up hope. She is that kind of a woman.

John Burke took to politics like a puppy takes to play. They needed a man like him in the Legislature. The Legislature of North Dakota was no better and no worse than the Legislature of any other State that might be mentioned offhand, but a fellow has to make a start somewhere. So Burke said all right, and, in the second year after he conferred himself upon North Dakota, he was sent to Bismarck to help make the laws. Two years later he was sent to the Senate for four years.

After that he hung back when they wanted him to run for office. He wanted to be a Judge and there were no Judge jobs vacant, so he waited.

In 1905 the Republicans had made a mess of things. A group of insurgents in the party tried to get control, but along came the steam roller and flattened them out. The Democrats came out of their cyclone cellars and looked around. It looked like they had a chance. With the right man to carry their banner they might grab the State.

Couldn't Dodge Governorship

They had a convention and John Burke was there. He was hoping that something would turn up so that he could be a Judge somewhere. There was talk of nominating him for Governor, but he wouldn't listen to it. He told them Sever Serumgard was just the man to lead them to victory and got up in the convention and nominated him. You may say that he showed right there that he had no political sense, for how could a man with a name like that hope to be elected Governor, but this was in North Dakota, and, anyway, the main thing with Burke was to keep them from nominating him.

But it didn't work. Somebody nominated Yon Bjorke. He tried to defend himself, but three Norwegians yumped on him and held him down while the rest of them nominated him.

Well, he was in for it, and while he would rather have been Judge, he wasn't going to let the Republicans beat him if he could help it. It was a job for a grown-up. The Republicans had nominated E. Y. Sarles, a Hillsboro banker, who wore nice clothes and never had any trouble with his necktie. And the warring Republican factions took one look at Yon Bjorke and rushed into each other's arms.

Burke saw that when it came to clothes he couldn't compete with the banker, so he let go all holds and went the limit the other way. Most of the time he was out of Mrs. Burke's reach. Anyway, it was understood that she would keep her hands off until the fight was over. Sometimes Burke's necktie got around to the back of his neck and you couldn't tell whether he was coming or going. But he was going all right.

It was a a winter campaign mostly. Burke went about in a sheep-lined duck coat. Most of the meetings were held in school houses on the wind-swept prairies. Burke had a trick of always coming in a little late.

"Well, boys," he would say, "we're a little late, but we're here."

That was friendly and it caught the audience. Then he would throw off his sheepskin and stand forth in his green-black frock coat and start in, with his necktie under his left ear, and flay the Republicans.

But there was persuasion in the purr of his marvelous voice and his stories were pointed, but not barbed, and if any had come to heckle they stayed to cheer and as the farmers went from the school house that night they said: "Yon Bjorke he bane fine fellah, he win, you bat."

Well, that was what he did. He had 30,000 votes to spare. All the other Democrats were defeated.

Elected Governor Three Times

Next time and a third time they elected him and all the time he was wishing he could be a Judge instead of Governor. And all the time Mrs. Burke was doing her best to keep him looking like a Governor.

The Baltimore convention was coming on and the State's delegation was sent with instructions to vote for John Burke for President. He withdrew in favor of Woodrow Wilson. He was given 386½ votes for Vice President, but had his friends move to make it unanimous for Marshall.

When Wilson was elected, he offered Burke the United States Treasurership. Burke would rather have been Judge, but he accepted. For eight years he handled the country's money. It raised money in the estimation of the North Dakotans. When they saw a bill with John Burke's name on it they knew it was all right.

There was one old farmer up in Iowa to whom a Burke dollar brought something of a shock. Away back there when Burke was seizing every opportunity to sit by the courthouse stove and listen to the lawyers and worshiping the most high Judge up there on the bench, he did odd jobs for a German farmer and his pay was nothing a day and his keep. But one day the farmer, in a burst of benevolence, told John that the first dollar that he found with John Burke's name on it he would give it to him.

Burke never forgot that dollar. There were times in his early years, when it was all that kept him from being broke. Always there was the dollar the farmer was going to pay him when he found one with "John Burke" on it.

John Burke and his signature which appeared on all United States Treasury notes during the eight years he was United States treasurer under Wilson's two administrations.

Then, at last, Burke was made United States Treasurer, which gave him the right to put his name on dollar bills. He sent one to the farmer, who had no option but to keep his promise, but he was nothing out in sending back to Burke the bill that Burke had sent him.

Burke was a name to conjure with, not only in North Dakota but in the money markets of the East. He was nearing the end of his term. Maybe they would let him go back home and be Judge. But there was a young man named Kardos, a stock broker in New York. He was a high-powered whizz-bang, but addicted to wildcattish capers, the which, however, John Burke did not know. He needed somebody's name to help him put things across. John Burke's suited him. It may be that he had some notion of showing around the bills with John Burke's name on them and making them believe that John Burke was the man who made all the money. There are plenty of people who would have believed it. Or maybe he neglected to do it and that was why he failed. For he did fail. That is, the firm of Kardos & Burke did. The liabilities were $2,156,985 and the assets $258,760.

It was the first time that John Burke had failed. He hardly knew what to do. He had put in his life's savings. He had $1500 in the bank. He turned that over, and his life insurance policies, and his half interest in 2000 acres of North Dakota land. He stripped himself to the skin. Things are not usually done that way down East, but John Burke was from North Dakota and didn't know any better. It was his idea of being honest.

Looked Like a Muddled Life

There he was, 63 years old, dead broke, and far from home, and he had never been Judge, and it looked to him, right at first, like he had muddled his life.

But there was still a chance. He was out of that brokerage imbroglio. Flat broke, yes, but out of it. And now he could go back to North Dakota and start over again and maybe, even yet, he could be Judge.

All that he had left was the old family car. He couldn't turn that in because nobody wanted it. He loaded his wife and children into that, Mrs. Burke straightened his necktie, and away they went, homeward bound.

There is a story that when the outfit landed in St. Paul, John Burke had 80 cents in his pocket, but that may be an exaggeration. Maybe it was only 60 cents. But anyway the gas held out and they made Fargo, that night. Fargo and friends.

He is a member of the Supreme Court of North Dakota now, attaining at the age of 64 his lifelong ambition.

He hit up a partnership with Usher L. Burdick, who could be relied upon to look after the collections, and jumped into the practice of law and by next spring he was doing so well that he didn't need to be judge, but there was to be a vacancy on the Supreme bench and somebody wrote a piece for the paper suggesting John Burke for the job. It would be a way for the people of North Dakota to show that they still believed in him. Everybody said yes, that was the thing to do. And John Burke said all right, if the folks insisted, he would run. That was what he always wanted to be anyway.

It is a non-political office. Democrats and Republicans were voted for at the primary. It happened that two Democrats were nominated, Burke and Charles J. Fisk. So the race was between these two. It was non-political all right, but the Republicans, still smarting from the wallopings Burke had given them in the past, are said to have sided with Fisk. But Burke was elected, with ninety-odd thousand votes to the 60,000 for Fisk.

As he sat in his office yesterday, turning over the letters and telegrams that had come, congratulating him and wishing him well in his coming six years on the bench, there was only one thing that marred his happiness. There were two or three letters from persons who had invested in the brokerage firm, and lost. The writers had read of John Burke's come-back. Maybe now he could do something for them.

"They don't understand," he sadly said. "They read that John Burke has come back and it buoys their hopes. But how can I, out of a salary of $5500 a year, make restitution of a million dollars. They forget that in the brokerage crash I was one of the victims and the heaviest loser.

"But I am going to be Judge and I am glad of that. It is what I always wanted to be. It will crown my career with honor."

And up and down North Dakota they are saying: "That Yon Bjorke, he bane fine fellah. He come beck, you bat."

HORRORS OF "THREE SAD ISLES" ENDED AS FRANCE CALLS GUIANA FELONS HOME

were a few belongings and a well-drawn map. Dutch officials say that trails through the Dutch Guianan wilderness have been secretly mapped by generations of deportes and the maps are at the disposal of escaping convicts. Sometimes they cross the Maroni River by secretly building a crude boat but usually on a raft of buoyant moco-moco stems.

"The French refugee is the bugbear of the surrounding settlements. He is the thief, the burglar and the footpad. When a party of escaped deportes land on the coast the women take to their heels and the men go off for the police. When a crime of violence takes place the police first look for a refugee. If you woke up in the night to find a hand at the window, it was a Frenchman. A woman dared not go out after dark in a village on the coast of South America for fear that a deporte might be lurking in the bushes."

Beaten, hopeless, and abjured were these pitiful outcasts of France. Nowhere were they welcome, nowhere could they find a haven if they fled their fate. "We will send you to Cayenne," the French Judges thundered at their culprits before the bar, "where you will surely die."

But all that will soon be over. The deportes are coming back to France, where they will embrace the good, kind French jailers and shiver delightedly in the cold dungeons of Northern France.

WEIRD EVIDENCE THAT SHE PLANNED 2 MURDERS CONVICTS WIDOW

"How do you want Laura Eggleston killed?" he questioned.

"Oh, you can shoot her," said the second Mrs. Eggleston, indifferently.

They next discussed the clothes "Bud Brown" would wear. Burgess told her that he had a duck coat and overalls and a slouch hat "stashed in the jungles" and would wear this outfit next day when he accomplished the killings. This foresight seemed to please her.

"What if I kill only one? Do I get half the money?"

"Must Kill Both to Earn Pay."

"No. You don't get any money until they're both dead."

"Will it be all right to kill one the first night and the other the next?"

"I don't care. Just so they're both dead."

With the evidence and their story the two informers left Mrs. Eggleston's home to prepare their case for court. At the trial, which closed a few days ago, they swore to every word of the foregoing incidents and conversation, beginning with Mrs. Eggleston's first suggestion to Will Pool.

* * * * * *

As the defense presented Mrs. Eggleston's story:

Although the second Mrs. Eggleston had never been treated fairly in Larned, no one ever heard her say an unkind thing of Mrs. Laura Eggleston. She is a woman who has had a great many trials, a woman pariah in Larned, a woman forced to live in loneliness. One of her sons is confined in the insane ward of the State penitentiary at Lansing. Her trials and a marked type of religious emotionalism may have contributed to certain irrational actions.

She was in love with Dave Ely. They had been engaged for five years and were planning to marry when the case came up. Her faith in him was not shaken by the Emma Bolen incident, and their friendship has continued until this day.

Her income was ample without the $100 a month paid to the first Mrs. Eggleston. She had little need of money. She had no grudges against either Laura or Dave. In Larned, despite hateful gossip, her reputation for truthfulness and amiability has not been impugned.

The motives, if any existed, do not appear strong enough.

Passing to a chronology of the case, it was Pool and not Mrs. Eggleston who first suggested that she might wish to kill Laura and Dave. From this point on the whole negotiations were a blackmail plot on the part of Pool and Burgess, aided and abetted by a County Attorney anxious to make a record for political reasons.

Forced to Sign Contract.

On the night of April 9, after having annoyed Mrs. Eggleston numerous times with demands for money, Pool and Burgess called. They covered her with revolvers and forced her to pour strychnine into the wine bottle. They then made her produce her late husband's revolver, which Burgess pocketed. After threatening her unless she gave them money, they left. (Previous to this visit they had forced her to sign the contracts referring to "a certain job of work.")

As soon as they had gone Mrs. Eggleston made frantic efforts to notify the Sheriff, who was away on a case. She called his home several times and his little girl answered the phone. She then called Dave Ely on the telephone and said:

"Dave, promise me you'll not leave home tonight. Promise me you'll stay inside. Two men are after you and they may kill you."

Defense Ridicules the Story.

Supposing that Mrs. Eggleston had wished to kill Dave Ely, couldn't she have accomplished the crime more easily by herself than with the aid of a stranger? He was a constant visitor to her home and ate many meals with her.

Was it logical that she should have entrusted such a secret to Pool, whom she always doubted, and to a stranger introduced by him, merely as "Bud Brown"? If she, indeed, did hire this pair to kill Ely and Laura Eggleston, why did she warn Ely immediately after they left her house?

It was peculiar, too, that the County Attorney should have dispatched two men to aid in the plotting of a crime. He was in effect supplying accessories before the fact. Moreover, could not Burgess and Pool, granted that they acted honestly, have suggested the crimes to Mrs. Eggleston and made it easy for her to fall to temptation? Did not their willing cooperation amount to persuasion? Could their actions the night of April 9 not be construed almost as coercion? Hadn't they been overzealous in trying to make a case?

The staunchness of Ely was another point in Mrs. Eggleston's favor. The State charged that she had plotted his death, yet here he was, testifying in her defense. Was not that proof of his affection, and proof that they really had been engaged and were contemplating marriage?

State Accused of Fomenting Plot.

After all, no harm had been done. Granted that Mrs. Eggleston might have had such an impulse in her mind, had not the State snatched up a chance remark of hers to an employe and developed it into a case of attempted murder? Did not the whole case against Mrs. Eggleston rest on the testimony of two men, one of whom certainly had a bias in that was hired to find evidence. No had been killed. Mrs. Eggleston had not taken a single step toward consummation of the crimes. Supposing her agreement with Pool and Burgess true, was the plot still-born? She had engaged rogues who might have done her bidding, but officers of the law. Not once were either Mr. or Mrs. Laura Eggleston in jeopardy. There really had been no threat against their lives.

There was Mrs. Eggleston's demeanor on the stand. She had told a connected story, so calmly that it carried conviction. She had not sobbed to produce an effect on the jury, she had not used any artifices at all.

Her story tallied in many points with the stories of Burgess and Pool. She admitted, for instance, putting the wine bottle with strychnine. She even took the strychnine bottle in one hand and the wine bottle in the other, while a breathless courtroom crowd looked on, and showed the jury just how she had poured in the poison.

"They Made Me Do It!"

But—— "They made me do it!" she exclaimed.

She readily admitted that she had told them her bank balance was $250. The balance sheet was introduced in evidence later.

"I told them that was all the money I had," she explained, "because I wanted them to see they could not blackmail thousands out of me."

She identified the revolver.

"That man," she said—pointing to Burgess—"grabbed it out of my hand and aimed it at me."

She sat through the trial at table with her counsel, George W. Finney of Larned and L. S. Harvey of Kansas City, Kan., a gray-haired woman, quiet, mouselike, seemingly crushed. Tongues rattled about her, nudges indicated her, fingers were pointed. Larned had never given her a fair chance and did not at the trial. The sentiment of the courtroom crowds was overwhelmingly against her. The jury could not escape the feeling.

The first Mrs. Eggleston had a seat among the spectators and was surrounded by friends. She wept now and then from the strain of so much pity, but usually sat grim-faced and erect. She was triumphing. She knew it. Larned knew it. The second Mrs. Eggleston was reaping what she had sowed.

Her counsel's closing arguments rang through a chilly silence. In vain Attorney Finney pleaded that mercy should be shown her. Lynched's thumbs were down.

After the verdict Judge Wilson asked Mrs. Eggleston if she had heard what the foreman of the jury had said.

She bowed her head and then her clear tones sounded out:

"Yes. But I still feel that I am not guilty."

* * * * * *

The correspondent collected the following statements by the principals in the case:

Attorney Finney: An insanity plea would have done no good. That would have meant life in an insane asylum. As it is, we intend to appeal the case, and at the worst she will have to serve probably only the minimum sentence.

David Ely: She is as innocent as an angel. I can't talk about the trial without cursing. This conviction has made no difference in my plans as to marrying her.

The first Mrs. Eggleston: Of course, she is guilty. She wanted to kill me so she could get my income and home.

The second Mrs. Eggleston: God will see that I get justice in the end.

SEVEN WOMEN IN EVERY TEN ARE GRAY AT FORTY

Scientists Wonder Why Women Allow Beauty of Hair to Disappear.

Statistics that have just been compiled show that nearly seven women in every ten are gray on their fortieth birthday, and eight in every ten have either their hair discolored or its natural luster lost.

Scientists, who have studied these figures, wonder why women, who are so anxious to retain all the charm of their natural beauty, should be so lax in regard to their hair.

Through experiments the savants have proven conclusively that hair troubles originate with an unhealthy scalp or hair roots that lack proper nourishment. The remedy for such a condition is stimulation to the scalp and scientific nourishment to the roots. And since Grayzix—a simple, colorless preparation—guarantees both results and is easily available, they continue to wonder why every woman does not take advantage of it.

Grayzix checks falling hair, eliminates dandruff and other scalp diseases, and at the same time invigorates the scalp and promotes a luxuriant growth in a remarkably short time. Grayzix is guaranteed to do these things. If you feel it doesn't bear out our claims for it, you have only to return the empty bottle to your dealer, who is authorized to refund your purchase price of $1.25.

Grayzix will save your hair. Start using it today.

1300 UNDELIVERED LETTERS FOUND IN POSTMAN'S HOME

Some 20 Years Old; Two Contained Proposals of Marriage; Girls Married Other Suitors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The postman, who is usually one of the best of cupid's lieutenants, has proved otherwise at Keady, County Armagh, Ireland. When Thomas Sleator, who carried Keady's mail for many years, died recently more than 1300 undelivered letters and postcards were found secreted in various parts of his home.

It transpires that at least two of the missives contained proposals of marriage and in each case the girl married someone else. There is no telling how many other faithful lovers lost the ladies of their choice through the old postman's habit of holding out on the mail.

Among the letters which have finally reached their destination were a number written from the trenches during the war, bills long overdue, belated good news for persons who didn't live to receive it and some bad news for others who didn't care to get it.

Nobody can explain why Sleator held up the letters, but the postal authorities are doing their best to find the addressees, many of whom are gone from Keady now.

Church Quartet to Give Concert.

PARIS TO SEE "THE MIRACLE"

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The first German to receive a sincerely warm welcome from the French since the war is the poet Volmueller, who, like Harden, found Germany intolerable and decided to throw himself on French hospitality. He says not only did he find his mind cramped in Germany, but his life there was constantly in danger.

His play, "The Miracle," which has run to more than 1000 performances in New York and London, will be produced by Gemier at the Odeon Theater next season and Paris is preparing to make the production the occasion of a demonstration of sympathy for the author.

a forerunner of develop- incident to the Memorial project, the operation involv- the half block west of the rson Hotel comprising two el strips each 101 by 225 feet, noteworthy.

Roxana Petroleum Co. pur- the northeast corner of enth and Locust streets, with ntage of 101 feet on Thir- th street and 112½ feet on Lo- street, and the Hotel Jeffer- company the southeast corner hirteenth and St. Charles , with 101 feet on Thirteenth t and 225 feet on St. Charles . The Locust street strip was d by the Hotel Jefferson com- and the St. Charles street by the Mutual Realty Co.

Building to Cost $1,000,000.

e operation, carrying building plans calling for outlays aggregating $4,000,000 or more, was handled in its entirety by the Mercantile Trust Co. It was conceived by Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., who recently was elected a director of the Roxana company, and who saw the advertising advantages of this corner.

The Roxana company disclosed plans for an office building for the Locust street corner to cost $1,000,000. Plans for this structure are being made by Jamieson & Skearl, architects.

Several years ago the Hotel Jefferson company acquired a strip having 101 feet on Thirteenth and 225 feet on Locust street, including the strip acquired by the Roxana company, as a site for a 12-story annex for the hotel.

Plans now contemplate extending the annex 112½ feet directly west of the present hotel structure, on both Locust and St. Charles streets. The building projected by the Roxana company will form the west boundary on Locust street of the proposed annex.

The Hotel Jefferson Co. has no plans for improving the Thirteenth and St. Charles street corner, embraced in the west half of the St. Charles street strip, at present occupied by an eight-story warehouse under lease to Butler Bros. with a vacation clause. This corner recently was submitted to the Shuberts, operators of the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, as available for a theater in connection with the proposed Jefferson Hotel annex.

Apartments to Be Built.

The office building to be erected by the Roxana Co. will be occupied by the general offices of this corporation. It will be of monumental height to harmonize with the memorial Plaza buildings, to be erected out of the bond issue. There will be provision for additional stories if required.

A feature of the proposed annex to the Jefferson Hotel will be an auditorium and dining room on a large scale. This building, which will double the capacity of the hotel, will be financed by the Mercantile Trust Co. The plans are being made by the T. P. Barnett Co.

The real estate market as a whole reflected new buoyancy in the last week, with plans disclosed for several new apartment structures and business buildings on a comparatively large scale.

Contracts have been let for the nine-story Wilkshire apartment, to be erected at the southwest corner of Skinker road and Southwood avenue, by the Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co., of which Edward A. Wagner is president, at a cost of $750,000. These apartments will comprise six rooms, sun parlor and two baths, and five rooms, sun parlor and one bath. Several of the six-room apartments have been leased from the architects' plans.

DR. G. S. DRAKE BUILDING AN ATTRACTIVE RESIDENCE

An attractive residence is now being built for Dr. George S. Drake on Lindell drive facing Forest Park and not far from Skinker road.

The house is modern English in type with a brick base and brick trim around the windows. The walls are mainly of stucco, relieved here and there by gables and bays of half timber work.

There is an open paved terrace to the south surrounded by a stone-capped brick balustrade. This terrace is accessible from the south lawn and from the driveway to the east. The roof is of green and purple mottled slate laid in random widths. The garage joins the house on the north, combining a kitchen entry and entry to garage and chauffeur's apartment above. The roof line of the house continues down over the garage and covers the arched entryway in a pleasing composition.

There is a fine main hall, Georgian in character, with an interesting treatment of stair and stair window. The living room to the west of the hall, of earlier English, will have the structural rough-hewn beams exposed on the ceiling. The second floor has a sitting room and a separate study, and three large bedrooms and three baths. The work is being done by the Dickie Construction Co. and the plans and specifications were drawn by La Beaume & Klein, architects. The house will be finished in the spring.

PRICE DISTRICT HAS MODERN SCHOOL

Advantages of New System of Consolidated Rural Schools Are Shown.

One of the marked benefits of the new system of consolidated rural schools may be seen in the new Price District School on Price Lane, off the Clayton road, and adjoining the Bogey and Log Cabin clubs. The school was designed by Study & Farrar, architects of this city, who have designed a large number of schools and who have recently completed the new building for the State Normal Teachers' College at Cape Girardeau, Mo. The building has been designed so as to give the rural district children all the advantages and environment of the most modern city school. The architects have incorporated in this building all the essential advantages that are to be found in the larger schools of our cities.

The rooms are all lighted by the unalateral system, and ventilated by the most modern methods. The corridors resemble those of the modern city school corridors. The Price school contains four large classrooms on the main floor, with a seating capacity of 40 pupils each. Besides this there are the coatroom, store rooms and principal's office on this floor. The basement is raised above the ground, permitting the use of what has usually been only a cellar in the rural school, as an auditorium, small gymnasium and play room. The building is of fireproof construction.

It is designed in a modern treatment of the Italian style with brick pilasters and plaster panels. In this school there is something more than a mere utilitarian building. The well selected ornament in the shape of cut stone details and Moravian tile has made the building distinctive and characteristic.

SILVERSTONE CO. TAKES LEASE ON BUILDING AT 1114 OLIVE

Martin & Breitt report having leased the five-story and basement building at 1114 Olive street to the Silverstone Talking Machine Co., which is now using the entire building for a wholesale and retail phonograph business. It is the intention of the Silverstone company to make extensive alterations to the building, installing sprinkler and modern equipment.

The property is owned by the Hart estate, which was represented by Fred Semple. Martin & Breitt represented the Silverstone company.

BIXBYS PRESENT PARSONAGE TO CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Bixby have purchased a commodious residence at 83 Arundel place as a gift to the First Congregational Church, Wydown boulevard and University Lane, for a parsonage.

The transaction was handled by W. W. Butts of the Butts Realty Co., who declined to disclose the purchase price.

The house comprises eight rooms, two sun rooms and a breakfast room and three baths. The living room, 18 by 33 feet, extending the width of the house, is planned in connection with the sun rooms. The walls are finished in canvas and oil and the woodwork is of quarter-sawed white oak and birch. The central entrance hall is paneled in white oak.

The premises includes a garage for two cars. The house occupies a lot 100 by 160 feet at the northwest corner of Arundel place and University lane and is one of the handsomest in Hillcrest.

The present minister is the Rev. Wofford Colquitt Timmons, who expects to remove to the new parsonage about Dec. 10. A picture of the house is shown on this page.

Eighth Street Store Leased.

A long-term lease has been closed with C. R. Lamping on the first floor store room at 505 North Eighth street. The lease was made for the account of the Crescent Electric Co. Martin & Breitt represented both parties.

BIG ADDITION FOR CASTLE DANCE HALL

Two Large Residences at 2827-37 Olive Street to Be Replaced With Modern Building.

Herman Albers has purchased two large residences at 2827-37 Olive street, with 125x134 feet of ground adjoining the Castle Hall Building, owned by the Castle Amusement Co., of which he is president. The transaction was brought about by the Mercantile Trust Co., in connection with C. M. McDonald & Co. and John Grether & Co.

The residential structures are to be replaced with a modern three-story fireproof building, with the second floor as an addition to the Castle Dance Hall, which is to be remodeled at a large outlay. The top floor of the combined structures will be equipped on an elaborate scale as an al fresco dancing resort during the summer months, with a floor area of 155x134 feet.

Albers recently made a tour of Europe to get ideas for the new hall and roof garden, which has been planned on an ambition scale, with many novel features from abroad.

The enlarged building also will include a sumptuous cafe with table service.

A program of entertainment will include high-class screen and vaudeville presentations, a revival of the light opera program so popular at Uhrig's Cave.

The larger building will also include several halls for societies and exclusive dancing clubs and dramatic organizations. The ground floor of the premises will be adapted for mercantile purposes.

The property purchased was owned by the Arab Realty Co. and M. H. Alexander.

STANLEY EPSTEIN REPORTS SALE OF APARTMENT BUILDING

Stanley Epstein reports the sale of the six-family apartment, 5749 Kingsbury avenue, to Frank and Caroline Ocken for a client of the John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co.

He also reports the sale of five lots on Marcus and Bessie avenues to Leo F. Dohle; an eight-room residence at 1118 South Tenth street for Meyer Lewis to Mark Hopper and Louis Greenfield; and property at 1804-06 South Tenth street for Meyer Lewis to Ely Sanders.

CORNET & ZIEBIG TRUST LEASES 413 CHESTNUT STREET

Adams & Co. of Erie, Pa., dealers in installment house furnishings, maintaining offices and stock rooms in every large city in the United States, has acquired a lease on the first floor and basement of the McLaran estate building at 413 Chestnut street for a 10-year term. The company will remove to its new quarters on Jan. 1. John F. Cogswell of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust represented the lessor and George Streiff of the Mercantile Trust Co. the lessee.

Webster Groves
St. Louis' Finest Suburb

The inevitable quest of the many to find the most desirable place in which to live is precipitating a demand for WEBSTER GROVES property which is without precedent.

WEBSTER GROVES homes are being purchased largely by desirable students of real estate and home-making people who know values and who see far enough ahead of the market to thoroughly protect their investments.

These people know that a home must have intrinsic values in itself other than the mere name of a street. A real home should have beauty of outlook as well as comfort within; and it must have accessibility to the business district. Country homes have the former, many city homes have the latter, but WEBSTER GROVES homes have both. And WEBSTER GROVES has even more—it has genuine exclusiveness.

The beauty of the country — its charming views — its trees and park-like streets, all these have a dollars-and-cents asset to any home.

There is no other suburb of St. Louis that is comparable to Webster Groves. None so high and healthful, nor so conveniently located.

If you contemplate owning a home, you owe it to your family to inform yourself regarding the homes and building sites we offer for sale here.

BROOKHART ASKS COURT AID IN DEFENDING SENATE SEAT

Plan Covers Same Ground as That of Democratic Opponent in Contesting Election.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 29.—Smith W. Brookhart plans to defend his claim to his seat in the United States Senate on the same grounds upon which Daniel F. Steck, his Democratic opponent in the general election, plans to base his contest of the election. This was disclosed today when the Senator, through court action in 19 counties, set out to preserve for the probable Senate recount of the ballots all records of the election, some of which might be destroyed under the law on Dec. 4, when county auditors are permitted to dismantle voting machines and retain only the total recorded for each candidate.

Brookhart asked that special masters in chancery be appointed to open voting machines and preserve ballots which may not have been counted, as well as those which were recorded. In numerous instances, he alleged in the petition filed here, "judges of election disregarded their duties and failed to make true and accurate returns" on the senatorial race.

Attorneys for the Senator declare they have evidence that, in numerous counties, straight Republican ballots were not counted. As a result they declare the Brookhart lead over his Democratic opponent was reduced "by hundreds of votes," and Senator Brookhart won by only 755 votes, while the loss of these votes to other Republican candidates, who received overwhelming majorities in all cases, was not important.

Steck's attorneys have announced his contest will be based upon votes which were not counted through a misunderstanding on the part of some election judges of the tabulation of election machine ballots and upon the throwing out of the ballots marked with arrows to indicate a "scratch" for the Democrat. Ballots in the latter group are invalid under the State law, but Steck hopes to be able to have them counted by the Senate Committee.

Action on all the petitions, filed simultaneously today, is expected not later than Monday or Tuesday. Judge Hubert Utterback granted the Polk County injunction this afternoon.

COTTON TRADING IN CHICAGO

First Northern Market to Open on Board of Trade Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—A new center of cotton trading will be opened here Monday, on the Chicago Board of Trade. Shortly after 9 o'clock, the time set for the ceremonies surrounding the advent of King Cotton in a Northern market center, wires will be clicking with the first cotton quotation prices.

Government officials, business and financial leaders of the East and Southwest sections of the country, and Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago will participate in the ceremonies and watch Frank L. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, make the initial cotton transaction in the new market.

Many years of agitation have succeeded finally in creating a cotton futures market in the Chicago district. Early last summer, following a series of conferences with Government representatives, the Board of Trade voted the new market into life. It will ensure that the United States cotton futures act. Merchants and exporters look upon the new venture as a distinct advantage to the Southwestern state. E. B. Guthrie, Dallas, Tex., one of the largest exporters of cotton, says:

"Delivery on Chicago contracts at the joint port of Houston-Galveston will prevent the 'squeezing' of any spot month. The trade will have far better knowledge of the amount of spot cotton available than is now the case."

ANTHRACITE STRIKE STILL ON

Scranton District Miners Ignore Lewis' Order to Return.

By the Associated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 29.—The General Grievance Committee, representing 11,000 anthracite mine workers of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., today voted to continue the strike started early this week, in the face of instructions from International President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, that the men return to work Monday or have the charters of their local unions revoked.

The committee announced it would not call off the strike until grievances the men complained of have been adjusted. In order not to comply with the instructions of President Lewis, the Grievance Committee adjourned until next Wednesday.

The strike began last Tuesday. It was not authorized by the district organization, and instructions were sent to the local leaders to return the men to work. The local committees voted to ignore the district and national officers and not to permit them in their meetings.

CAR SERVICE BOARD TO MEET

The ninth regular meeting of the Trans-Missouri-Kansas Regional Advisory Board of the car service division of the American Railway Association will be at Hotel Biltmore, Kansas City, Dec. 17. Shippers from all parts of the district, and parts of Oklahoma, Arkansas and Illinois, will be represented. J. W. Riley, room 301, Union Station, is the St. Louis district manager.

Co-operative shipping and elimination of car shortages will be discussed. The organization is credited with lessening the periodical car shortages, particularly for grain and coal shipments.

KORETZ LOOT BELIEVED TO BE HIDDEN IN NEW YORK

Fugitive Chicago Swindler, On Way There by Ship, Said to Have Promised to Give Up $100,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Safety deposit vaults in New York are expected to give up a large part of the loot that Leo Koretz, Bayano swindler, who sailed from Halifax yesterday for New York on his way to Chicago, accumulated here.

It is reported that Koretz promised the prosecutor he would show them where he had hidden $100,000 in New York if they would let him travel to Chicago without the embarrassment of being accompanied by reporters. It is said to have been for that reason that Koretz was taken aboard ship secretly.

The steamer Caronia, on which are Koretz and Assistant State's Attorneys Sharbaro and Marshal, will reach New York tomorrow afternoon. The swindler, once more on United States soil, will be subjected to a thorough examination in an effort to make him disclose where he has hidden some tens of thousands of dollars that so far he has failed to account for.

Indication that those in charge of the Koretz case had been perfecting a plan for days to get the swindler to New York, the scene of most of his activities since he fled Chicago last December, was strengthened today when Maurice Gerkson, counsel for the swindler's bankrupt estate, left for New York.

Officials now believe that for months before he disappeared Koretz was quietly conveying the bulk of his stealings to New York and secreting them in safe depositories. They do not believe that half of what Koretz actually got away with has yet come to light. Every precaution was taken at Halifax on Friday to prevent knowledge of the secret departure for New York becoming known.

HERRIOT EMBARRASSED IN NEW DIRECTION BY ENEMIES

Deputy Who Arranged Demonstration for Premier Charged With Dallying With Trusts Head.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Publitzer Publishing Co., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The campaign against the Herriot Government which brought about appointment of a committee of the Chamber of Deputies to investigate an alleged slush fund has succeeded in embarrassing the Premier in a new direction. Camille Picard, Deputy from Vosges, who has been organizing tomorrow's demonstration at Epinal, where the Premier will be the principal figure, is charged with attempting to obtain financial support from Senator Billiet, "dispenser of the trusts."

Deputy Pierre Tattinger, who is also editor of La Liberte, is publishing letters to prove Picard tried and failed to get financial support from Billiet. As Picard is a leading member of Herriot's support and arranged tomorrow's demonstration to rally public interest anew in liberal Government, it will prove embarrassing to the Premier to have to line himself up with Picard.

The anti-Herriot campaign unquestionably is affecting public opinion. The phrase used yesterday by Minister of Commerce Raynaldy, "If I took money it was for my newspaper," has been picked up quickly and "If I took money" has become a boulevard joke overnight. Raynaldy has been attacked personally by the Monarchist newspaper L'Action Francaise, which decalres he is the grandson of a convicted highway robber.

TEACHER TO FIGHT DISMISSAL

Oregon Woman Who Married 17-Year-Old Pupil Announces Stand.

By the Associated Press.

CANBY, Ore., Nov. 29. — Mrs. Clifford Leroy Samuelson, high school teacher, formerly Miss Rosamond Lee Shaw, who was married recently to one of the 17-year-old pupils of her school, announced today that she would fight action taken last night by the School Board in dismissing her. The board decided to revoke the teacher's contract after considering a petition signed by 106 citizens and patrons of the school.

Bridegroom-Elect Waits; Girl Elopes.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29. — The disappearance of Miss Jane Conley, Columbus girl, on the eve of her scheduled wedding to Frank A. Strear, of Philadelphia, was explained late tonight when she sent a telegram from Buffalo to her mother here telling of her marriage to another suitor, Arthur C. House. Formal announcement of Miss Conley's engagement to Strear was made last August. Guests had been invited for a wedding supper at the Conley home Thanksgiving evening and Strear was there.

SLAYER OF BRIDE SENTENCED TO DEATH ON PLEA OF GUILTY

Lester Kahl, 24, to Be Hanged Dec. 22 at Carlinville (Ill.) Jail.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARLINVILLE, Ill., Nov. 29.—Lester Kahl, 24 years old, pleaded guilty to the murder of his wife, Margaret, on his farm Sept. 15, last, before Circuit Judge Frank Burton here today and was sentenced to hang at the county jail, Dec. 22.

Sentence was pronounced after the Judge had heard arguments, in which Kahl's lawyer pleaded for mercy for the defendant on the ground that Kahl had been drunk when he shot his wife to death. In fixing the supreme penalty, Judge Burton declared:

"If ever a crime deserved punishment by death, the murder of Mrs. Kahl does. This was a cold-blooded slaying. The Court feels that it would be sadly remiss in duty if the defendant were let off with a life sentence."

Kahl, who previously had pleaded not guilty and was to be brought to trial shortly, changed his plea on advice of counsel, who feared for him if the case was given to a jury. The slayer appeared surprised and crestfallen during the arguments and was almost overcome when sentence was pronounced.

He confessed to county authorities that he had lured his wife, a bride of two weeks, to a field, telling her to hand him a shotgun as he wanted to shoot doves. Taking the gun, he sent her into a fence row to drive out the birds and turned the gun on her. When she was dead he wrapped the body in a horse blanket and buried it in a shallow grave. Later, a search was made for Mrs. Kahl and her husband, arrested on suspicion, broke down under long questioning. They had quarreled, he said, over a girl he had known before their marriage.

FARMERS' UNION AGAINST HOWELL-BARKLEY BILL

Resolution Condemning Measure Adopted at Oklahoma City Meeting.

A resolution condemning the Howell-Barkley Bill to abolish the Railroad Labor Board, was adopted last week by the National Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America meeting in Oklahoma City, Okla. Copies of the resolution were received in St. Louis yesterday and, it is understood, will be distributed to Congressmen on Monday. The resolution condemns the measure and instructs the organization's representatives to oppose all such legislation offered before Congress.

The resolution describes the bill as "both dangerous to the peace and tranquility that exists between capital and labor and detrimental to the agricultural masses," and recommends "such amendments to the present law as will guarantee a reduction in freight and a continuation of the amicable interests that

CLOSING OF UNIVERSITY HILLS RECALLS EARLY SPANISH DAYS

Property Now in Center of University City Was Given to Reigning Beauty by Territorial Governor.

The closing of University Hills recalls the romance of early Spanish days. University Hills, in the center of University City, a property of the Cyrus Crane-Wilmore Organization Inc., has been in the market for only months, but the announcement is now made that of the several hundred lots only a few remain and based on the active interest and rate of sale the last available lot will be sold within the next 30 days.

The rapid sale of lots in University Hills has probably set a record for large residential plots in this city. Back more than a century ago when all this territory was Spanish property and St. Louis was a part of Louisiana, Mme. Papin, reigning beauty of the little St. Louis settlement, entertained the Spanish territorial Governor. In appreciation for the hospitality Mme. Papin received title to survey 378, a summertime estate of some several thousand acres, where now most of the finest St. Louis homes stand. The western edge of survey 378 was University Hills.

Another three-quarters of a century passed and the University Hills part of survey 378 passed into the hands of the Creveling family. There the Creveling estate remained, aloof from the advancing growth, obstinate in the possession of the high hills. It was not until many years after University City became, a duly incorporated city, long after the fine homes of the city had been built up to and beyond the Creveling acres, that they would consent to relinquish their estate for the building of homes.

When the Cyrus Crane-Wilmore organization finally came in possession of University Hills, a ready market was waiting. University Hills, because of the high-grade improvements and the building restrictions, is virtually a private park of many oak-studded acres.

The Willmore organization announces that no price advance has been put on the few remaining lots and terms of purchase are such that payments may be extended over several years.

Work of Gathering Agricultural Statistics for Government Will Begin Dec. 1.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Taking the measure of the farmers and the farms of the country, in accordance with an act of Congress requiring the enumeration of a census of agriculture every five years, will begin Dec. 1 and continue until completed, which is expected to be on or before Jan. 31, 1925.

Everything is in readiness for the 15,000 to 20,000 enumerators to sally forth on their visits to the more than 6,000,000 farms of the country and put down in black and white the important details concerning them. The farmers themselves have been prepared for these visits by the use of sample questionnaires which have been widely distributed in order to familiarize them with the information required.

There were 6,448,343 farms in the country at the last decennial census in 1920 and the value of the properties was $77,924,100,328.

The inquiries which the farmers will be asked to answer number 178 and include the facts concerning farm tenure, acreage, values, debt, expenses, co-operation in marketing, farm facilities, including the number of tractors, and whether the farm is equipped with a radio outfit; population, crops harvested, forests and forest products, and livestock and livestock products. TWO MEN MUST SERVE MAIL ROBBERY SENTENCES

Patrick Conway and Hunter Dalton Were Given Two Years Each for Attempted Holdup in 1922.

Patrick Conway, St. Louis police character, and Hunter Dalton, former Granite City saloonkeeper who is said to be living in St. Louis now, have been notified to appear in District Court at Springfield, Ill., tomorrow to be formally committed and begin serving sentences of two years each in Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for conspiracy to rob the United States mail of $83,000 at Granite City in April, 1922.

Both men have been out on bond since their conviction in June, 1923, in District Court at Springfield. Conway was found guilty also of the charge of assault upon a postal employe and sentenced to eight years additional on this charge but the United States Circuit Court of Appeals cut off this sentence because of a "frameup" by which the two men were caught. The Appellate Court reviewed the case last July, affirming the two-year sentences of the two men.

Harold Bandy of Granite City, attorney for the men, said yesterday they expected to start serving their sentences at once.

The arrest of the men resulted from a statement to officials by a postal messenger, that Conway and Dalton arranged with him to rob the truck on which the shipment of money was consigned. Post-office inspectors and Granite City police secreted themselves along the route of the mail truck from the railroad station to a [illegible] captured the men when they attempted the holdup.

KEWANEE

Banishes the Smoke

Have you read the "Smoke" editorials in the St. Louis papers? There's a lot of fire behind them. The Post-Dispatch says "Smoke is a menace to the city. Our homes, our health and our livelihood are in the balance." Pretty warm, that. The Star says "The smoke nuisance is horrible and a disgrace to St. Louis," and asks this pertinent question:

"Why should not a lot of big boiler plants be overhauled so as to consume the coal fed into them?"

Let us answer this: The only way to overhaul some of these boilers is to throw them out. They can't consume all the gases. They are not built that way. There's only one boiler made that's smokeless and that's the KEWANEE ALL-STEEL SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILER.

We build it to be smokeless—it is smokeless, and that's why we advertise it as smokeless. The smokeless device is part of the boiler. It's built in at the factory, and it is so efficient that it will burn any kind of fuel without smoke.

So, if you want your big plants to be smokeless, and still save money by using the cheapest grades of fuel, recommend the Kewanee Smokeless boiler and your problem is solved. We have a lot of boilers at work in St. Louis, and so—

We respectfully invite the Director of Public Safety to investigate the Kewanee plants and see what he can see. We are ready to take him on a tour of inspection. Why not?

7 ST. LOUISANS NAMED COLONELS BY BAKER

Governor-Elect Selects Personal Staff in Advance of Inauguration.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—Governor-elect Sam A. Baker today made the first announcement of appointments for his administration, which begins on Jan. 12, by designating 25 honorary Colonels who will constitute the Governor's personal staff. The 25 appointees each receive the rank of Colonel, and rank as aides-de-camp to the Governor.

The appointments carry no salary and the benefits are honorary only. The colonels appear in full-dress uniforms at all State functions and on occasions when visiting celebrities are entertained. Each appointee must spend between $200 and $300 personally in obtaining uniforms and equipment.

Appointment of the honorary Colonels always gives the Governor an opportunity to pay political obligations to some of his supporters without placing them in a position attached to the State pay roll. The St. Louis men appointed Colonels by Baker are: Arthur J. Freund, George Elgel, William K. Hughes, George Baptiste, A. H. Meyer, Dr. James Stewart and C. D. Hicks. H. B. Talbot was the only man appointed to the staff from St. Louis County.

Among others appointed were Dr. Cortez F. Enloe of Jefferson City, Hyde appointee as Secretary of the State Board of Health, who was an active supporter of Baker in the campaign, and C. U. Phillips of St. Joseph, a Hyde appointee as a member of the St. Joseph Board of Police Commissioners. These two are the only colonels appointed by Baker who held similar rank on Gov. Hyde's staff. William Phares of Maryville, chairman of the Republican State Committee, and W. C. McAlee of Springfield, who was supported by South Missouri Republicans for the State chairmanship, also were appointed colonels. Other members of the staff announced by Baker are:

Dr. Frank B. Hiller, Kansas City; M. A. O'Donnell, Kansas City; William Bulcholz, Kansas City; Walter Rathborne, Springfield; Jesse Tolerton, Springfield; C. L. Proctor, Joplin; A. E. Haigh, Jefferson City; D. M. Oberman, Jefferson City; and Charles Marquand, Chamois.

World Now Has 285,000 Co-operative Societies

Federal Trade Commission Says Plan Has Become One of Most Prominent Features of Economic Structure.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Co-operative organizations through which groups of producers or consumers band themselves together to deal in commercial markets has become "one of the most prominent features of the economic structure of the world," the Federal Trade Commission declared today in a special report. A description of the co-operative situation in 15 foreign countries, prepared largely from data collected by Chairman Huston Thompson and Dr. William Notz, chief of the commission's export trade division, was given.

There are now 285,000 co-operative organizations in the world, the commission estimated, through which 120,000,000 persons carry on co-operative selling or buying. In Europe, it was declared, the shock of the European war and post-war adjustments found in the co-operative organizations "in many cases" the strongest basis upon which reconstruction could be laid.

"In some of the largest countries of Europe, like the United Kingdom, Germany and France," the report continued, "the consumers' co-operative societies rank among the largest producers and distributors of necessaries of life. In England and Germany nearly half the population is affiliated with the consumers, wholesale and retail societies."

The net surplus of the English co-operatives in 1922 amounted to $70,000,000, it was declared, while the Union of Swiss consumers had a surplus of 14,455,215 Swiss francs in 1921.

Freedom from State interference and educational effort has served to allow the large scale development of the co-operative enterprises, the report said. Some European methods might not be wholly compatible with American conditions, it was pointed out, but room for development along the same line within the United States was suggested and discussed.

Farmers' co-operatives, the report said, might profitably extend their efforts for more direct marketing of foodstuffs to consumers, and wholesale co-operative associations for dealing in agricultural products might be encouraged.

Co-operation in rural districts for the supply of credit, for the distribution of electric power, coal and retailing generally, and extension of co-operative enterprise for export of American products were among the possibilities seen.

WESTERN ROADS ORDERED TO DEFER GRAIN RATE INCREASES

Operation of New Schedules Suspended Until March 31.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Western railroads which proposed to make effective Dec. 1 increases in rates on grain and grain products between producing points in the Mississippi-Missouri territory and the Southeastern quarter of the United States were required under an Interstate Commerce Commission order today to defer the action temporarily.

The commission suspended until March 31 the operation of the new schedules and in the interval will investigate and determine the justice of the increases involved.

As an example of the results which would have been brought about by the new schedules the commission order said that the proposed rates from Hastings, Neb., to Memphis, Tenn., would have been 44½ cents per 100 pounds on wheat against 42 cents, the present rate; to New Orleans 61½ cents, against 53½; and to Vicksburg, Miss., 58½ cents, as against 53½ cents.

ROCK ISLAND'S ALLEGED "VICE KING" IN CHICAGO

J. P. Looney, Whereabouts Known Only to Detective, to Return Home and Fight Charges.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—John P. Looney, former publisher of the Rock Island (Ill.) News, wanted in that city to answer numerous indictments, among them one charging murder, is in Chicago, to arrange bonds before surrendering to Rock Island authorities, according to Thomas White, operative of a private detective agency, to whom Looney surrendered last Thursday after coming here from his ranch in New Mexico. White said that Looney intended returning to Rock Island to answer the charges against him Monday.

Looney is said to have eaten Thanksgiving dinner with his family in Ottawa, and on his way here to have passed through Rock Island. White, whose investigations in Rock Island of the so-called "vice war," one of the victims of which was Looney's son, John, resulted in four men being sent to the penitentiary for the slaying, said he would accompany Looney back to Rock Island Monday to see that he got "fair play."

Looney has entered a general denial of all the charges, asserting that instead of being the "vice king" of Rock Island, he had been merely the defender of the rights of unfortunates there. It was not fear of death at the hands of his enemies that caused him to leave Rock Island 10 days after the slaying of his son, which followed the killing of William C. Gabel, a saloonkeeper who was alleged to have confessed to Federal authorities, implicating Looney, but a threatened attack of tuberculosis, White said Looney told him.

In addition to the charges against him in Rock Island, Looney is due to appear in Federal Court in Peoria Monday morning to answer an indictment for alleged transportation of a stolen automobile from Iowa to Illinois.

KILLS DIVORCED WIFE WITH WHOM HE LIVED 50 YEARS

70-Year-Old Farmer Then Turns Gun on Himself; Couple Were Parents of 13 Children.

By the Associated Press.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Nov. 25.—John G. Taylor, farmer, living 15 miles northwest of here, late yesterday shot and killed his recently divorced wife, to whom he had been married for nearly 50 years, and then turned the gun on himself, dying instantly. The Taylors were parents of 13 children.

According to officers who investigated the double killing, Taylor had been away from home for five or six weeks, visiting among his married children. His presence in the neighborhood was unknown to his family or the neighbors.

Both Taylor and his wife were almost 70 years old. They were divorced in September. Bitterness over the separation is believed by neighbors to have led Taylor to his act.

Article in Next Week's "Churchman" to Criticise Omission—Church Heads Blamed.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Bishop William T. Manning, tonight denied that he had been consulted about alleged omission of the word "Protestant" from the corporate name of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America in New York newspaper advertising, which will be criticised in next week's issue of The Churchman, an Episcopal publication.

The periodical will say that the Bishop and officials at the church's national headquarters here acquiesced in the reported elision and that it was made improperly at the direction of officials of the New York Clerical Union for the maintenance and defense of Catholic principles.

"The matter has never been brought to my attention," Bishop Manning said. "I know nothing about it. The title that should be used is the official title of the church."

Admits Story Is Right.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McCommas, rector of St. Paul's Church, and president of the New York Clerical Union, admitted that in the main the facts to be presented by The Churchman are correct. He said he was abroad when the action was taken but heartily approves of it.

The Churchman will publish two letters addressed to Dr. McCommas which he said he had not yet received. One is from the National Church League; the other is from the Protestant Episcopal Society for the Promotion of Evangelical Knowledge.

The former body accuses the Clerical Union of starting a "tricky and disloyal" movement.

Protestant in Charter.

"This society is amazed that a vicar of Trinity parish," the other writes, "the charter of which proclaims that it is a protestant parish and that its minister shall be a Protestant minister, should be a party to this surreptitious attempt to undermine in the minds of the general public the historic and conventional title of this church. We remind you that according to the charter of the corporation of Trinity Church its endowments are dependent upon the preservation of the word 'Protestant' in its title."

The New York Clerical Union for the maintenance and defense of Catholic principles is composed of some 250 priests of the Protestant Episcopal church of the five dioceses of New York, Long Island, Newark, New Jersey and Connecticut. The Churchman will say that at its September meeting the union "decided to make an attempt to change the title of the church advertising from Protestant Episcopal to Episcopal." It will charge that in calling in a representative of the advertising agency which was later to be the medium of communicating with the newspapers, Dr. McCommas told him that the word "Protestant" applied only to a condition three centuries ago; that it had lost the significance and weight it formerly had and was a hindrance to the home mission work of the church.

GAME WARDENS RAID CLUB

Two men, who said they were State deputy game wardens, took 12 wild ducks and 37 quail from the refrigerator at the University Club yesterday. The ducks are said to have belonged to Henry W. Blodgett, an attorney, and the quail to Dr. Malvern Clopton, Dr. Elliot R. Dixon and Andrew H. McCreery, all members of the club, who killed the game.

Immediately after the raid a complaint was made to members of the Fish and Game Commission, and it is said a promise was made to return the game. About a year ago a raid was made on the club, and in the subsequent court action it was held the game was not stored there illegally.

LONELY DANE'S LETTER WINS HIM A TRIP TO HOMELAND

Proceeds From Reception to Danish Minister to Go to Homesick Countryman.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A lonely old Dane soon is to climb aboard a liner for a visit to Denmark that he hoped for but did not expect. He will make the trip because Constantin Brun, Minister to this country from Denmark, agreed to attend a reception in his honor at a hotel here last night, only on condition that the proceeds be used to afford some penurious fellow countryman a chance to see his homeland.

Reading about the coming reception in a paper, a Dane who had been in a hospital for months wrote to the committee in charge, expressing no hope that the gift would be his, but praising the plan and describing the pain homesickness can bring. His picture was so vivid that the search for a candidate for the ocean voyage was ended right there.

A Big Tooth in the Old Swimmin'-Hole

Anywhere from 10,000 to 500,000 years ago the mastodon that lost this three-pound molar inhabited St. Louis County—The Florissant boy who found it in a creek near his home was right when he suggested it would make a whale of a toothache—Incidentally, the world's biggest deposit of bones of this extinct animal was uncovered 24 years ago only 20 miles from St. Louis

THE Perkins boy and his chums were bathing in the old swimming hole. It was not much for size, being merely a sluggish pool in the creek. Moreover, it had a muddy bottom. If you stepped on anything unusual when wading, you couldn't see what it was. You had to dive, if the water was deep enough to require that, or you had to reach your hand down into the muddied water and feel around for the obstruction in case you felt like getting it out of your way.

Several times, splashing about, the Perkins boy had stepped on something he didn't like to step on. It felt rough and hard, though when he tickled it with his toes he found a place on it slick like glass. The boy finally made up his mind that he was going to get that pesky thing out of the swimming hole, so he "dove" down and pried it out of the mud. It made a handful, in fact, the diver brought it up in both hands and held it aloft for his chums to see.

"Gee! It's a tooth, Perk!" cried the nearest boy.

"And a whale of a tooth, too!" remarked another.

And a tooth in truth it was; even a schoolboy could tell that, at first glance. The Perkins boy and his mates never had seen a tooth of anything like its size, nor heard of one. If they hadn't had the monster tooth in hand they simply couldn't have believed it. But there it was.

"Jiminy!" the Perkins boy commented; "wouldn't you hate to have the toothache in a tooth as big as that?"

"Yes, but s'pose you had to have a tooth like that pulled? Oh, my!"

"Or have to pay the dentist to fill it if it got a cavity in it?"

Such queries as these were put by sundry persons, big and little, for more than a year after the Perkins boy "pulled" the big tooth from the creek bottom and carried it home. The idea of having a toothache in a "grinder" that weighed, as did this one, exactly three pounds, became the favorite joke in the small circle wherein moved the Perkins boy and his people.

They live in the old town of Florissant, St. Louis County, Mo., where the inhabitants take pride in showing visitors the house that was built when the neighboring city of St. Louis was just a suggestion of a settlement. For more than a year—from the midsummer of 1923 to the eve of the memorable voting saturnalia of the autumn of 1924, to be exact—those Florissant folks never suspected that they possessed, in the big molar the Perkins boy had found up the creek two and a half miles northwest of town, a relic so ancient that the oldest house in Florissant would seem to have been built only the day before yesterday.

But Mrs. Ray Perkins, mother of the boy who found the tooth, had suspected all along that the relic must be "terribly old." She thought it should be shown to somebody who knew about such matters. There was Dr. Otto N. Schudde of Ferguson, the Perkins family doctor. Maybe Dr. Schudde could tell what kind of an animal it was that had shed the tooth, and about how long ago it flourished. Mrs. Perkins turned the tooth over to the doctor, and he permitted the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine photographer to take pictures of it. He also weighed and measured the molar, finding its weight to be just three pounds, the dimensions of the grinding surface five and one-half by four inches, the height of the tooth five and a half inches. The ends of the three roots, however, had been broken off by frequent handling since the relic was recovered, and this measurement relates to the tooth as it is now. The enamel on the grinding surface is white and black in color, the concave of the cusps is brown.

W. Courtney Werner of the geological department at Washington University, to whom the photographs of the "find" were shown, remarked immediately:

"Mastodon Americanus—no need to see the tooth itself."

The American mastodon was about the size of the Indian elephant of this age, and somewhat smaller than the African elephant of today. The late Jumbo, exploited by Barnum, was an African elephant—the biggest ever seen in America. It is regarded as probable that the mastodon which used the tooth found in the creek near Florissant was a foot or so less tall than Jumbo.

Missouri seems to have been a favorite feeding ground for these big beasts of a remote past. While it is unique to find a mastodon's tooth in an old swimming hole anywhere, it is nothing startling to unearth such a relic, or a jawbone, thighbone or other part of a mastodonic skeleton, in this general region.

In fact, the village of Kimmswick, Mo., has the distinction of being the place where more mastodon skeletons have been found than at any other place in the world. The big unearthing took place 24 years ago, L. W. Beehler being the discoverer of these remains of a species long extinct.

Frederic A. Lucas, director of the American Museum of Natural History, says in one of his books that "If one may judge by the abundance of bones, mastodons must have been very numerous in some favored localities, such as parts of Michigan, Florida and Missouri and about Big Bone Lick, Ky. Perhaps the most noteworthy of all deposits is that at Kimmswick, about 20 miles south of St. Louis, where, in a limited area, Mr. L. W. Beehler has exhumed bones representing several hundred individuals, varying in size from a mere baby mastodon up to the great tusker whose worn-out teeth proclaim that he had reached the limit of even mastodonic old age."

The big tooth found in a St. Louis County swimmin' hole makes a handful, as you will notice.

The mastodon that owned the tooth now under discussion must have been another "great tusker" of extreme age. Because the grinding surface of the tooth is much worn, Mr. Werner concludes that this mastodon may have been somewhere between 100 and 200 years old when it ceased to have use for its molars.

"The spot where this remarkable deposit was found," continues Director Lucas in his allusion to Kimmswick, "is at the foot of a bluff near the junction of two little streams, and it seems probable that in the days when these were larger the spring floods swept down the bodies of animals that had perished during the winter to ground in an eddy beneath the bluff. Or as the place abounds in springs of sulphur and salt water, it may be that this was where the animals assembled during cold weather, just as the moas are believed to have gathered in the swamps of New Zealand, and here the weaker died and left their bones.

"The mastodon must have looked very much like any other elephant, though a little shorter in the legs and somewhat more heavily built than either of the living species, while the head was a trifle flatter and the jaw decidedly longer. The tusks are a variable quantity, sometimes merely swinging outward, often curving upward to form a half-circle; they were never as long as the largest mammoth tusks, but to make up for this they were a shade stouter for their length. As the mastodon ranged well to the north it is fair to suppose that he may have been covered with long hair. • • •

"As for the size of the mastodon, this, like that of the mammoth, is popularly much overestimated, and it is more than doubtful of any attained the height of a full-grown African elephant. The largest femur, or thigh-bone, that has come under the writer's notice was one he measured as it lay in the earth at Kimmswick, and this was just four feet long, three inches shorter than the thigh-bone of Jumbo. Several of the largest thigh-bones measured show so striking an inanimity in size, between 46 and 47 inches in length, that we may be pretty sure they represent the average old 'bull' mastodon, and if we say that these animals stood 10 feet high we probably are doing them full justice."

Mr. Lucas is of opinion that man had appeared on the American continent before the disappearance of the mastodon; though this, of course, is but conjectural. It is mentioned that Mr. Beehler found in the deposit at Kimmswick an Indian arrowhead, but it is pointed out that this may have belonged to a later age and have penetrated to the layer where the mastodons' skeletons were uncovered.

That man and mastodon were contemporaneous in this country, including what is now the State of Missouri, can be neither proved nor disproved by evidence now in hand. The earliest native drawings found in American caves or elsewhere give no suggestion that the prehistoric Indians ever saw a mastodon.

Well, but how long ago lived the mastodon that ate grass with the molar found by the Perkins boy in the creek near Florissant? "How old was Ann?" Mr. Werner of Washington University says that scientists admit that these animals may have lived as late as 10,000 years ago, and on the other hand that half a million years may have elapsed since they became extinct. Somewhere betwixt and between those indefinite dates may answer for the Florissant specimen.

Unfortunately, Missouri mastodons failed to write autobiographies such as are intelligible to the naked eye of the present-day lord of this continent. Really, about the only absolutely definite thing to be said about them is that the Perkins boy was right when he surmised that anybody would hate to have a toothache in as big a tooth as that he removed from the old swimming hole. Also, it is certain that to pay for filling a cavity in such a molar would make some dent in a most plethoric bank roll.

Father Neptune's Slow Mail Delivery

AFTER 22 years a message in a bottle, thrown overboard in the Arctic by the explorer Amundsen, has just been washed up on the coast of Spitzbergen. Father Neptune takes a long time to deliver his mails, and when the barnacle-incrusted bottle does drift ashore at last it often contains tragic news.

Years ago a black cook on board the British ship Buckingham murdered the skipper. The vessel was near Bermuda at the time, and as she carried no wireless the mate intrusted the story of the crime to a bottle, hoping that it would be washed up on the island.

It was found 5000 miles away, on one of the Shetland Islands. Nearly three years had passed, and the negro had vanished.

Cruel practical jokes have been played by means of bottle messages. Many fakes were picked up after the loss of the Waratah, which went down without leaving any trace off the South African coast.

A bottle message told the world of the loss with all hands of the Atlantic liner President. She was due to arrive at Liverpool in March, 1841, but became long overdue. At last a ship at sea picked up a bottle containing a scrap of paper with the message from Tyrone Power, a celebrated comedian of those days. It is said that the vessel was sinking in a gale as he wrote.

There is a scientific use, too, for Neptune's mails. "Drift bottles," containing a request to the finder to post back an inclosed card, recording on it the date and place at which it was picked up, have been liberated by the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries. From the data valuable information concerning ocean drifts may be gathered.

Some of these bottles will doubtless lie unnoticed on lonely beaches, but in the past many such "drift bottles" have been recovered. One bottle drifted 8000 miles in 1000 days. It was thrown overboard near Sierra Leone, on the West African coast, and, borne by a current setting eastward, reached the place where many bottles have been found—the Shetland Islands.

Strange Story of a Burial Cave in Missouri

Legend persists in the Ozarks that a farmer of Miller County arranged for odd disposition of his body — While a fiddler played "Rosin the Bow," the internal organs were to be removed and sealed in a jar, then the coffin and demijohn of whisky were to be put in cave overlooking Tavern Creek — After seven years, to the same music and drinking the whisky, the same men were to open tomb and burn internal organs — Then, "if nothing unusual happened," the cave was to be resealed for another 7-year period

The doctor and his assistant prepared the body according to instructions, then placed the coffin and jar containing the vital organs in the cave, along with a 5-gallon demijohn of whisky, while the fiddler played "Rosin the Bow."

THE following account of an affair which has been the subject of discussion in Miller County, Mo., for many years, was written for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine by Frederick J. Liesmann, author, of Dixon, Mo.

By FREDERICK J. LIESMANN.

"FURTHERMORE, the above-mentioned parties do covenant and agree that for the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars ($150) each, in hand paid, the said Dr. N—— and his assistant, Livingston, and the fiddler shall on my death take charge of my remains; that the said Dr. N—— and his assistant, Livingston, shall open my body and remove therefrom all the internal organs"——

It should be understood, before the text of this strange covenant proceeds, that it is not the flight of imagination. There is no attempt here to emulate the grewsome concoctions of Edgar Allan Poe or even to put an additional strain upon a public already overloaded with "mystery" stories.

This contract actually was drawn up, in the late '40s or early '50s, in the Ozarks of Miller County, Mo. Moreover, the executor of it, one Wilson, was a man well above the average of his neighbors in intelligence, wealth and social standing. Indeed, it is the high standing of this practical man of affairs that makes the contract a really extraordinary document.

But why should such a strange contract be made?

Judging from such of the covenant as has been quoted, the natural inference probably would be that the testator was afflicted with some terrible disease and that he desired to offer his remains for examination in the interest of science; or one easily might get the idea that some malignant plague was decimating the population and that this good citizen was offering his inanimate body to assist the medical profession in finding a solution. In either case, his action, though commendable, would be far from being extraordinary.

This theory would receive additional weight from the next clause of the contract which, quoted in substance though probably not in exact text, follows:

——"after which they shall fill my body with salt and properly inclose the same and carefully seal my internal organs within a jar."

Of course that was his idea! Any amateur Sherlock Holmes would deduce that it was a case of assisting science. A blind man, riding for his life, could feel that much with a stick! The body must be preserved; and in the pioneer days salt was the only available preservative.

So far so good. But now comes the document with a ninth-inning rally, an overhand punch from the floor:

"When this is done, it is my will that my body be put in a coffin and that the coffin, with the jar containing my internal organs, be deposited in the large cave in the bluff which faces the foot of my farm"—— And the scientific aspect of the affair goes down and out.

Yet, if the last injunction be devastating, what can be said of the next:

——"along with a sealed demijohn containing five gallons of the best whisky"——

Truly, at this sentence one gets a conception of Sherlock Holmes squealing for the needle, Monsieur Lecoq rolling himself into a pill and Craig Kennedy taking a train out of town. Leaving the job for you and me!

Very well. We accept the challenge, and though we may not be able to say with the great Roman, "I came, I saw, I conquered," we shall, at least, be eligible to the claim that we came and saw. What we see next increases the interest:

——"after which the entrance to the cave shall be walled up and left for seven years, unless there be some unusual and visible disturbance in the meantime."

With seven years to wait and with a future dominated by that hint of spiritual voices and ghostly apparitions we respectfully turn over this part of the investigation to those two valiant knights of the British Empire, Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir Conan Doyle. We are willing to go back to the protoplasm but not willing to go forward to the ectoplasm.

However, as true Ozarkers, we are willing to go to the mat with anything even remotely approximating our weight and class. Looking about for an opponent of such qualifications, what do we find? Why, the fiddler, of course. The fiddler mentioned in the first paragraph. Bring on the fiddler. What about the fiddler? With reference to the fiddler the contract says:

"While the above-mentioned Dr. N—— and his assistant, Livingston, are preparing my body as I have directed, the fiddler shall play 'Rosin the Bow,' and I further direct that there be furnished a sufficient quantity of good whisky to brace the nerves of these three for the work of preparing my body."

Really, this last precaution was superfluous—except, possibly, as regarded the fiddler. With a genuine Ozark fiddler playing Creek Music at his elbow, any red-blooded man should be able to face with credit to himself any possible combination of circumstances.

Creek Music produces exactly the same effect as is achieved by inhaling brandy. As a bracer, a good Creek fiddler easily is equal to the wounded piper of the Gordon Highlanders at Dargai. Especially since the music of both springs from the same source.

The only difference is that Creek Music is a mere variation of the original Scotch and Irish melodies of Colonial days, and accurately portrays the temperamental variation induced by drifting a few generations of Scotch and Irish from the Carolinas and Virginia westward through Kentucky and Tennessee into Missouri.

The fiddler really is a very important detail. The Ozark fiddler always plays in the second position, times with his foot and by a rigorous adherence to his own ideas of tuning and execution has evolved a music almost as original as that of the American Indian. Creek Music is a psychological outcrop, born of the stress and danger of primitive life.

It typifies the bare-handed pioneer rushing to meet the wilderness—at catch weights, with hitting in the clinches and no holds barred. The European musical technician finds it impossible and invincible; and no man brought up on it ever loses one iota of its savage exhilaration or its fierce appeal.

Obviously, the musical side of the bargain achieves fourth dimensional class, and therefore should be respectfully submitted to the eminent Dr. Einstein. With all the elements which involve deep scientific stuff thus sublet to competent contractors, the problem is skinned down to the bare bones and comes within the proper purview of the amateur nutcracker. Clearly, the logical proceeding is to take a change of venue to the beginning and demand a re-hearing of the entire case.

The story has the earmarks of legend. Ordinarily, it would be dismissed as pure phantasy. To this the Man from Miller County offers most vigorous denial. The Man from Miller County is highly intelligent, a voracious reader and a tireless investigator, born and reared in the very Tavern country where the thing took place.

With the exception of a paltry few hundred thousand years he knows the intimate history of Miller County as far back as the day of Adam.

"What of this yarn about the old man who had all his inner tubing barreled up and planted in a cave with five gallons of whisky and the rest of him?"

"It's the unimpeachable truth, so help me Moses," replied the Man. "It happened right in my home country. The walled cave is there today, and he's in it. It's a favorite picnic place. I know all the facts."

"Shoot 'em, son, shoot 'em."

Whereat the Miller County Man delivered substantially the following broadside:

"Tavern Creek runs roughly north through Miller County, past Bray's and Claxby, and strikes the Osage above St. Elizabeth. You know, it's a wonderful country."

Ay, indeed! And so does everyone else who has seen the beautiful land which lies between Tavern and Grand Glaize; the sun-splashed, wheat-gilded hill tops glimmering against the sea-blue wall of the horizon; the smooth, green meadow land; the bottoms dark green with rustling corn. There is an architectural stateliness about Tavern corn; a glance down the rows reminds one of cathedral arches. Rube Helton, the Ozark Philosopher, says of it:

"Thust, ef you'd run a footrace down atween them

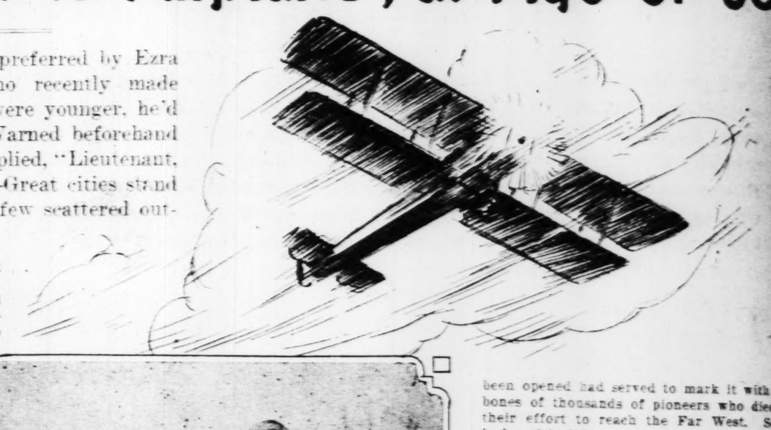
From Ox-Team to Airplane, at Age of 93

The newest way of travel is the one preferred by Ezra Meeker, Oregon Trail pioneer, who recently made voyage from coast to coast—If he were younger, he'd have a ship of his own, he says—Warned beforehand of hazards by U. S. Army pilot, he replied, "Lieutenant, any time you get tired, we'll land"—Great cities stand now on sites where he remembers a few scattered outposts, 75 years ago



"ONE HUNDRED miles an hour, and it seemed like rocking in a cradle!"

This is how Ezra Meeker, who will be 94 years old on Dec. 29, next, describes his recent trip by airplane from Vancouver Barracks, in the state of Washington, to Washington, D. C. Such a journey still is an exploit, even when performed by devil-may-care young pilots of the U. S. Army Air Service. And Meeker's trip aroused more than ordinary interest because of his advanced age, his prominence in the West, and the fact that the first part of his route followed the famous Oregon Trail, with which Meeker's name has been associated since the early 1850s.

After half a century of prosperous farming in Washington, whither he went as one of the pioneers, Meeker now makes his home in Seattle.

"I have traveled the Oregon Trail by practically every means of transportation known to man," said Meeker, in a recent interview. "I have seen the time between the two ends of the trail gradually reduced from almost six months, which was required for my first trip by ox team, to the 13 1-2 hours required for doing it in an airplane.

"Personally, my preference is for the airplane method of travel."

The stretch of 13 1-2 hours covered, of course, only the Oregon Trail portion of Meeker's transcontinental journey. Old memories put a halo of romance on the first part of the long trip. But the venerable traveler enjoyed it all, from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

"It was like being in another world," continued Meeker. "I floated along, as on the wings of the wind, watching unfurl below me a winding highway that seemed but a smooth silver ribbon, yet which I knew to be the same trail over which I had struggled painfully three-quarters of a century before.

"I saw huge cities, where my memory recorded the sites of a few scattered outposts in the pioneer days. I saw automobiles flash along the highways where once the oxen had humbly plodded. I saw great railroad trains travelling swiftly on their ribbons of steel.

"All of it spelled the faith that is in these United States, which has made of this vast country a cemented whole and the greatest leader of progress in the world. It made me even more proud of the fact that I am an American."

Ezra Meeker has a unique position in the history of the West. He first traveled the Oregon Trail in 1852, with patient oxen, at a time when the trail was scarcely more than well opened. Not yet 22, and with a wife and 2-months-old baby accompanying him, young Meeker set out to locate a home in the newly opened West, following the famous "covered wagon" route along the Oregon Trail.

Their only assets an indomitable spirit and a longing for land of their own, they left their parents' home at Eddyville, Ia., and joined a caravan which passed through Council Bluffs (then known as Kanesville), and for nearly six months fought the rugged wilderness which surrounded them on all sides.

Even the few years in which the trail then had been opened had served to mark it with the bones of thousands of pioneers who died in their effort to reach the Far West. Some had perished from the privations of the trail; others had been slain in Indian raids; illness had claimed many, for physicians were scarce along the way they traveled, and medicines were few.

In Puyallup Valley the Meekers found their ideal of "the promised land," and there they settled. Time brought prosperity and honors to the still young man, who became a more and more prominent figure in the West. Ezra Meeker could be counted upon to stand in the forefront of any movement that meant progress for his section. No labor was too arduous, no effort or expenditure too great, if it brought returns to his loved Westland.

Being by nature and inclination a go-getter, Meeker supported warmly anything which tended to bring the West into closer contact with the rest of the United States. He was one of the first to advocate transcontinental railroads, and while not actively engaged in the railroad business at any time, he always has taken great interest in new roads coming west. A pamphlet written by him in 1870, regarding the advantages of the West, was declared to be largely instrumental in bringing the Northern Pacific Railroad to that part of the country.

In 1910, because of his desire to see adequate markers placed along the Oregon Trail, thus insuring it against obliteration by the advancing tide of civilization, Meeker journeyed once more across the continent, starting back over the well-known highway with another ox team and a prairie schooner, a replica in every particular of the outfit in which he made the first trip.

Through his efforts citizens along the way were induced to raise the necessary funds for erecting 171 monuments which forever establish the route traveled by the pioneers of the '40s and '50s.

"This, too, was a wonderful experience," Meeker said. "To see the cities, which had emerged from the towns to which the trading posts had given way, provided a thrill that will not soon be forgotten. There was little in common between the rough-hewn trail over which we first pressed into the wilderness and the splendid system of roads which even then was coming into existence. Today, of course, the highways are practically completed, a fact that I attribute to the rapid development of the automobile."

Nine years ago, on his eighty-fifth birthday, the American Pathfinders' Association gave to Meeker an automobile which had been built especially for him. The body was fashioned along the lines of the old "prairie schooner," and the occasion of the presentation marked another cross-country trip for Ezra Meeker. Over the highways and byways he rode, his vehicle attracting attention in every village and city through which he passed, and once again bringing to the attention of the whole continent the section which the aged pioneer represented.

Stopping at every city, Meeker in addresses emphasized the importance of an adequate highway between the East and the West, pointing out the historic value of having such a highway follow the route traveled by the original pioneers over the Oregon Trail. He became so enthusiastic over the idea of a national highway stretching across the old trail into the Far West that, as prosperity had smiled upon him and left him with plenty of

The Wolfer's Job in the Cattle Country

Most troublesome of all the predatory wild animals in the western cattle country is the big gray wolf, also called "lobo" and "loafer." More than a match for hunting dogs, the gray wolf can be destroyed only with traps or poison. Drawn by David M. Newell.

He has the most difficult work of all the men who, in protecting the ranches' livestock, hunt predatory animals for the Government—The gray wolf is scarce and a great traveler, but in six months he will kill from 60 to 200 or 300 calves—The wolfer finds dogs useless against an animal which often weighs 150 pounds and is both fleet and a dangerous fighter—But traps and poison baits are successful, if handled by one who knows the ways of the "lobo" — Reminiscent of frontier days is this article about professional hunters in Western States :: :: ::

By DAVID M. NEWELL.

DURING some time spent in the predatory animal work of the Biological Survey I had occasion to learn a little about wolves—both the big gray wolf and the coyote, or prairie wolf. Most of my information I gleaned from other men in the service, and from old, independent trappers. Some I gained from the wolves themselves.

I was not a wolf hunter. My job was the hunting of mountain lions, bobcats and cattle-killing bears, with a pack of hounds trained for the purpose. Of course, I was expected to kill any kind of wolf when the occasion presented itself, but I was in no sense classed as a wolfer.

This was exceedingly fortunate for me. Excepting only a few coyotes, which I trapped more or less by accident, I failed to make any inroads on the wolf family.

With the possible exception of a cattle-killing grizzly, the gray wolf is the worst enemy of Western ranchmen. Let me make this clear. I do not mean that wolves, collectively, do more damage than some of the other animals, but that one wolf will kill more livestock in a year's time than any other animal. I believe that a wolf will kill twice as many calves as a mountain lion, and three to four times as many as the average bear.

There are today in the West five animals that may be classed as predatory and destructive. These are: wolves, mountain lions, stock-killing bears, coyotes and bobcats. In using the term "bobcat" I include the Canada lynx.

In the State of Arizona, where my own work lay, the grizzly bear is practically extinct. The survey reports three or four. Personally I know of only one. Therefore we may discount the grizzly. Some of the black and cinnamon bears are cattle-killers, but as a rule they are not nearly so destructive as a big lion or wolf.

The mountain lion—with rare exceptions—kills for food alone, staying near his kill until it has all been devoured or until the meat begins to taint. His favorite food is horse flesh, although he will often kill calves and deer. The gray wolf, commonly called "lobo" and "loafer," is a butcher. He kills for the love of killing.

No doubt the statistics show that more damage is done annually by lions than by wolves, but this is due to the greater number of lions and does not in any way disprove my statement that the wolf is the worst enemy of the rancher. Several times the Government has practically exterminated the gray wolf in the State, only to have more drift in from old Mexico.

The depredations of the coyotes and bobcats are mainly limited to sheep and very young calves. They both will kill fawns occasionally, and the bobcat is the worst enemy of the wild turkey. Coyotes kill a great many lambs every year, but, all things considered, neither bobcats nor the little yellow wolves can be classed with the "big three": lions, lobos and bears.

To emphasize my point, let me cite two examples of a lobo's method of killing—and the extent of that killing. One day a friend of mine who punches cows for a well-known outfit on the northern Apache reservation was riding the range with one of the boys from across the river. Their attention was attracted by the distant bellowing of cattle, and they rode out on a point of rock and looked down over the rim into the canyon.

On the flat below an old she-wolf was teaching her three yearling pups to kill—and she was doing a good job. While they watched she leaped at a fleeing calf and with one slash cut the hamstring in his right hind leg. With another slash she put the calf's other leg out of business and left him bleeding and powerless to rise while she sought another victim. Neither of the boys had a rifle and it was too far to do anything with a six-shooter.

They galloped and slid down into the canyon, and on reaching the scene found eight calves down—two dead and the rest crippled and dying. The fact that the old wolf was teaching her pups to kill does not necessarily mean that she would have contented herself with one calf even had she been alone. As I stated before, a wolf is a natural killer.

The other instance is the case of an old desert wolf not so far from Phoenix. For five or six years this old dog wolf had evaded capture. He was officially credited with several thousand dollars' worth of stock killed and, as he did his work in a thoroughbred country, every calf that he killed meant a considerable loss.

Contrary to the usual habits of his kind, he stayed in one locality. Ordinarily this would have been a great aid to his destruction, but this old wolf was not an ordinary wolf. He knew more about traps than the trappers who tried to get him, and he would refuse all poison baits that were put out for him.

Finally, in desperation, the State Inspector drove out to go over the ground with one of his men and to try to devise a means of putting an end to the old wolf. It was desert country and the two men drove their car out to the wolf's range. As they were talking the wolf walked out into the open about 200 yards from them and stooged for a minute to look them over.

The inspector grabbed his rifle and took a snap shot. The wolf fell with a broken back, thus ending a five-year hunt.

One of the things that make wolf trapping so difficult is the fact that the wolf is a great traveler. He will be here today and gone tomorrow, so that the man who undertakes to get him must be a good trailer and be willing to travel with the wolf, follow his kills, study his habits and try to outguess him. Personally, I do not believe that the gray wolf is much more cunning than the coyote.

It again becomes a question of numbers. Were the lobo in as great abundance as the coyote I believe that there would be a great many more men considered successful wolfers. But both animals are cunning. I found this out when a coyote dug up my traps for me without springing them, and an old lobo walked all around a scent set and finally kicked dirt on my trap.

In the old days, when wolves were a vital problem to the ranchers, practically all of the big outfits maintained a professional wolf trapper—a wolfer. He usually was an old cowpuncher who no longer could stand the rough-and-tumble work of handling cattle. There are many of these old-timers still in the business today, and when it comes to catching wolves they are hard to beat.

I know of one in particular who has caught 2000 wolves (I give his figures!) and who is still catching wolves. He also is a good lion man and keeps three or four hounds in addition to his wolf traps. I have heard many stories about this old chap. It seems that he developed a system to satisfy the ranchers and at the same time to keep a good supply of wolves on hand. He received $50 bounty for each wolf that he caught, and it becomes apparent at once that no wolves meant no more money.

Is there, therefore, anything strange in the fact that out of about 200 wolves he caught for the outfit, some 180 were males? When the old man would catch a she-wolf in one of his traps he would turn her loose and wish her good luck!

But the old man caught lots of wolves, so he must be pardoned.

He worked on the principle that all animals are curious and the wolf especially so. He took advantage of this curiosity. He would set his traps and leave them for days until the human scent had vanished and then would ride by and, without dismounting, drop a very small amount of prepared scent from a bottle which he invariably carried in his hip pocket.

I am not a wolf, but I could always tell when the old man was coming. He prepared his own scent and had no use whatever for the scents put out by the various fur houses.

"Some fellers kin fetch loafers with store scent."

The Discovery of a New White Race in Darien

Despite obstructions in the river, spying Indians, native magic and mutiny of black boatmen, the expedition presses on — Search for the White Indians is like chasing will-o'-the-wisps or hunting pot of gold at rainbow's end—By a stratagem the explorers have meeting with a chief of the Cunas Bravos — Still later, at conference with the King of the San Blas tribes, he declares that all of the White Indians have gone away from Panama — "I know better," replies leader of expedition :: :: ::

THE search for the White Indians of Darien, in Panama, south of the Canal Zone, was no holiday jaunt. Some idea of the difficulties which had to be surmounted may be gotten from this second installment of the story of the expedition as told by R. O. Marsh, its organizer and leader. The party make their toilsome and perilous way up the Chucunaque River, past the "dead line" which not even the natives of the lower country dared to cross. There are interesting experiences with various chieftains, whose suspicion and reserve finally melt into friendliness. But the White Indians, whose existence has been rumored for 400 years, elude all the efforts of the expedition to see them. The story of how the White Indians were induced to come in from their hills by hundreds, and to face the explorers, will be described in the third and final installment of the narrative, in next week's Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine, with photographs of members of this strange new race.

PART II.

THE fleet consisted of six Indian dugout canoes, propelled by outboard gasoline motors or poled by the 11 negroid boatmen. The whites in the party numbered 11. For the first few days, good mileage was made up the winding river, and the only misfortune was the sickness of Senor Paul Brin, botanist of the party and representative of President Porras of Panama, which caused him to leave the party and return to Yavisa. Rapids were negotiated without great difficulty, and the river was open and easily navigable until the Membrillo River "dead line" was reached. At this point disheartening log jams, signs of spying Indians, sickness and mutiny were encountered.

Most serious were the log barriers which the low water level exposed. For countless ages the tall, thick trees that lined the banks of the Chucunaque have been falling across it. Hard as iron and more durable, their trunks nearly turn the blade of an ax. Hewing them in two and removing them was out of the question. The best that could be accomplished was to cut a depression in the log, unload the dugouts of their burden so that they would draw the smallest amount of water possible and float and lift them over the obstruction. Sometimes a pathway could be made under an obstructing tree. All this took many weary hours, and for several days only a few miles of progress was made.

By day the logs impeded, and by night constant watchfulness was necessary on account of Indians. Every morning, fresh Indian tracks and camp fires were to be found above the camp of the night before. Long rows of freshly plucked turkey feathers, and mysterious designs traced in the sand, showed that the Cunas Bravos warriors were trying their magic in order to keep the white man out of their country. At night, when the white members of the party mounted guard in three-hour shifts, they often would hear birdlike whistles in regular cadence which they believed to be Indian signals.

Occasionally the unseen Indians were treated to a few doses of the white man's magic. An automatic pistol would be allowed to rip its magazine load into the air, and a few military rockets would be shot upward into the sky. There were bursts of stars high in the heavens which must have been visible for miles around. Then for many minutes floating lights, held aloft by parachutes released from the rockets, would soar above.

One day mutiny threatened the expedition. Three of the black boatmen who had been picked up by the party at Yavisa were overheard planning to steal a boat and food at night and desert, taking their chances on returning to Yavisa safely.

"We don't like the way you swear at us, and we are afraid of the Indians," they told Mr. Marsh. He made it plain to them that the Indians were not half as dangerous as he was. And the mutiny was over. But after that the white men kept a continuous guard all night long to prevent desertion on the part of the blacks and to be warned of the approach of any Indians.

Ever since the Membrillo River "dead line" had been passed the party had felt that scouts from the Cunas Bravos Indians were spying on them. The natives were not pursuing the American invaders, but rather eluding them. One day an advance party of the Americans came within sight of a canoe full of Indians and pursued them up the river. The Cunas warriors escaped capture by abandoning their boat and taking to the jungle.

Finally Marsh, with Lieut. Rosebaum, one of the army officers on the expedition; Marine, a police officer of Yavisa, and three negroes, was captured by the Indians while on a scouting trip. Three Bravos were seen suddenly to launch a canoe into the river and paddle hurriedly upstream. The white party, which was hunting wild pigs, surrounded the Indians, who almost hugged them when they found out that the white men were friendly and did not intend to harm them.

Marsh sent one of the Indians ahead to tell their chief that his party was merely passing up the river, meant no harm and would pay for everything they took. Without returning to the camp of the main party to obtain baggage, food or extra clothes, Marsh continued on to the village of Chief Salisiman, gave him presents and treated his wounded leg. The chief told him terrible tales of the Morti and Walla Indians further in the interior, and while Marsh was at his camp a messenger brought information that these Indians had risen against his expedition and had sent a hundred men to the camp at the mouth of the Sucubti to kill all the party.

When Marsh arrived at the expedition's camp his party was intact and there was no sign of warring Indians. His subsequent experience with the natives showed him that their bravery as well as their numbers had been exaggerated in the warnings he received along the lower Chucunaque.

Race in Remote American Jungle

Chief Salisiman spoke understandable English, which, he explained, he learned while a sailor on coasting vessels that went as far as New York and San Francisco. With him was his brother, the priest of the tribe. The priest, as Marsh found out later, really was the chief, while Salisiman was only acting the part because of his knowledge of English. Moving to the vicinity of the Cunas' village, the party was soon on friendly terms with them, although the Cunas Bravos were far more reserved than the tribes of the lower Chucunaque.

Two things were forbidden to the white men: Entrance into the main village of the Cunas, lying farther up the Sucubti River, and even a glimpse of the women of the tribe. So far as Marsh could determine, no white man had seen a Cunas Bravos woman since the time of the Spaniards. The American naval party which penetrated the region 50 years ago came in contact with Indian warriors only.

The Forbidden Village contained the women of the tribe; that was one reason why it was closed to the white men, but Marsh soon began to suspect that it was the temporary residence of a powerful personage, the King of all Darien.

This ruler holding dominion over the brown chiefs was white! Chief Salisiman told Marsh a long tale about the white King. Long before Marsh reached the Sucubti the white King had predicted that he would come. The white King knew all things before they happened, when the storms and rains would occur, when sickness would visit the Indians and many other marvelous things. His sway over the Cunas was powerful; when Marsh told Chief Salisiman that he was going to the Forbidden Village, the chief turned pale with fear.

Eventually the party did pass through the Forbidden Village, but its inhabitants stayed indoors and would not be photographed. Cunas women were seen occasionally, but only when Marsh and his companions chanced to meet them unexpectedly at their daily tasks.

Before contact with the Cunas Bravos had been established, Prof. Baer, the anthropologist of the expedition, representing the Smithsonian Institution, fell seriously ill. His condition and a shortage of food made it imperative that relief be obtained from the outside world, and part of the party was sent across the mountains to Caledonia Bay on the Caribbean Sea. Food was to be obtained from trading ships anchored off the San Blas coast, and arrangements were to be made to transport Prof. Baer to a Canal Zone hospital.

It was only 28 miles from the camp on the Sucubti River to Caledonia Bay, but this distance could be covered only by traveling through a tropical jungle, ascending a 600-foot pass and making some 58 major fordings of streams. It is true that in one case Marsh made the trip in a day, traveling light and aided by Cuna burden bearers. But Prof. Baer grew steadily worse, and it was necessary to carry him to the coast, a task that required a large number of Cuna Indians and necessitated the widening of the trail to allow the passage of the improvised stretcher borne by eight Indians.

Although a hospital seaplane was summoned from the Canal Zone by wireless, by the saddest irony of fate Prof. Baer died just eight minutes before it landed in Caledonia Bay. Close to the spot where Balboa landed, Prof. Baer was laid to rest, a martyr to science.

Up until Marsh's arrival at Caledonia he had come across no White Indians. He had seen unmistakable evidences of them in the valley of the Sucubti among the Cunas Bravos Indians, including long strands of yellow hair in crude wooden combs found in some of the Indian dwellings, and also the Cuna chief told tales to the effect that all the interior mountain country was ruled by a White Indian King, to whom the Indians attributed great power and knowledge.

But whenever the white men asked to see the White Indians, the answer was that they had left and crossed over the mountains or gone to another valley on hearing of the party's approach. It was like chasing will-o'-the-wisps or hunting the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

It became quite evident that these White Indians were protected and warned of Marsh's approach by the surrounding brown tribes, who had every intention of preventing them from being seen. Marsh soon realized that independent expeditions to find them would all be but wild-goose chases such as he had experienced in the past. So Marsh determined to gain access to them through the assistance and consent of the leading chief or King of the San Blas tribes.

This Indian ruler, known as Ina Paguina, had his headquarters on an island in the upper end of the Bay of Caledonia, just opposite the old Indian town of Sassardi. The King had established a large, new town on this coral island about 20 years ago, after a fire in the ancient village on the mainland.

Accordingly, Marsh took Lieut. Townsend, Charleton, the motion picture photographer; Oroff and Breder and, accompanied by Ubiguina, the local chief at Caledonia, made a visit to Ina Paguina in his new town. The white men were received in an immense house, the largest they had yet seen in Darien. They were escorted into the main, or ground-floor, hall which consisted of a central square about 40 feet across, containing crude, home-made chairs and surrounded by long benches, elevated like seats around an old-fashioned prize-fighting arena.

First, many of the leading men of the tribe entered, shook hands with them and seated themselves on the surrounding benches, while the master of ceremonies offered chairs in the central inclosure to the visitors. Soon a short, broad-shouldered, yellow-complexioned man of about 40, followed by a group of elders, entered and shook hands, then seated himself in the very large chair reserved for him. He asked as to who the strangers were and whence they had come. Marsh answered that they were making a scientific exploration of the country, and had come from the Pacific across the mountains to Caledonia.

"Why are so many foreigners showing interest in our country?" the chief asked. "Some are coming from the west and attempting to take the Indians' land in the vicinity of the Gulf of San Blas, others have come to the eastern end of our territory near the Colombian border and also are attempting to take our land. Still others have attempted to pierce straight into the center of our country.

"What," he asked, "is the reason? Now I find your party coming all the way from the Pacific Ocean across our mountains from the back."

Marsh told him very frankly that while the Indian had been standing still for hundreds of years, the white man, and even the black man, were continually advancing and learning more and more; that the white man needed more land to grow bananas and coffee, sugar cane and cocoanuts.

All the Indian land is classed by the Panama Government as public land, or free land, he explained, and strangers come to the Panama Government, pay for large tracts of land, think they have a true right to it, and then come down to develop the land into plantations. The Indian should see to it that the Panama Government did not sell his land beneath his feet, Marsh told Ina Paguina.

"You speak the truth," said the chief.

There followed a long discussion in which Marsh attempted to point out to the Indians that only by organization, by working together, and by adopting certain standards of civilization, could they hope to

THE MOON GOD'S TEMPLE AND ITS APPROACHES. WORSHIPERS CLIMBED THE STEEP STAIRWAYS TO REACH THE

And he dreamed; and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. Genesis, xxviii, 12.

THUS does the opening book of the Scriptures tell us of the wonderful dream of Jacob. Of detail there is no more than that Jacob sank down to rest upon the plain with a stone for a pillow and that in the night there came to him this vision of the angels on the heavenly ladder.

Now modern science, after a lapse of 4000 years and after remarkable excavations on the site of the ancient city of Ur, is asking if Jacob's dream was all a dream and if it might not be possible that he saw with waking eyes the white-robed devotees of the Moon God, Nannar, ascending the steep and gleaming staircases of the ziggurat of Ur to worship at the temple of their chosen deity. Might not Jacob, viewing this spectacle in the mystic mellowness of the Mesopotamia moonlight, have been deluded into the thought that it was a dream and so have reported it when he rejoined his brothers in Israel?

Or supposing that it really was a dream, may it not have been evoked by the proximity of this marvelous "House of the Mountain" towering above the plain, and probably the last thing the eyes of Jacob saw before they closed in sleep?

Jacob must have known the traditions of this great mound that rose above the plains of Ur where he had sought a resting place. Whether the temple was in actual use at that time is not a matter of historical record, but that it had been so used for at least 300 years before the time of Abraham there can be little doubt. Might not the dream fancy of Jacob have repeopled those gigantic stairways, which but just now have been uncovered by American and British explorers?

For centuries the ziggurat, or Mound of Ur, has arrested the attention of tourists and wayfarers in that portion of Mesopotamia where occurred so many of the stirring events recorded in the Bible. But for all that time, until quite recently, it has been to outward appearance just a mound of earth, with nothing to distinguish it from a natural hill.

The true nature, structure and content of this "mound" have come to light through excavations made by a joint expedition financed by the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania Museum and directed by C. Leonard Woolley. The actual work of excavation was done by hundreds of Arab laborers.

Removal of the outer covering of earth revealed great walls of brick masonry, stone stairways, terraces and copings, with all the lines of approach and design leading to a towering temple at the summit—a temple where many successive generations of Sumerians gathered to worship the Moon God.

The original temple on the site of the excavations was erected by Ur-Engur, who was King of Ur 2300 years before Christ. He left the structure to be finished by his son, Dungi, who in turn passed away, leaving the building uncompleted. Little work on it was done until the reign of King Nabonidus, last King of Baoylon, about 550 B. C. The upper portion of the tower was then in ruins. Nabonidus cleared away the debris and constructed a new tower.

It is an odd commentary on the retrogression of Egyptian building in the 1750 years which elapsed before the starting and the finishing of this work that the best preserved portions today are those erected by King Ur-Engur in 2300 B. C., while the portion put up by King Nabonidus in 550 B. C. has crumbled into dust.

It has been found that, excepting only the shrine on the summit, the structure was solid throughout. The core is of mud brick and the outer walls are of kiln-baked brick laid with pitch in place of mortar.

and artists attached to the expedition have found that the lower stages of the great structure were painted black. The middle section was of brick, fired a deep red, and the temple was of bright blue glazed brick.

The mass of solid masonry which has been brought to light is 250 feet long, 150 feet wide and 50 feet high. This represents the height of the original structure only up to the platform on which stood the Moon God's temple, which was about 50 feet high, making the entire building 70 feet high.

But the architects of those days were not only skillful, but artful and keen in their use of devices to increase the apparent size of the building.

Scientists in charge of the excavation have been amazed at the clever use of perspective and line suggestion by those early builders. At the base of the structure was a great retaining wall decorated with a row of attached half columns cunningly tapered toward the top to increase their apparent height, and so placed that when seen from the ground they seemed to be an integral part of the tower at the summit of the mound, thus giving the semblance of solidity and great height to the tower.

The point of interest which the architects had always in their mind was the beautiful blue temple at the summit. Everything in the design contrived to lead the eye and the mind to contemplation of the shrine of the Moon God, which gave the entire structure its reason for being.

As seen from the ground the walls pointed straight upward, carrying the eye first to the very top of the tower. The three great staircases all converged to a central point, and that point was the shrine. After reaching the first platform it was found that even the walls of the upper structure leaned inward toward the great objective, the shrine. Besides the main entrance and stairways there were others and the entire plan of the upper structure showed that it was designed for great ceremonial processions in which long lines of devotees of the Moon God could move in and out through many evolutions as they ascended to the place of worship. And always as they marched the object which caught and held their attention was that gleaming blue shrine above them.

Members of the expedition now unearthing the ziggurat of Ur have been asked many times why the people of that early day went to the labor and expense of building these mound temples. The only suggested explanation is that the Sumerians migrated to Mesopotamia from a mountainous country, where they had worshiped mountain gods and had built their temples on hills. This new country into which they came was a land of great flat stretches, a plains country, unrelieved by hill or hummock. What more natural than that these mountain folk should build artificial mountains upon which to worship their gods? To them the mountain alone was a fit place for the worship of their deity. To them it was the very throne of their god—heaven itself—and in building it they contrived to simulate the paths of ascent to heaven and built in fact a Jacob's ladder which had its foundations deeply rooted in their primitive faith.

There are other ziggurats in the land of ancient Biblical lore. One at Babylon is reputed to have given rise to the scriptural story of the Tower of Babel. But until now these strange structures have lain imbedded in the dust of ages. None has yielded up such treasures of architecture and design as this "House of the Mountain" at Ur, excavated by Americans and Englishmen.

THE LOOK

by "Bartimeus"

ABLE SEAMAN JOSEPH TORCH, one of a training class requalifying for seaman gunner, was smoking an after-breakfast pipe outside the gunnery school classrooms when the Gunner's Mate touched him on the shoulder.

"Field-gun's crew this afternoon, Torch. Gun carriage for officer's funeral. We'll have a run through the drill this forenoon."

Joe removed his pipe and nodded acquiescently. He was a clean-skinned, hazel-eyed young man, tall and straight, with a certain sedateness of manner that set him a little apart from his fellows.

It was no concern of his that a youthful Lieutenant had been nipped by the cable when mooring ship a week previously. Death was death, and he had seen many good men die.

That afternoon, however, the shadow of human bereavement fell darkly upon his senses for the first time.

The gun carriage was drawn up in the yard outside the hospital mortuary. The crew and firing party saw the figures of two women in black walk through a side gate, cross the yard and enter the building.

"One of them's his girl," explained the gatekeeper.

The whisper ran round. His girl and her sister. She'd gone to take leave of the coffin. A couple of carriages with closed blinds drew up in the road outside. A gentleman with reddish-rimmed eyes and a tall hat with a broad mourning band got out, and was introduced to several officers. Then an undertaker's employe emerged from the little red-bricked building.

"Might as well be makin' a start," he said to the Gunner's Mate. "Bearers?"

The Gunner's Mate ran his eye over the lines of men at the drag ropes; he touched six on the elbow and motioned them towards the door of the mortuary. Joe was one.

Bareheaded, they brought the coffin out on their shoulders. The escort came to the salute with a clash.

They had laid the coffin on the carriage, and Joe found himself the last to adjust the lashings securing it beneath the white ensign. Something made him raise his eyes towards the mortuary, and he saw, standing in the doorway, and half supported by her companion, the lover of the dead man.

She stood staring at the flag-draped gun carriage with a sort of incredulous horror in her eyes, as if her numbed senses were aware for the first time that the dead man was about to pass from her sight forever.

Pity, embarrassment, and a certain renewed hostility to that erstwhile familiar foe, Death, for breaking a young girl's heart, passed in turn through Joe's mind. The sensations were succeeded by something even more poignant—loneliness. Utter loneliness. In all the world, neither living nor dead, could he, Joe Torch, summon that look into a woman's face.

A fellow being's soul had reached out in vain anguish after its mate, and he had somehow intercepted the yearning, fruitless appeal.

It awoke unexpectedly a deeper need than any he had known before.

When the afternoon's somber task was fulfilled, Joe found a strange restlessness still pervading his normally tranquil spirit. It was his watch ashore. He'd go "ashore" and watch the couples in the street, have an hour at the cinema, perhaps.

Having shifted into his best suit of serge and squared-off collar and black silk, he adjusted his row of medals, tucking the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal under the black silk so that it was the least conspicuous of all.

He turned to see a roommate's quizzing eyes upon him.

"Goin' to take Mary Pickford out for a fish supper, Joe? You ain't arf the bleedin' masher!"

"Whose business is it 'oo I takes to supper?" demanded Joe, astonished at his own vehemence.

His friend's jaw dropped.

"All right! Don't take on about it, cully. No offense, Joe."

He caught a tram at the dockyard gates and was conveyed to the Town Hall, about that hour, the rendezvous of sailors and marines.

Having disembarked from the tram, however, Joe turned his steps towards the center of the town, where the evening life of the dockyard port ran thicker and more varied. The narrow streets were thronged by men of the fleet and garrison.

Joe walked slowly for a while, taking in the scene with observant eyes. Giggling shop girls on their way home, arm-in-arm down the center of the narrow street, ogled the tall young sailor with laughing encouragement.

"I shall have a bit of supper at home and see if I can't find a nice boy to take me to a movie," said one loudly to her companion, and glanced back daringly over her shoulder.

But Joe gave no sign of having heard. That wasn't what he'd come ashore for: spooning in a movie! Not much.

What had he come ashore for, anyway?

For the life of him he didn't know. He took his stand in the empty doorway of a shuttered shop. He was looking for a girl; he might as well admit it. Was she fair or dark, short or tall, merry-eyed or sad? Hanged if he knew. He might stand there for a week—a lifetime. He was a fool.

For nearly half an hour he remained motionless, meditatively puffing his pipe, his hands behind his back. The hum of a multitude of voices, the sharp clang of the trams a block away, the plaintive twanging melody of a hurdy-gurdy somewhere out of sight, the sharp, irritated "toot!" of taxis, blended in a confused murmur that made consecutive thought impossible.

Joe became conscious of hunger. There was a little beef-and-ham shop he sometimes patronized, with trays of peas and rissoles sizzling behind the windows. He'd go along and have a bite. There was a greasy-fingered young woman there, daughter of the proprietor, who took an interest in him. She served him maternally with the best cuts, and in a lull in her duties watched him with a kind of wistful solicitude while he ate. Her name was Agnes. He allowed his fancy to play with Agnes while he walked; her square, strong body, her wide mouth, with its red lips and defective teeth, the contrast between her toil-worn hands and the curious whiteness of her forearms.

He groaned inwardly and halted in irresolution on the curb at a corner where trams went clanging past. Behind him the door of a tavern opened, letting out a rush of warm, beer-laden air and the riot of a gramophone's song.

Joe sent him reeling across the roadway.

He was aware at the ment of a figure beside him: a girl dun-colored, belted proof and a shabby hat. She appeared waiting for a tram. Her face, as much as Joe see under the narrow brim of the worn hat, orless and tired-looking. She carried a basket containing a few small parcels.

"What's your name?"

"Joe. Joe Torch."

She nodded, considering him anew.

"Mine's Veronica Mortimer," she said, slowly. "I was in business in London. I come down here for a change of air."

Her eyelids flickered.

Joe leaned back in his chair and the medals on his jumper made a little chink.

"I reckon I was lookin' for you. I don't know exactly how it was. . . . It come over me sudden this afternoon. We was buryin' a bloke. Kinder lonely feelin'. . . . 'Tisn't easy to explain, not havin' felt that way before"—

He stopped short, suddenly embarrassed.

The girl said nothing, but her expression changed and softened.

"Ain't you—ain't you got a woman?"

"Not me!" Joe shook his head emphatically. "I don't want none o' that. . . . I want"—— A boyish perplexity creased his brows. "I reckon I was jest lookin' for you."

She stirred restlessly and lowered her eyes. She had laid aside her rainproof coat, and beneath the cheap blouse her bosom rose and fell quickly. Silence fell upon them both for a space. The rashers and tea arrived. She poured Joe out his cup and handed it to him, with a little smile.

"Sugar? I don't know if you've got a sweet tooth."

"I have. Four lumps, please. That's queer, ain't it?"

"What?"

"You not knowin' that!"

"But how could I know?"

Joe stirred his cup reflectively.

"'Course—you couldn't. But it don't seem natural, somehow. . . . Seems as if you did ought to know everything 'bout me."

"P'raps I do," she answered, quietly, sipping her tea and watching him over the brim of the cup. "'Cept little things—like this. Tell me where you got them medals. What was you like when you was little?"

Nothing loath, Joe recounted the story of his life—his childhood in an industrial training ship, the succession of commissions at home and abroad that had made up his life since. Of his early childhood he could remember little. He recalled playing up on the hillside overlooking the Medway, amid the smoke of cement works and the narrow strips of chalky soil that bristled with cabbage stalks. His mother died when he was very little, and his father took on with a woman who drank. A pensioner of the Boer War, his father, wounded in the head. It made him an easy prey to the woman who drank. But he was a fine figure of a man and warm-hearted.

"Now," he said, when he had finished story and supper, "that's all about me. How about you?"

She stared into her empty cup.

"Can't you take me on trust, just the way you see me now"——

With an abrupt movement she put both her hands over her face.

Joe stared at the thin, ringless fingers.

"I don't trouble. It don't seem to matter. I knows you're good, an that's what matters to me. I was sick of the other sort: the sort us matelows has to turn to when we wants a bit of company—them like me as hasn't no young lady."

With a suggestion of panic, she rose to her feet and began to fumble with her rainproof coat.

"I best get home," she said, hurriedly. "You—I"—— Joe felt her tremble as he helped her on with the worn garment. "You've been kind to me. I thank you for the supper. I was tired and a bit gone when you found me. Maybe that's why I come. . . . But it's gettin' late"—

He stood under the flickering gas jet, looking down at her from his stalwart height. An inexpressible contentment seemed to radiate from his personality.

"This ain't goin' to be the last time. I gets leave to come ashore every other night. . . . You an' me. . . . You an' me"——

He appeared unable to continue the picture his imagination had conjured up.

"Every other night?" she echoed. "Like this? Just you an' me talkin' quiet. Havin' a walk in the country maybe sometimes. Goin' out on top of a tram?"

Joe nodded, delightedly.

"That's right! All them things, us two."

He embraced the deserted room in the crude flare of the gaslight with a gesture that flung a leaping shadow athwart the walls.

"Every other night?" They were descending the narrow stairway. "Yes, I could manage that." She spoke musingly. "I've got to manage it." And she slid her arm inside his as they stepped out into the lamp-lit street.

They scarcely spoke during the 20 minutes' walk through avenues of silent houses. They walked leisurely beneath the quiet stars, clinging as atoms cling in obedience to uncomprehended laws.

"You mustn't come no farther," she said, at length.

"That's as you wish," he replied.

They stood facing one another at a corner of deserted streets. Two rows of mean houses stared blindly at each other on either side of a steep hill. In the light of a young moon the chalky surface of the road gleamed white.

"Well," said Joe, hesitated and stooped to kiss his companion.

She stepped back quickly.

"No, you mustn't. Not—not that."

There was no trace of coquetry in her avoidance of his embrace, and nothing suggested the prude in her wide-eyed seriousness. Joe's back straightened.

"As you wish, dear."

She stood looking at him, her hands thrust into the pockets of the threadbare waterproof, her lips pursed.

"Where'll I meet you day after tomorrow?"

He suggested the corner where they had first met, but she demurred.

"Somewhere quiet," she suggested. "Where there's not so many people."

Her delicacy of mind pleased him. They finally settled upon a quiet bystreet; and there the next night but one, as the light was failing, they met again.

Joe saw her pacing, a shadowy figure, midway between two lamps, her hands in her pockets and her shoulders rounded in that ineffable curve of fatigue and forlornness that quickened all the chivalry in his nature.

Neither spoke at the greeting, but she answered his quiet grin with a half-timid smile, and he felt her thrill as she slipped her hand inside his arm. They fell into step, making for the scene of their former evening meal, and Joe knew that he loved her, needed her, yearned towards her.

"As clay of the pit whence we were wrought Yearns to its fellow clay."

Specifically, he put it otherwise for his own benefit when for the second time they parted, and he strode away towards the barracks.

"Joe, me lad," he muttered, his pipestem between his teeth, "it's you for it."

The first astonished transport passed, however, Joe accepted their strange relationship with a calm, unquestioning happiness. She was in so many ways a mystery to him. She persistently refused to talk about herself, appearing content to listen to his disjointed reminiscences of "jaunties" and First Lieutenants, of war in the North Sea as he had known it, and peace in outlandish ports. And sometimes in moments of apparent absent-mindedness she would slip into the argot of the lower deck with a familiarity that puzzled him. She had queer little fads: policemen, for instance. She would take a side turning to avoid a policeman. Nasty, sneering faces they had, she explained. She disliked the more populous parts of the town, and shunned places of entertainment when in Joe's company. He, a man of quiet tastes, was nothing loath. They went for long rides on trams, and on half-days jolted far out into the country on the top of a motor omnibus.

She never suffered a caress from him. But she had a little, confiding way of putting her hand on his arm and resting her shoulder gently against him that seemed to suffice all her need and his.

He found, however, one perplexity. He could not visualize her when they were apart. He would lie with eyes shut at night, trying his hardest to make her face pass before his mental vision, but it was indefinite and shadowy, mocking him with its elusiveness.

He tried to convey something of this perplexity to Veronica, and the confession seemed to afford her relief and satisfaction.

"What's it matter how I look?" she demanded.

"I used to think a look mattered a lot," was his reply. "There was a gell when we was buryin' that young feller I told you of—the way she looked—— She was his gell. I reckoned then that if I couldn't never have anyone look at me that way"——

He broke off, lost in the profundity of his train of thought.

"How did she look—his girl?"

He endeavored to describe what human eyes had revealed in that moment's anguish.

"But you don't want to have me lookin' at you that way, do you?" she queried, and then there crept into her face that mulish hardening. "But maybe you will"——

"Don't worry," replied Joe, with a sudden return of light-heartedness. "I ain't goin' to die just yet!"

"You won't have to die to see it," was her enigmatic answer.

Weeks went by and slipped into months. Joe began to make references to a shadow that had begun to brood over his happiness. He called it the sea-going roster. His name must be getting near the top of the list of men awaiting their turn for sea. He had finished his course at the gunnery school. He might come on for draft at any time. Veronica heard his gloomy hints in silence, tightening her hand a little on his muscular arm, drawing a shade closer to him as if his powerful frame interposed between her and all the world's evil and distress.

A message awaited him, on his return to barracks one evening, that the drafting commander wished to see him the next morning. It was an unusual method of detailing a unit of draft for sea. Once before in his career he had received a similar summons to appear before the commander of his ship, but he had been a volunteer for the attack on Zeebrugge then—one of three able seamen picked from a battleship's complement of a thousand men, picked for the

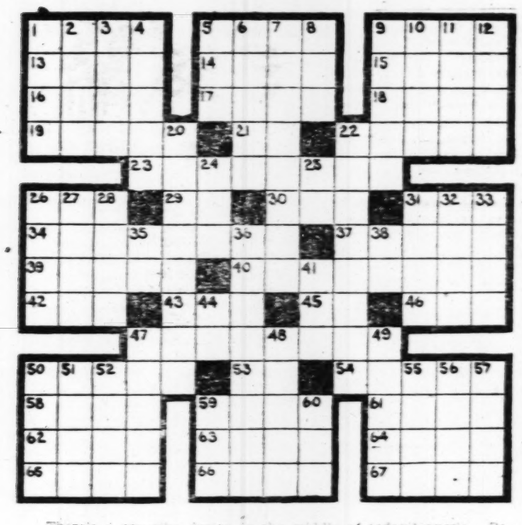
More Cross-Word Puzzles to Tax Your Skill



There's a symmetrical design in the middle of today's puzzle. Beginners can get a start at No. 1, where the horizontal word defined as "brave" is bold and the vertical word is "bend."

EVERY number in the form represents the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically. If there is a black square to the left of the number, the word is horizontal; if above it, the word is vertical. The same number may, of course, begin both a horizontal and a vertical. The definitions for the correct words to fill the form are found below, with numbers corresponding to those on the form. Run through the definitions till you find one that you recognize and put it in its proper place on the form, one letter for each white square. This will furnish several crossclues to the words linking with it at right angles. Continue in this manner till the form is completely filled.

Strange Story of a Burial Cave in Missouri

"ows the ears o' corn'd beat you to death."

Accepting thoughtful silence as an approval of his claims for the Tavern country, the Miller County Man continued:

"And tell me where a man could find a prettier or more truly charming spot for a tomb than a bluff cave overlookin' Tavern?"

"Aren't those caves overrun with bats?"

"Not copiously nor voluminously nor even what you'd call uncomfortably overrun with bats, what with every entrance sealed up air-tight with a solid stone wall," answered the M. C. M., with pitying sarcasm. "No, son, not really overcrowded with bats."

The M. C. M. continued:

"This man Wilson lived in the Tavern country during the '40s. So far as I have been able to learn he had no relative in the country except his wife. They were up in years and were the only people living on their farm. They had a little black dog of which they were very fond.

"By all accounts, Wilson was a man of more than ordinary education and intelligence, his farm was one of the best in the district and both by wealth and social standing he was what we call a leading citizen. These old-timers were an independent, care-free lot; they had all the strong, impulsive characteristics of the true outdoor man; their ethical code was that of Ol' Kaintuck and Ol' Virginny. In courtesy and hospitality they probably outranked any generation which has succeeded them.

"They lived simply and had a knack for homely phrases. 'A good houn' orter be the color of a good rifle stock and a good fiddle orter be the color of a good houn,' runs one Ozark maxim. So bountiful were the natural resources of the country that a man could go into the woods with a rifle and an ax and live like a Prince.

"Rube Helton says of those days: 'Thust, ef a man missed a shot at a deer he hit a turkey and ef he slipped and fell on a ripe pawpaw he got up with his pockets full o' hazel nuts.'"

The M. C. M. stared reflectively at the floor. Probably he was thinking of the ancient homeland; the jade-green pools of Tavern, glinting with the silver sheen of arrowy minnows, lying like a rosary amid the tall, marble-white sycamores; the drifts swarming with bass; the big black-and-yellow butterflies floating lazily on an atmosphere that was heavy with the aromatic sweetness of bud and bloom and bright barred with streaks of sunlight, through which birds of gorgeous plumage flashed back and forth like animate jewels against the living green.

"They must have been a great people."

The M. C. M. started from his reverie.

"They were, and they had their own whims and fancies. Now, here's this man, Wilson, out walking over the farm with his wife one Sunday afternoon and they come down facing the bluff on Tavern. The bluff is 50 or 60 feet high. Thirty or 40 feet up on its face is a cave. Quite a good-sized recess in the rock. Also there is another, considerably smaller, and yet another, still smaller. It gave the old man a strange idea.

"'Now, there,' says he, 'is my idea of a burial place. Me in the big cave, you in the next one and the little dog in the smallest. All in due time, when we die, of course. What d'ye think of it, ol' Summer Coon?'

"Ol' Summer Coon was his nickname for his wife.

"Evidently Ol' Summer Coon had decidedly different ideas of a last resting place, and, judging from what transpired, she must have expressed those ideas with quite a bit of force. The result was most unfortunate. They got into a violent discussion over the thing and in the end the old man got overheated under the collar and said:

"'Ol' Summer Coon, here's where you and me part!'

"I don't think they ever lived apart, but there was just that point of difference between them, which was bad enough. Some time thereafter the wife became very sick. It is well authenticated that the old gentleman did everything in his power for her, but all his efforts were of no avail. His wife died.

"Undoubtedly, the poor old man had great affection for her, for it is said that as her strength faded his own life seemed to go out of him and it appeared that he also would die. But he pulled himself together, shook his shoulders silently and exclaimed:

"What a blithering fool a man can be!"

He braced up after that, had his wife buried in the approved manner and lived for some years thereafter. However, the idea of being entombed in the cave persisted, and some time in the interim between his wife's death and his own he sent for Dr. N——, a well-known physician of the country, and for a man named Livingston and a fiddler whose name I never have learned, and made the following contract, which probably was drawn up against the advice and insistence of his friends, the doctor, the assistant and the fiddler:

"For the sum of $150 each, duly set aside, they were to remove his internal organs, seal them in a jar, fill his body with salt, properly inclose it and place it in a coffin and deposit all in the cave with a demijohn containing five gallons of good whisky. During these operations the fiddler was to play 'Rosin the Bow.' The cave entrance was then to be walled up and left for seven years.

"If in that time no visible and unusual disturbance was noted about the cave, the remaining parties to the contract were to declare a jollification, open the cave, burn the internal organs and scatter the ashes over the field; the fiddler meanwhile playing 'Rosin the Bow.' They were to drink the five gallons of whisky during the jollification.

"If nothing unusual happened they were to buy five gallons of whisky, place it in the cave and re-seal the entrance. After seven years more they were to repeat the performance and permanently seal the tomb."

"Did they do this?"

"They certainly planted the old gentleman according to his own instructions. But when the first seven years were up the Civil War was going on. Dr. N—— was far down South in the Sixth Missouri Cavalry. Livingston had enlisted in the Confederate army and also was down South. I don't know where the fiddler was.

"Naturally, on their return from the war the doctor and his assistant felt that the matter had passed out of their hands."

"And that old man is still in that cave with the five gallons of good whisky?"

"Absolutely."

"Well, it looks like some public-spirited citizen should go down there, open the cave and drink that whisky. Not, mind you, on account of the whisky, but merely to carry out the old gentleman's last will and testament. Seems like it is the duty of the Probate Judge, under the law, to see that this will is executed. Haven't you got a Probate Judge down there?"

"Ye-uh. You might go down and try to force him to execute the will. You're not nailed down, are you? Every once in a while someone gets the same idea you have, but he never gets to the point of actually knocking a rock out of the wall. Still, there is a rumor that some party really did have a look into that cave."

"Ah! And the whisky? What about the whisky, buddy?"

The Miller County Man scratched his head with a rueful expression.

"They say the whisky was gone."

From Ox-Team to Airplane

leisure, he determined to spend his time in furthering this project.

Some time ago Meeker decided that the matter should be placed before the President of the United States. The longer he thought about it, the more convinced he became that the matter should be brought to the President's attention at once, and in seeking for a method of rapid transportation he naturally turned to the airplane.

Difficulties arose at once. Meeker desired to make the trip by army plane. Army officials were chary about taking a man of his advanced years upon such a long air voyage.

Opposition only aroused in the old gentleman a greater determination, and finally, in recognition of his many public services to the West, Secretary of War Weeks ordered a fast plane and Lieut. Oakley G. Kelly, nationally famous as a transcontinental flyer, placed at the disposal of the old pioneer.

Before starting across the continent, Lieut. Kelly, mindful of the age of his passenger, took pains to explain the hazards of the trip for a man of Meeker's years, and suggested that any time the passenger grew tired they would descend.

"Lieut. Kelly," said the white-bearded passenger, with a twinkle in his alert blue eyes, "any time you get tired, we'll land!"

And that was just about the way it worked out," commented the Lieutenant afterwards.

From Vancouver to Rock Springs the trip was beset with dangers and difficulties. Air pockets were encountered; lowering clouds forced the airmen to cling close to the earth, and on several occasions they barely missed mountain peaks. At one time, crossing over Mount Rainier, 9000 feet in the air, they flew through a blinding snowstorm. And throughout all these difficulties Ezra Meeker never faltered.

More than one-third of the Oregon Trail had been covered before Meeker ate breakfast on the morning they hopped off, flying from Vancouver Barracks to Pocatello, Idaho.

From Rock Springs the development of the air mail service had provided landing places all along a well-marked airway, making the rest of the trip comparatively safe.

Over the long trail and on to Dayton, O., they pressed, and there were greeted by a crowd of 50,000 people watching the International Air Races then in progress at McCook Field. The crowd gave the old man and his soldier pilot a big ovation, paying tribute at once to the never-dying spirit of the West as embodied in this courageous adventurer and to the daring airman. Lieut. Kelly holds the enviable record of being one of America's two first nonstop transcontinental flyers, and now he added to his exploits by bringing this distinguished passenger safely over their hazardous journey.

But Washington was the ultimate goal on which Ezra Meeker had set his heart, and after a rest at Dayton they started for the capital, arriving there without mishap. The aged pioneer spent several days in Washington in the interest of a national highway and was at the White House practically a whole forenoon.

"President Coolidge is a mighty fine man," said Meeker afterwards. "He seemed to realize the importance of the message I brought and promised to use his influence with Congress. I believe that the next few years will see the highway an actuality.

"I believe in rapid transportation because it is the one thing that will, more quickly than any other, bind the people of the whole United States together as one. Rapid transportation will make it possible for the people of each section to visit the other sections conveniently and these inter-visitations will enlarge their appreciation of the other fellow's home and ideas.

"I am ready to be convinced that anything is possible.

"The telegraph, telephone, automobile, radio and other modern improvements—all 'impossibilities' of the past century which have become actualities of the present—have converted me to a belief in anybody's new idea.

"If I had told the people who toiled across the continent with me in '52 that it would some day be possible to sit at a radio in my own home in the State of Washington and listen to a concert in New York City, which had been projected through the air, they would have just 'put me away' where I would be harmless. But today it is being done regularly.

"Speed is the watchword of the present century, and even if I have been here a little longer than most of the people in my country, I feel young enough today to appreciate the need of it, and as for danger—well, I have lived so long that I have ceased to be solicitous! If a faster method of transportation is found, I certainly hope that I live long enough to be one of the first to test it.

"The airplane is a never ending wonder to me. I have tried every means of transportation that nature and the genius of man have had to offer, and nothing I have tried before has felt half so safe as traveling by plane. Flying at more than 100 miles an hour, I felt as though I were being rocked in a cradle. It is the ideal method of covering distance, and I can readily see why the young men are such enthusiasts over flying. Were I a few years younger I would have my own plane and fly it myself."

And this remarkable man, closing in on the century mark, left for his Western home without an idea that he had done anything very much out of the ordinary.

"I feel fine," he said, when he departed from the national capital. "I'm coming back, and, if I can arrange it again, my next trip, like this one, will be made in an airplane."

The Wolfer's Job in the Cattle Country

he would say, "but I aim to know what's in the scent I use."

I suppose he knew at that, but I am sure I didn't—except that the base was made from the bladders of wolves which he had caught before—the longer before the better.

Another wolfer, who has since entered the Government service and made good, used the scent of a rattlesnake with excellent results. I remember that he caught 106 coyotes in a little over two months. Occasionally he would shoot a wild burro and place a string of traps around the burro at a distance of a hundred yards, or so. In my ignorance I remarked:

"Why don't you set some traps right at the burro? I caught a couple that way."

"Yes, and that's all you ever would catch," he returned. "It don't take 'em long to figure that there's sumpthin' funny 'bout that burro after one or two has been caught, and they won't come near it.

"This way they come to the burro and when they has fed they go out and prowl around. Then they get nailed in them scent sets and the others ain't got quite enough sense to figure that there's any connection between the traps and the burro, so they comes back next night and gits caught theirselves."

These men in the wolf-trapping game work hard and earn a good deal more than they get out of it. Sometimes a rancher fails to make good on the promised bounty, and in such a case one can hardly blame the trapper for getting a little peevish. I remember one wolfer working a very rough, wild country who trapped all winter for a pair of wolves that had been doing a lot of damage to the young stock on his employer's range.

He finally got these two wolves, but, when he came to collect his bounty, the boss said:

"Sorry, but I'm afraid I can't pay you."

The wolfer said nothing, and a few

Canada
where Dairy Farmers prosper

Western Canada, blessed with low-priced fertile land, a favorable climate and an abundance of pure water offers remarkable opportunites to experienced dairy farmers.
The rich fertile soil on which nutritious grasses and feed of all kinds grow profusely, can be purchased at an average of $20 an acre—with free use of the land for a year and then 35 years to pay. The yearly payment on an average 160-acre farm is only $195.30. Think of it.
Cash is paid for all dairy products, most of which are used in the nearby cities. Since 1900 the value of Canada's dairy industry has increased $164,000,000. Last year alone Canadian dairy farmers put $54,308,334.04 in their pockets.
Come to Canada where you can put your profits in your pocket, where land prices are low and feed is cheap, where you can double or treble your acreage with the same investment. Both irrigated and non-irrigated lands are available. Investigate now. Send the coupon for full information and details about special inspection trips at reduced fares. Do it now.

days later packed his traps and apparently quit the country. Some four months later he reappeared at the ranch in a Ford roadster, behind which a large box was strapped. The trapper got out and called the boss. After they had talked a while the rancher said:

"What you got in that box?"

"A pair o' live loafers," answered the trapper.

The rancher's eyes popped.

"What you goin' to do with 'em?" he asked.

"Turn 'em loose on your range," answered the wolfer, grimly. Needless to say, the trapper got his check.

But the old-time wolfer is disappearing. Wolves are becoming ever scarcer and the Government, through the Bureau of Biological Survey, is co-operating with the state in the extermination of what few wolves remain. Special men are assigned the job of trapping wolves—as others are assigned to coyotes and lions.

The wolfers are instructed to stay after each wolf that is located until they get him. Their work is perhaps the hardest and the least productive of results in the service. As I say, wolves are scarce and are great travelers, so that no large catches of wolves can be secured.

If a man averages five or six wolves every six months he is doing well. At first glance this would seem a fruitless work, but when one stops to figure that each wolf will kill from 60 to two or three hundred calves in that time, one is able to realize the value of a good wolfer.

The best lion hunter on the Arizona force caught 15 lions in one month's time last winter. This is the record for Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico. But lions were plentiful in his territory, and he had good tracking snow and an exceptionally well-trained pack of dogs. Lions may be killed successfully only with dogs. Occasionally a man may catch a lion in a trap, but such a method is impractical, owing to the habits of the mountain lion.

On the other hand, wolves may be successfully taken only by means of traps. In the rough mountain country dogs are useless. A big wolf, when pursued by hounds, will run out of the country and it is impossible for the hunter to stay with the dogs. When the dogs overtake the wolf—a rare happening in itself—the wolf will turn to fight and is a worse antagonist than a bear or a mountain lion. A bear is slow in comparison to a wolf and a lion will usually take to a tree.

The wolf will slash and cut at the dogs, and it is not uncommon for a big wolf to kill a dog with one slash. Few people have a true conception of the size of a big lobo. A large Airedale terrier will weigh 75 pounds. A male lobo often weighs 150. They have very powerful jaws and enormous tusks and are quick as lightning.

I suppose that five or six big Russian or Irish wolfhounds could eventually kill a lobo, but, as these dogs run entirely by sight, they would be worse than useless in a mountainous and brushy country. The average trail hound such as is used for bear and lions—foxhound or bloodhound cross—has no chance whatever against a big wolf.

It becomes apparent, then, other means of dealing with the gray marauder must be employed. Both traps and poisoned baits are used with success. Poison is rather a dangerous thing in the country where dogs are being run, and many a man has had his whole pack of bear and lion dogs wiped out by wolf poison.

Now the inspector at Phoenix tries to arrange his men so that the wolfers and the lion hunters are not working the same range at the same time, and it is the custom for news letters to be sent out to each man in the field, giving the location of the other men. In this way the danger of poison is lessened, if not entirely eliminated. There is always the possibility of a crow's picking up a poisoned bait and carrying it many miles before he drops it. I lost several dogs during my stay in Arizona via the poison route and, as there had been no poison put out on the range in which I was working, I can explain it in no other way than that the crows brought the bait in.

A wolf, while naturally curious and resembling a dog in his habits, is also naturally suspicious, and the man who would trap him must be wise in the ways of wolves. There must be nothing suspicious in the way or place in which he sets his traps. Whereas, the amateur would set his traps in a brushy canyon, well hidden and with a natural runway into the trap, the old wolfer makes his set as much in the open as possible.

If a wolf thinks he is being led into anything he will pass up any set. Usually the set is made on an open flat, near a small bush. The traps are carefully hidden and covered, and a small amount of scent is dropped on the bush or a small hole is dug under the bush and a few drops of scent placed therein, after which a tuft of dry grass is placed over it.

All outward traces of traps or men must be obliterated, and even then the chances of taking the wolf are far from certain.

Only by long and disappointing experience can a man learn to fool a lobo and earn the title of "wolfer."

privilege of dying on the breakwater of a Belgian seaport to make history. There was a war on then and he hadn't found Veronica.

Enlightenment came the following morning when he faced the drafting commander across a paper-littered writing table. There was going to be another naval Antarctic expedition. The leader of it had asked for him, provided he was a single man still and was willing to volunteer. He quite understood. Was he single? Oh, yes, he was single. But he'd like 24 hours to think it over.

He walked out into the clear sunshine of the parade ground thinking furiously. He must settle this business with Veronica. If she would marry him, well and good. He would settle down to the humdrum life of the peace navy, without further thought of glory, counting the world well lost. And if she refused him—then that would be the end of it: the end of an unreal, dimly comprehended idyll. A fit and proper state of mind for a man setting out to conquer the Antarctic.

But he must know at once. He could exchange nights ashore with a roommate without difficulty, and with all a lover's touching faith in the intervention of Providence he had no doubt that if he searched the town long enough he would find Veronica somewhere—even as he had found her the first night of all, guided by his star.

A fever of impatience consumed him. Ashore at last, he walked faster than his wont, level eyes scanning the roadway ahead, searching the interiors of shops where lights were beginning to throw a radiance across the roadway. His faith was so unquestioning, so childlike in its assurance that he would find her, that it carried him through his quest without wavering or despair. Even when the evening latened and the shops shut, after cinemas and music halls had thinned out the pedestrians, he refused to accept defeat.

He had wandered out of his usual haunts into a quarter he had never penetrated with Veronica. It was a labyrinth of alleyways and low-browed taverns, most of which were out of bounds to men of His Majesty's forces—a neighborhood that had changed little morally or materially since the press-gangs swept it with cutlass and baton to man Nelson's fleet.

Joe had paused to light a pipe when a tavern door swung open to allow a blowzy woman exit. She stood arguing on the threshold, holding the door open with her elbow, affording Joe an uninterrupted view of the smoky, garishly lit interior. In that moment his quest ended. He had found Veronica.

"'Scuse me," he said, quietly, to the woman.

As she swayed into the street he interposed his shoulder between the closing halves of the swing door.

For several moments Veronica did not see him. She was seated in a corner of the sawdust-carpeted lounge beside a pallid-faced young artificer, with one arm round his neck. Her face was crudely rouged and her eyelashes darkened. The pale, obstinate mouth he knew so well was stained the color of a geranium's petals. She was staring at the row of beer handles projecting above the bar as if some remote vision claimed her attention far beyond the hubbub of voices and the importunities of the brute that man can be.

Then slowly she turned her head and looked at Joe. She stared at him without the flicker of an eyelid, but the rouge on her cheeks stood out like two dark splotches as the blood ebbed from her face.

Joe crossed the room in three strides.

"Come out of this."

The artificer, whose arms were about her waist, scowled valiantly.

"Here," he said, "who are you talkin' to—Master Jack Strop? This is my girl."

The clamor of voices that filled the room died to a sudden stillness. Beer mugs paused half-way to men's mouths. Cautious forms edged to the door. The shirt-sleeved, thick-necked man behind the bar raised a scarred head like a bull-terrier scenting distant combat.

"Order, please, gentlemen!" he said, in a raucous, bullying tone.

A woman sniggered.

Joe stood looking down at the girl without speaking again. His face had turned gray. Veronica disengaged her arm from the neck of her cavalier and rose obediently to her feet. With a splutter of imprecation the little artificer rose also. At the back of his scared intelligence something told him that this was an affair he'd better be out of.

"You can have her," he said. "I'd bought her, but I don't want her."

Joe turned indifferent eyes upon the speaker.

"I wasn't askin' your leave," he replied, and, taking the girl by the elbow, led her towards the door.

A tall, bold-faced girl broke the tense silence:

"She's been comin' the respectable over 'im—that's what she's been doin' of. Artful li'l' devil!"

The swing doors clashed on the reeking tavern. The man and the woman were alone in the cool night under the compassionate sky.

Joe was like a man walking in his sleep who suddenly awakes in unfamiliar surroundings. The girl's hand went up to his arm, but he shook her off and started with great strides down the uneven roadway, she following, half-walking, half-running. He was making instinctively for the familiar street where they always met, and, that reached at length, he turned and faced her.

"Well?"

She was out of breath and panting. Her thin face, with its dilated nostrils bore a dreadful resemblance to a skull.

"Well—Veronica?"

"That's not my name—my proper name. It's Sally Blunt."

"Ain't it a bit late to remember that? D'you know what I come ashore for tonight? I come ashore to ask you to marry me!"

Joe gripped her by either elbow and shook her brutally.

"To marry you. Understand? Me! Marry you! Now I've a mind to wring your neck."

"Go on," she gasped. "For God's sake go on and do it."

He released her abruptly.

"Furs!" He jerked the tawdry stole of dyed rabbit skin off her shoulders. "Who gave you them, I'd like to know?"

The bedizened waif of dockyard taverns stiffened into a sudden dignity.

"I earned them same's I earn my food an' lodgin'. You think I bin actin' dirty by you—deceivin' you an' comin' the respectable? Did I ever ask you for a penny? Have I ever took a thing from you but the price of a tram ride an' a supper? I never asked you to come along with me that first night. I'd been shoppin'. You was nice to me an' kind—the first man that hadn't acted like a beast to me since—since I could remember, almost. You spoke to me different from all the others. I was a fool—I have bin at it long enough not to care, I s'pose—I thought if I could jest walk out with you now'n again—'twasn't doin' you no harm. It was that or takin' to drink. I ain't started drinkin' yet. . . . An' then I—I kinder—got carin' for you"——

She broke off suddenly and her face went into her hands. Blindly she turned towards the wall of a darkened garage and leaned against it, hoarse, tearless sobs shaking her narrow shoulders.

Joe swung round on his heel and strode off down the street.

He had gone some way when he realized he was still holding the offending fur. He turned and began to retrace his steps.

The girl was still there. She stood straining her eyes after him, the light of a street lamp full in her face. Joe had wanted a woman to look at him like that once. Well—here she was. He had his wish.

He handed her back the stole.

"That putty-faced tiffy you was with jest now said as how he'd bought you. Well, I'll buy you instead."

She backed away from him.

"I'll die first."

Joe shook his head vehemently.

"I ain't goin' to. I don't mean that. But I'm goin' to sea for two or three years—South Pole expedition. I shan't need no pay. 'Tain't much, but they reckon it's enough to keep a good man. I'm goin' to make out a monthly allotment. You can have pretty well the lot. Maybe it'll be enough to keep a—a woman—keep her from havin' to—to earn her livin'."

"I don't want it! Keep it! Keep it an' come back. I'll earn my livin' in a different way. 'Tain't too late. Joe, it ain't too late! I'm goin' now! Straight, I am"——

"Where are you goin'?"

"Come an' see."

There was a desperate urgency in her hoarse voice.

"Go ahead, then."

For the second time that night they set off along the deserted streets, but this time she led, stumbling, almost running along the pavements. Joe followed her closely.

They had reached an avenue of detached houses standing back from the road among dark shrubberies. The girl paused before an iron gateway from which a short path led to the door. A dim gas jet burned behind the fanlight.

"Good-by," she said, hesitated and held out her hands. "Come back to me, Joe! Come back an' ask for me here when you get home again."

Joe glanced up at the darkened facade of the building. He ignored her outstretched hands.

"I don't know as I'll be comin' back," he said, slowly. "But if I do—I'll come back here."

A little sound that might have been a sob passed her lips. She slipped through the gate like a shadow. Joe stood motionless, watching.

She knocked hesitatingly, and the door opened almost immediately. The fanlight shone on a woman's gray head and a serene, kindly brow.

Joe took a hurried step forward.

"'Ere!" he called. "It's all right—it's all right—I'll come back!"

The girl turned and stood looking at him. The wavering gas jet overhead illumined her face, and in her eyes for the last time Joe saw the look. Then she stepped across the threshold.

Joe remained motionless, staring at the closed door in the certitude of the fate awaiting him.

The Discovery of a New White Race prevent the seizure of all their land by the white man and the black man.

"I am a friend of the Indian, and have come trying to help him," Marsh said, "but there is no use in my telling you things that merely please and do you no good. The day of the Indian's isolation is past. Your people cannot continue in the future as they have in the past. They must either advance, take up modern education and modern methods, or they will be exterminated."

This blunt talk produced many angry exclamations from the surrounding Indians and considerable apprehension in Marsh's own companions.

"Call a congress of all your people, agree to stand together, and then send representatives to the Panama Government and to the American Government," Marsh urged the chief.

He counseled the Indians to tell their side of the story and indicate their willingness to accept modern civilization on a proper basis, provided in return they were guaranteed for all time sufficient land to support their people. The chief said he would take the suggestion under advisement.

Chief Ina Paguina would not permit the white men to take pictures and under no consideration could they see any of the tribe's women. When Marsh asked him point-blank about the reports as to White Indians in that region, the chief stated that there were no White Indians left in Panama; that formerly there were some, but that all of them had gone away and were now in Colombia.

"I know better," replied Marsh.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill"

is the most gruesome commandment handed down to mankind. A man may lie, steal or break any other law and the public will eventually forgive and forget. But let him commit murder and the cry of everybody is to give him the full penalty—DEATH! And what is the common excuse of the murderer? INSANITY! Sure he's crazy. Any man must be crazy to commit murder.

But how about the fellow who slowly but surely kills his own body by neglect? He's the craziest one of all.

Stop! Think this over! What are you doing with your own body? Surely you don't want to be put in this class. But if you are not doing everything possible to prolong your life and keep your body just as clean and healthy as your Maker intended, you are inviting death. You are slowly but surely killing yourself.

A New Life

Have you ever enjoyed the pleasures of perfect health? Have you ever felt the thrills which accompany a strong, robust body? If not, you have nature's biggest gift awaiting you. That is what I have to offer you. I don't promise to feed this to you in pill form. No, you have to work for it. You can't get anything in this life without effort. Don't let anyone fool you by telling you different. I'm going to make you work, but oh boy! how you'll like it. After a few days you will feel the old pep shooting through your veins and you will crave your exercise like a kid wants his bread and sugar.

Today Is Your Day

This is your birthday. Today you start a new life. I'm going to make a real, live, "rip-snortin'", go-getter out of you. I'm going to expand that chest so it will give your lungs a treat with life-giving oxygen. This will put real vim into your blood and shoot it throughout your entire system. I'm going to broaden your shoulders and strengthen your back. I'm going to put a ripple of muscle up and down your body that will make a big powerful he-man out of you. You will have the arms and legs of a modern Hercules. I'll clear your brain and pep up your entire system. You will be just bubbling over with vitality. You will stretch out your powerful body and shout for bigger and greater things to accomplish. Nothing will be too difficult for you to tackle.

Sounds good, doesn't it? You can bet your Sunday hat it's good. It's wonderful. And it's no idle prattle either. I'm not promising these things. I guarantee them. Do you doubt me? Make me prove it. Come on. Atta boy. Let's go

It contains forty-three full-page photographs of myself and some of the many prize-winning pupils I have trained. Many of these are leaders in their business professions today. I have not only given them a body to be proud of, but made them better doctors, lawyers, merchants, etc. Some of these came to me as pitiful weaklings, imploring me to help them. Look them over now and you will marvel at their present physiques. This book will prove an impetus and a real inspiration to you. It will thrill you through and through. This will not cost you one penny. I want you to have it with my compliments. It is yours to keep. This will not obligate you at all, but for the sake of your future happiness and health, do not put it off. Send today—right now—before you turn this page.

MOVING PICTURE OF A REMARKABLE ACCIDENT

Concentrated Energy
in this fresh natural food

Billions of tiny living plants revitalize your system — banish Constipation, Skin, and Stomach Troubles

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast.

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense.

But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach, and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are billions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active. Health is yours once more.

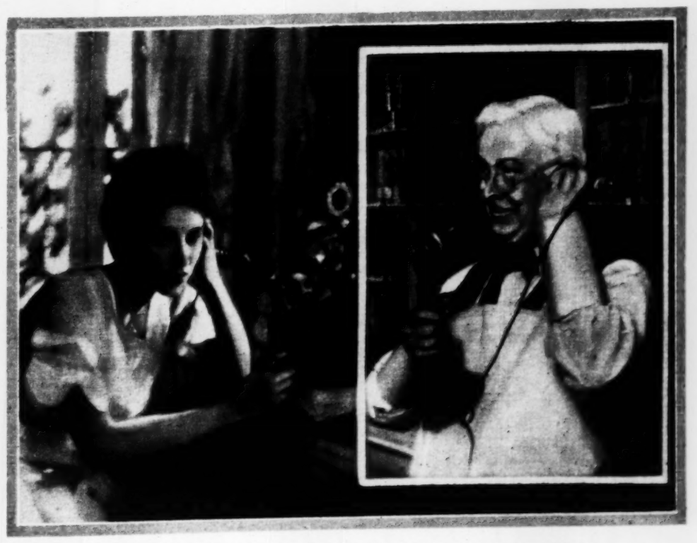
"Our home is in Shanghai, China. There, our eight-year-old Billy began having severe outbreaks of boils. The doctor's treatment there gave relief for a short time only. Then came a stay in America where we began a course of Fleischmann's Yeast, sandwiching the daily cake between layers of sugar cookies. Then did Fleischmann's prove itself, for the boils disappeared and after two years have never returned."

(Mrs. Julia W. Stafford of Shanghai, China)

"I had four children to provide for. My work was laborious and one year's untiring efforts found me very much run down. It was difficult for me to keep on my feet for more than an hour at a time. I was more than willing to do my utmost to provide for my loved ones, but my health interfered.

"I saw an advertisement about Fleischmann's Yeast. Eagerly, enthusiastically, I tried it. I religiously continued the treatment and soon began to feel strong. I am now in perfect health with the bloom of youth in my face. Fleischmann's Yeast has done all this for me."

(Mrs. H. Crookhorn of New York City)



"'And my Fleischmann's Yeast cakes as usual.' For almost three years I have given this order to my grocer several times each week and will continue indefinitely. Three years ago as a young mother in a run-down condition, with boils rendering me almost helpless, I felt that the end of my endurance had been reached. In desperation I sent for Fleischmann's Yeast cakes. The boils began to dry up. I slept better—had a keener appetite, felt better and by Spring had regained my strength and vivacity. Now I eat Fleischmann's Yeast cakes to keep me feeling 'top notch'."

(A letter from Mrs. Helen M. Raup, Linthicum Heights, Maryland)

"A complete nervous breakdown with severe attacks of heart failure—the latter caused by acute indigestion—wrecked me mentally and physically. Then I began eating Fleischmann's Yeast Cakes. That was three years ago, and I am still eating them. My digestion is normal, my brain active and clear, and all those various aches and pains of a lifetime have disappeared."

(From a New Jersey mechanical engineer, Mr. Frank M. Spencer)

"Born with an appetite for fats and sweets, at 40 I was constipated and headachy. I had long since adopted the pill habit as a temporary relief from the ills and discomforts that come with constipation. I was ordered to Hot Springs for baths and rigid diet when a casual hotel acquaintance advised that I take Fleischmann's Yeast. Today constipation and headaches are gone—vanished. I enjoy my food—my eyes are clear and my color good. I have greater zest for work—play—life itself."

(Mr. E. R. Henderson, Hot Springs, Ark.)

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink)—before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation.

Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Fleischmann's Yeast for Health comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! You can order several cakes at a time, for yeast will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

Write us for further information or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 538, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

DUO-ART

REPRODUCING PIANO

THE Duo-Art is a perfect expression of the spirit of the modern woman. It is her ally and support in all her plans of entertainment—meets the demands made upon her by every different occasion—reflects her own versatility of accomplishment, smartness, ability, good taste.

Like the woman of today, the Duo-Art does many different things and does them all well. If it plays for the dance, no fashionable hotel orchestra boasts of a better pianist. If called on to accompany, it responds with the surety and talent of the most gifted professionals. If guests know their Beethoven, their Chopin, their Liszt, the Duo-Art summons the master artists of the world to render their superb interpretations.

Facile, distinguished, strictly de rigueur the Duo-Art is in the homes of hostesses throughout the music loving world.

A continual monthly increment of the Duo-Art repertoire. Practically every vocal and instrumental number in popular demand can be instantly played by the Duo-Art.

Duo-Art dance music is so expressive, so delightfully rhythmic that every purely mechanical effect is made another means used exclusively by its sparkling musicianship. All Duo-Art dance rolls have been recorded by the most famous professional dance pianists of the present day.

Entertaining where there is a Duo-Art takes on a new and absorbing aspect. Did your guests appreciate Beethoven played by Hofmann or Bauer or Chopin played by Paderewski or de Pachmann? Or do they prefer the gaily familiar ballads, the gleefully lighter melodies? All are theirs, and yours, to enjoy through the Duo-Art.

The Duo-Art Reproducing Piano may be obtained in Upright as well as Grand models. The following celebrated pianos are available as Duo-Arts—

All solutions must be accompanied by an identifying note, giving name and complete address (including P. O. Box, R. F. D. route and box or street and number, town, state, etc.) of the sender. No solutions will be acknowledged and none returned.

Awards will be announced in all editions of the Sunday Post-Dispatch of date two weeks after date of publication, of each Tangled Comic, together with a black and white reproduction of the correct solution.

Everybody may compete for a share of the prizes offered, excepting only employes of the Post-Dispatch and members of their families.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Your solution contains writing when you correct a word in your Tangled Comic. This makes it subject to first class or letter postage.

If you do not put the required amount of postage upon your solution, when mailing, it is very likely to be sent to the Dead Letter Office in Washington, when name of sender is not visible, or withheld by the Post Office Department until you can be notified of postage due. This delay might cause your contribution to arrive too late for consideration. Therefore, make sure you have the required amount of postage upon your entry, as the Post-Dispatch will only accept prepaid mail.

In the event of a tie for any of the prizes offered, the amount of the prize will be paid to each participant in the tie.

Only one solution may be submitted by any person for one of the weekly prizes.

The right is reserved by the Post-Dispatch to accept the decision of the Tangled Comic Editor and his art staff associates as final in the award and payment of the cash prizes offered, and the submission of solutions will be construed as acceptance of this condition by those who compete for prizes.
